Jones Dead, Again

The fellow that wrote the following, which without doubt is a canard, would make a first class newspaper reporter. It first appeared in the Virginia City Enterprise and is now going the rounds:

We yesterday received the following interesting letter, giving an account of the most desperate fight which has ever occurred on the Pacific coast, as both combatants—Charles Jones, the notorious escaped convict, and Francis F. Armistead, a man who was seeking to capture him, both lost their lives:

BISHOP CREEK, December 12, 1871.—ED. ENTERPRISE: There has been another terrible fight with one of the escaped State Prison convicts. The particulars are as follows: Francis F. Armistead, the man who was one of the foremost in the taking of Roberts, Morton and Black, found the track of Charley Jones about 50 miles from the head of Long Valley, on the San Joaquin river, and trailed him to my sheep camp where he was stopping. Armistead had some talk with Jones, telling him he wanted to hire a man to drive horses to Arizona. Jones hired to him for the trip, and thus matters rested till morning. In the morning Armistead told me what was up, and said that he expected to have h—l before he got through. While we were talking Jones went to the house and got my Henry rifle, and when he came out said: "Here, you d—d son of a b—h, I know your business. You want to take me back to Nevada. Hell, I will die first."

When he had thus declared himself, he at once drew up and fired at Armistead. Armistead instantly returned the fire, his first shot taking effect in Jones' right breast. The fight now began in dead earnest and both men being armed with Henry rifles it was fearful. There was almost a constant stream of fire, and it seemed that nearly every shot took effect. The men were about thirty steps apart. Jones kept giving way and Armistead following him up till he fell from loss of blood.

When Armistead fell Jones rushed upon him, but Armistead raised his gun again and fired, shooting Jones through the head and killing him instantly. Thus ended the most desperate fight ever witnessed in the country.

Armistead fired fifteen shots, hitting his mark twelve times; while Jones, the convict, fired eleven shots, nine taking effect upon the body of Armistead, and either of the wounds inflicted would probably have proved fatal.

Armistead lived about two hours after the fight. He was the coolest man I ever saw. He said that if he had killed Jones he was willing to die. He requested me to write of the affair, and his last words were: "Tell her I love—." When he first fell he spoke of "Aunt Sallie," and "Charley." Through the request of the dying man I ask you to publish this.

Yours truly, GEORGE SLAWSON.

P. S.—I write this from Bishop Creek, but my home is in Visalia. I am here to see Armistead's friends. G. S.

Childrens' Arms.

A distinguished Paris physician says: "I believe that during the twenty years I have practised my profession, twenty thousand children have been carried to the cemeteries, a sacrifice to the absurd custom of exposing their arms. Put the bulb of a thermometer into a baby's mouth, and the mercury rises to ninety degrees. Now carry the same to its little hand; if the arm be bare, and the evening cool, the mercury will sink to fifty degrees. Of course, all the blood that flows through these arms must fall from ten to forty degrees below the heart. Need I say when these currents of the blood flow back to the chest, the child's vitality must be more or less compromised? And need I add that we ought not to be surprised at its frequent recurring affections of the tongue, throat or stomach? I have seen more than one child with habitual cough or hoarseness, entirely relieved by simply keeping the hands and arms warm."

—Farmer—"Well, my man, and how much do you want a day?" Irish laborer—"Shillin' a day and you ate me, and eighteen pence a day and I ate myself."

—The cost of the tunnel between England and France, under the British Channel, is estimated at $45,000,000, and six years will be required for its completion.

A Remarkable North Carolina Negro.

The most remarkable character we ever recorded is a negro murderer in Nash county named Luke Johnson. Luke was first taken up for larceny some months ago, and a negro witness living in a little log cabin in the woods testified against him before the Grand Jury. He tracked this witness to his house one night, and poking his gun, loaded with old nails, through a crack, he shot him dead. He was immediately arrested and lodged in the jail of Nash county. He only stayed there one day—got out that night; was re-arrested and carried to the Warren county jail, there to be kept more secure. This is a strong jail, and is fenced around by a strong rock wall and there are fifty fierce bull-dogs kept in the jail yard.

Luke was confined in a close cell, and at last the authorities thought they had him safe. But they were mistaken. He took a rock out of the floor that weighed five hundred pounds with his own hands, and crawled under and got to the door of the jail, but here he stopped on account of the bull-dogs, and he stood there in the door and waited for the jailer to come and "put him back." The jailer came along after awhile and slapped Luke in again. But the authorities were afraid to trust him much longer, so they took him back to Nash county, and he had his trial. He was sentenced to be hung till he was dead on last Friday, the 17th inst.

This time they hand-cuffed him securely in the jail, with cuffs made to order, and also put on anklecuffs, locking them up securely, and then they had a chain that run from his handcuffs to his anklecuffs, and this chain was locked through a big iron bolt and ring through the floor. He was allowed a sitting posture in a common split-bottom chair, and with his hands reached down, chained and buckled, and took the round out of the chair, and running it in the ring, twisted it out, breaking the link in about twenty pieces. There was a wire in some way connected with this ring, and with this he picked the locks on his cuffs and got his hands and feet free. Then with a piece of the iron link he forced the locks on three doors locked on him, and also the wooden one at the entrance of the jail, and in this way made his third escape, letting out with him another negro prisoner. He thus made his escape from the gallows six days before hanging day, which was appointed to have been last Friday. Luke Johnson, we are told, is a young strapping negro man, ginger-cake color, and is about 25 years old. He was sold as a slave seven times in Richmond (Va.) before the war. He is a real mechanical genius, and during the war he made a buggy out of wood, with white-oak springs, and without a piece of iron in it. In this buggy he used to ride to church. When sentence was pronounced on him in Nash county Court-house, as the sheriff marched him out he exclaimed; "You all arn't agoing to hang me; you can't do it!" He is still loose, and swears he will never leave Nash county.—Ex.

The Escaped Convicts.

There now appears to be little doubt that the two men arrested by Sheriff Grant of Sierra county, Cal., were really none other than Chris C. Blair and William Forrest two of the convicts who escaped from the Nevada State Prison in the break of the 17th September last. The Carson Register says: E. H. Langlois, one of the Prison guards, who was sent over to identify the prisoners, was detained on the Sierra by snow, missed the stage connections, and did not arrive at Downieville until after the convicts had had their examination, been discharged and made tracks for parts unknown. Many of the escapes who have been returned insist that Tom Heffron is dead—that he was shot in the breast by Lieutenant Govenor Denver and died and was buried or concealed within two miles of the prison, on the night of the break. Mrs. Hutchison, of Bishop Creek, now in San Francisco, expresses the belief that Charley Jones was killed by Burke and Cokerell, or by the latter. The story is that Burke told a friend of his in the southern country that Cockerell's feet became so sore that he was scarcely able to travel, and that Jones proposed to him (Burke) to kill Cockerell so as to facilitate the escape of the others. Burke objected, and subsequently informed Cockerell privately of the proposition. Fearing that Jones would personally carry out this purpose (so the story goes), Cockerell shot Jones, and with the assistance of Burke concealed his body near a certain spring or marsh. Report says that friends of Jones have since visited the locality named and found the tracks of the convicts, but failed to find the body of Jones.—Gold Hill News, Dec 18.

—A fearful collision occurred near Osgood, Indiana recently, between two freight trains on the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad. The train going east was reported as running sixty miles an hour, and the result was awful. Horses, cattle, hogs, train and all, were piled together in ruins. The locomotives ran nearly through each other, both being completely ruined. A large number of hogs and several head of cattle were instantly killed. The loss by the collision, it is said, will amount to $50,000.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

Saturday,.....January 6, 1872.

The Storm.

A great amount of rain has fallen during the late storm in all parts of the State. All the railroads west of the Sierras were damaged to a considerable extent. A train on the Western Pacific loaded with passengers from San Francisco en route to attend the Inaugural ball, had a very narrow escape from total destruction, a mere accident having revealed the weakness of a bridge just before the train reached it. It was then returning to San Francisco, having previously encountered an impassable point in the road, after having crossed the creek on a temporary foot bridge the much disappointed pleasure seekers all returned home. It does not appear that the snow interupted railroading over the Sierra Nevadas. No trains were running south of San Francisco, nor would do so, until the weather settled so that the road could be repaired. No mails have reached this place via the Southern route and but one on the Northern line for a number of days.

Another Royal Visitor.

The most important embassy ever sent out by an Eastern Power will sail from Japan December 23d. The Chief is only second in rank to the Mikado. They will reach San Francisco January 18th. This is the first time that any Japanese officers of high rank have ever left that country. All parties that have preceded them are sons of Daimios—families of high respectability, but not noble.

No "Quarter"

The San Francisco Alta favors the adoption of a two dime coin instead of the twenty-five cent piece now in use. It is urged that one-fifth of a dollar would be more convenient than a quarter of a dollar in business transactions. The "bit" is unknown to the law and should be made unknown in fact. As long as the two-bit pieces or quarters are in circulation, the "bit" nuisance will continue.

Science.

A New York dispatch of December 16, said: "The official weather report says that a rain storm, accompanied probably with high wind, apparently threatens the Pacific coast." The clerk of the weather was correct. The storm came according to notice without any discount.

Elected.

Sargent was chosen United States Senator by the California Legislatur on Wednesday, December 20. Whole number of votes cast, 118—necessary for a choice. 60—of which A. A. Sargent received 72, and W. T. Wallace 46.

A Weary Passage.

A Japanese junk became disabled off the coast of Japan, and was carried by the Japan Gulf stream to one of the islands in Alaska, 2,500 miles, in nine months. Three of the crew have been brought to San Francisco; twenty-three others starved.

Cochise.

This noted chief, with other chiefs of Apache bands, has been invited to visit Washington by the Secretary of the Interior and the President, the Government agreeing to pay the expenses of the visit.

Bakersfield.

The Bakersfield Courier rejoices at the rise in the value of real estate in its vicinity; and is sanguine in regard to the bright future of Bakersfield. We think, however that it is hogging a delusive hope when it goes into ecstacies over the prospect of Bakersfield becoming the entrepot of the Owens river trade. Visalia intends to gobble up that position herself.—Visalia Delta, December 21.

--Alexis was quite overcome at the Boston committee's invitation. The Commercial Bulletin says: The Grand Duke was so much affected that he replied in his native Russian as follows: "Orii ritold bustah, yuken sormi legorf butti tullu ile bloski hifur Boston. Gityur ro manwiski anlotcer citti bomerz redi, anian olecatacazy wilbe downonye lykea neskemo ona tallakandle."

—A late Chicago paper says a man from San Francisco who had not heard of the fire arrived in town yesterday. After looking at the ruins he turned to a stranger and asked, "How long did the earthquake last, old sport?"

—Why are pen makers the most dishonorable people in the world? Because they make people steel pens and then say they do write.

ELECTION TICKETS.

The Board of Commissioners for the revision of the code propose a marked change on the present method of conducting elections. Some of the changes are entirely new and unprecedented, but in the main the change must meet the approbation of all who desire to see the purity of the ballot box maintained, or reinstated, to speak correctly. Hitherto it has been found impossible to prevent frauds in elections, nor is it likely that any perfectly infailible system ever will be devised. The plan now under consideration, though not without defects in some minor particulars, must tend largely toward the desired end. As it is a matter of general interest a brief statement of the main points will be acceptable.

Every ticket must be of paper, uniform in size, color, weight, texture and appearance. A ballot is defined as a ticket folded in such a manner that nothing written or printed thereon can be seen. Section 89 provides that no ticket must be used at any election or circulated on the day of election, unless—

1. It is written or printed on paper furnished by the Secretary of State, or upon paper in every respect like such paper [previously specified].

2. It is four inches in width and twelve in length, or within one-eighth of an inch of such size.

3. If printed, the names of the persons voted for and the office designated are printed in black ink and in long primer capitals—the name of the office in small capitals and of the person in large capitals—and both without spaces except between the different words or initials in each line.

4. If printed, the same margin is left above the printed matter as below it, and the side margins are equal in size.

5. If written, the matter is so written that no sign thereof appears when the paper is folded; and

6. It is free from every mark, character or device or thing that would enable any person to distinguish it by the back, or, when folded, from any other legal ticket or ballot.

As criticism and suggestions have been invited by the Commissioners we will say in relation to the foregoing, that the style of type is not in common use in country printing offices, and as they should have the printing of tickets for their respective localities, at least three-fourths of these offices would be put to useless expense by having to purchase a font of type of little or no value for any purpose except, perhaps, through the requirements of this law. As the size of the letter is a matter of secondary importance, we would suggest that a smaller size be substituted, say minion or brevier. One or both of these sizes are used as "body letter" for almost every paper on the coast, and if either should be adopted as the legal size for printing tickets instead of that already designated it would be decidedly preferable to country offices, if no others.

While it is undoubtedly of the first importance that all tickets used at any election should be of uniform length, it would be much better, in our opinion, to leave this matter mainly to the Governor. Acting under a general law, he could in his proclamation ordering an election, designate the length of the ticket in accordance with the requirements of the occasion. Should the present distinction in elections continue, tickets for the judicial election need not exceed one-fourth the prescribed length, while on the other hand should the recommendations of the Governor in regard to the number of our elections become a law, in case of a Presidential and general State election a twelve-inch ticket, printed in long primer especially, would hardly accommodate the necessary number of names, including all down to precinct officers. This part might safely be left to the Governor, we should think.

None of the following named acts and transactions are permissible within one hundred feet of a polling place during an election: No ticket must be given to or received by any person save the Inspector; no person must fold or unfold any ticket he intends to vote, nor in any manner exhibit its contents, nor request to see the contents of a ticket in the hands of another, as before stated, within one hundred feet of a polling place. No ballot must be used or circulated on the day of any election, having any outside distinguishing marks whatever, by which to determine the time when voted, or the person or class voting it, nor must it be folded in a manner to indicate its contents.

The object of this rule is very good but its practical enforcement will, we fear, be a matter of so much difficulty as to render it nugatory. If it can be done it will do much toward putting a stop to the common practice of selling votes by organized clubs and similar swindling operations. "If the vendor," say the Commissioners, "have one hundred feet in which to change his ballot, and no mark can be used on it, he will have no means of establishing the fact that he has voted for any given person, and when these means are taken away his occupation would be gone, for none would buy and trust to the faith of one who would sell his birthright."

Section 101 provides that no name shall be substituted for another on a ticket in any other manner than by writing it on with pen or pencil. This bars pasters and the nitrate of silver dodge.

The election Board must not receive or allow to be deposited in the ballot box any ballot if it is apparent that it is not in compliance with the provisions of this law, and any ballot found in the box that does not conform to the prescribed requirements must be rejected. All such illegal ballots must be preserved, the reasons for its rejection being endorsed upon it and signed by the Board.

Taken as a whole we think the proposed election law a great improvement on the present system, and with a few trifling alterations, we hope it may become a law.

Mr. Spencer of Santa Clara has introduced into the Assembly a bill entitled "An Act to compel children to attend school," which also aims at compulsory education, but is less stringent than Finney's bill, and will probably meet with more favor. It provides that parents and guardians having control of children between the ages of eight and fourteen years shall require them to attend school at least twelve weeks during the school year, and six weeks consecutively, unless they shall be excused by the Board of Trustees, on account of inability or attendance at some private school. Any violation of the Act is made punishable with a fine varying as the offense is repeated.

[From The Daily Union.]

In the Assembly, December 15, a concurrent resolution was adopted appointing an investigating committee on the San Francisco City Hall alleged frauds. A concurrent resolution was adopted to adjourn over the holidays, from December 21st to January 3d. A clerk was allowed the Committee on ways and Means. The House re-inserted in the Senate resolution, after debate, the provision to print the two Governors' messages in German. Bills were introduced by Wilcox to pay the State's portion of the Mariposa County Auditor's salary; by Spencer, amending the Supreme Court bailiff act; by Mott, creating the office of mail and express messenger at the Capitol; by Hayes, amending the County Judges act; and by Sensabaugh, amending the fee and salary act. A discussion on the privileges of ladies upon the floor was cut off by adjournment.

In the Senate, on the 16th, Evans' bill to increase the salary of the County Judge of San Joaquin county, after debate, was referred to the Judiciary Committee. Wand introduced a bill to secure the payment of Indian War bonds; Banvard, to pay ex-Lieutenant-Governor Holden for extra services; and Tomkins a bill appropriating $27,000 for the support of the deaf and dumb and the blind.

The Assembly passed Luttrell's Siskiyou school bill; Bockius' Santa Cruz assessment legalization bill; Pardee's Oakland road tax bill; De Haven's Chico charter bill; Gray's Municipal Court bills; and ordered engrossed Bradley's State paper repeal bill. In the Senate, on the 18th, the Judiciary Committee reported adversely to the bill increasing the salary of the Judge of San Joaquin county. Among the bills introduced was one by Mr. Finney, relative to compulsory education, and one by Mr. Oulton, proposing an amendment to the State Constitution to restrict special legislation.

In the Assembly, Gray of San Francisco, was made Chairman of the Committee on Corporations, the most important in the Assembly at this session. A bill was introduced to create the county of San Benito out of parts of Monterey; also a resolution to amend the Constitution relative to the incorporation of towns and cities, and to limit their power to tax, borrow money and create debts.

In the Senate on the 20th a bill was passed relating to road-tax in Oakland; also one concerning colleges under control of benevolent societies; one to provide a school tax for Siskiyou county, and another to incorporate the town of Chico. In the Assembly Luttrell introduced resolutions against land monopoly and in favor of securing bounties for the Humboldt volunteers of 1863. Bills were introduced on the 21st by Splivalo to repeal the Montgomery street South act; by Days, State Constitutional Convention; by Aldrich, concerning the San Francisco County Clerk's assistants; by Freeman, repealing the Equalization Board act; by Mott of Los Angeles, providing for the organization of the Legislature by State officers; by Barker, providing for public purchase of all school books; by Goodall, providing compensation for the San Francisco Board of Education; by Hays, in favor of the San Juan and Pajaro Railroad. Spencer's Supreme Court Bailiff bill, Hayes' County Judges bill and Monterey County Judge's residence bill, were passed. A. A. Sargent was elected United States Senator in Joint Convention, by a vote of 72, to 46 for Wallace.

Governor Booth issued an executive order removing Adjutant General Cazneau, and directing him to turn over the books and affairs of the office to the Assistant Adjutant General. The three Tide Land Commissioners, B. F. Washington, Redmond Gibbons and L. L. Bullock, were also removed, and their places supplied by the appointment of Lewis Cunningham and R. P. Johnson of San Francisco, and C. M. Stratton of Trinity.

In the Senate Pendegast introduced a bill to provide for letting the State Printing to the lowest responsible bidder. A bill was passed to authorize the levy of an additional tax in Mariposa for county purposes; also, authorizing the executors of John C. Keenan, deceased, to mortgage certain property. A resolution was adopted requesting the California Congressmen to use their influence for the repeal of a land grant to the Folsom and Placerville Railroad.

In the Assembly, two members were added to the Committee on Education, but the proposition to add two members also to the Committee on Public Buildings was opposed and defeated. The Immigrant Union petitioned for an appropriation of $60,000. Bills were introduced by Rice, concerning notaries in Solano; by Reed, on trade-marks; by Hopper, concerning certain military companies of the State. The House refused to recede from its resolution to print the Governor's message and inaugural in German.

On the 21st the Legislature adjourded for the holiday recess

EASTERN NEWS.

In the United States House of Representatives the apportionment bill was passed. It provides that the House shall be composed of 283 members, and that no new State shall be admitted till it has a population sufficient to entitle it to one Representative, which is about 135,000. New York will be allowed 32; Pennsylvania, 26; Ohio, 20; Illinois, 19; California, 4; Nevada, 1, and Oregon 1 member.

The excitement over these matters in New York runs high. Tweed was committed to prison without bail, but this was overruled by Judge Barnard, and he was subsequently admitted to bail in the sum of $5,000.

Hard Times on the Plains.

A dispatch from Omaha to the St. Louis Democrat, dated December 5, gives this account of trouble on the plains and the snow deposit:

On Sunday morning three engines, drawing a passenger train, eight miles west of Wyoming station, ran off the track. The engines were badly smashed up, but no person was injured. The snow is reported as still drifting. A freight train going west struck a snow drift to-day, west of Sherman and piled twenty-eight freight cars together in ruins. Several other trains are reported off the track or disabled west of Cheyenne. It is said there are nine engines off the track between here and Cheyenne, forced off by snow-drifts, and the western end of the road is in worse condition. The road is for the present practically blocked. It has been discovered that several of the cast-iron cylinders sustaining the new high bridge across the Missouri river at this place have been badly cracked by the frost, between the high and low water marks.

A Lawrence, Kansas, date of December 2, gives the following:

A correspondent of The Journal says the recent snow storm was very severe on the plains of Western Kansas. A large number of Texas cattle were frozen and the herds dispersed. Several herders were also frozen to death. Five bodies were brought into Hayes City frozen stiff, supposed to have been buffalo hunters, as the bodies of a large number of buffaloes were found near them which had perished in the storm. There is great anxiety on account of other parties of buffalo hunters who were out and have not been heard of since the storm. Beibes, of Ellsworth, lost fifty-one horses and twenty-three cattle. A Helena (Montana) dispatch of the same date says: A Fort Shaw special to-day says: Two companies of the Seventh Infantry, Major Freeman commanding, returning from Fort Browning, were caught in yesterday's fearful storm, and are now camped twelve miles from here with a number of men badly frozen.

Later.—Ten frozen men have been brought into the hospital. The worst cases still out are being brought in as fast as possible. They are frozen principally about the feet, and will lose their toes and some of the men their feet. The thermometer this morning was thirty degrees below zero.

In the evening the third brother made his appearance, when the German dropped his razor in astonishment and exclaimed:

"Vell mine Gott! dat man hash de fashest beard I never saw; I shaves him dis mornin', shaves him at dinners times, and he gomes back now mit his beard so long as it never vast!"

Rough Staging.

We take the following extract from a private letter dated Gilroy, December 21, written by a friend who left this place for San Francisco on the Visalia stage a few days after the late storm set in: You will see by this that I have been out nine days from Independence. I arrived here yesterday at 1 P. M. Can not say how long I will have to remain here, as there has been such a vast amount of rain in the last three days and nights that the whole country is flooded. A great deal of the railroad between here and San Francisco is washed away, and so long as it continues to rain they say it will be impossible to repair it. It commenced raining the morning we left Visalia, and has never ceased from that time to the present. We got along tolerably well until we arrived at the San Joaquin river. There we came to the 'dobe mud. There was no bottom to it in many places, and frequently the stock would be all in a pile; all down in the mud at once. We had quite a time crossing the Pacheco range, but a great deal worse one crossing the Pacheco creek. We reached the first crossing at 15 minutes before 7, A. M., and camped there until 3 in the afternoon, during which time the water fell about two feet. We then ventured to try the crossing, and after securing our baggage and divesting ourselves of all extra clothing we started in and made it safely, although it swam the team about three rods. In a mile further got to Bell's station, changed stock and started on with six horses; in half a mile crossed the creek again without difficulty, though the mail and baggage got wet. Two miles more brought us to the lower and last crossing. The driver prospected the banks for some distance for a more favorable spot than the regular ford where the water was confined to a single narrow channel. Seeing no better prospect he finally got up courage to try it; in thirty feet after starting in the coach and horses were all afloat, and away we went down the stream full two hundred yards, the coach all under water except about a foot of the top. Finally, the leaders struck a bar close to the opposite shore, and as they done so and commenced pulling, the swing horses fell, they having been for some time previously foul in the lead-bars, but were soon dragged to where the water was not deep enough to drown them. A wetter set of men you never saw, but well pleased you may be sure that we were safe across. Our party consisted of Mr. Belshaw, of Cerro Gordo, Mr. Plummer, of or near Lone Pine, and myself. When within two and a half miles of Gilroy found a bridge gone and had to stop for the night. Subsequently by means of boat and wagon got to this place, where we shall have to remain for several days.

Races.

Sporting men and owners of fast stock in this and Mono counties, will take notice of the races, which are announced to to take place at the Lone Pine Track on the 22d and 23d instants, proximo. There is considerable interest being excited, and doubtless the races will attract numbers of fast stock.

Climatic.

The magnificent climate of this valley is simply superb, with just rain enough and no more. The special favors accorded us by the clerk of the weather are most noticeable from the contrast with other regions, since we are never flooded or dried up.

Benton Drug Store.

Our northern readers will note the advertisement of Mr. H. Piessnecker druggist, at Partzwick, Mono county, The gentleman is a pharmacist of great experience, and has a fine stock of pure drugs and medicines. Orders will be promptly filled and forwarded.

Goes Below.

Mr. F. Morris, assayer and late foreman of the Eclipse Mill, having resigned his position, starts in a few days for San Francisco. His family goes with him. We are sorry to see such men as Mr. Morris leave the country.

Convalescent.

We last week reported John Wallace as being sick beyond recovery. As ill to bring the reputation of this journal as a reliable news medium into disrepute he has concluded to get well. Under the care of Dr. C. B. White he is now doing finely.

Shut Down.

The owners and employees of the Black Rock saw mill are taking a rest, the snow rendering it impossible to get down logs from the mountains. The imprecedented demand for lumber still continues.

Bonds Filed.

Henry M. Isaacs, County Treasurer elect, has filed his official bonds of $10,000. I. Harris, A. N. Bell and B. L. Brown being sureties. I. Harris for $5,000, the other two parties each $2,500.

Shut Down.

The Swansea works are closed down for a short time, on account of scarcity of wood. It is being hauled as fast as possible, and the furnace will soon start up again.

Boots.

The public will find matter of interest in Fred. Fisher's advertisement, giving his reduced prices for boots. He is a good workman and doing a rushing business.

Snow Slide.

It is reported that during the late heavy rains an extensive snow slide occurred on the Green Horn Mountain, blocking the road and detaining travel and the stages.

Dangerous.

Several galliant rampant loviers are filling the air at Bishop Creek, or therabouts, with grim mutterings of war, shot guns and things. Go smooth, boys. Don't.

Lively.

May Merritt, the noted "Fenian," of Los Angeles celebrity, has been making things lively in Lone Pine, especially in the Justices' Court.

Qualified.

John A. Hannah, the County Judge elect, has qualified for the office, and is now performing the duties.

Nice.

Our lofty neighbors at Aurora must be having a high old time of it, with the snow four feet deep. "Coasting" is probably the favorite amusement yet.

For Sale.

O. Glover offers his place and fixtures, at Big Pine, for sale at a sacrifice. See notice.

A New Year's Communication.

EDITORS INDEPENDENT: On Monday, "New Year's Day," just as 1871 drifted into the "fathomless abyss of time," it was my good fortune to be invited to a "Bachelors' Dinner," given by P. W. Bennett Esq., and his amiable wife, to several such generally unfortunate individuals as myself, who are sailing through this "Sea of Life," solitary and alone. Of course, the proceedings or entertainments in a private family ought to be held sacred, and the least word breathed outside its circle will always be in questionable taste. Circumstances in this case, however, will mitigate, if not wholly justify, in bringing to light the kindness, hospitality and joviality of the light-hearted host and hostess, beneath whose roof and at whose hospitable table a few brief hours—brief through their very pleasantness—I with others enjoyed. The day, as you Messrs. Editors (especially your Junior) know, was simply delightful. The sun, in the very geniality of Spring, poured a flood of light and warmth over our valley, illuminating in sparkling brilliancy the snow-covered Sierras in all their grotesque stateliness from the low, wavy foothill to high-toned

MOUNT WHITNEY.

But to become confidential, Messrs. C. & P. At about 3 P. M., a keen observer might have seen a crowd of awkward looking individuals wending their way to the lower end of the town—marching in martial steadiness (although it was New Year's) to the residence of our worthy District Attorney. Had that keen observer been possessed of the wonderful faculties of Asmodeus—a few minutes later the outer walls of the dwelling might have been imaginatively removed and he would have beheld,

IN A SNUG ROOM,

Pleasantly warmed by a burning log on the hearth, ten or twelve old bachelors dipping their noses into glasses containing exquisitely flavored and beautifully frosted "egg nogg." Later—a few moments only—and the gracious lady of the house announces

"DINNER!"

Miserable bachelors (happy for the time being, however) arm themselves in link (or link themselves in arm—please put it in the most grammatical way, Messrs. Editors), and march to the dining room, on the table of which is displayed a

FESTIVE SCENE

Of the good things of life, seldom witnessed in this isolated place—presumedly far away from the seat of civilization. Turkey, chicken and chicken pie, flanked by a regiment of other substantials, the beauty of which was still further enhanced by dishes delicate pastry, fruits, sparkling wines, and porter: and to the temperately inclined (of which, by-the-bye, very few were there) fragrant coffee and tea—are all there in their best dress, lusciousness and flavor. Turkeys and chickens suffer severely, wines and porter disappear with wonderful rapidity, as also vanishes with the liquids the dignified silence of the majority. Soon, presto! Our venerable friend, J. B. R——gains courage enough (not that he is generally lacking in that article) to make a toast, which, being effective, gains applause. Wit, like laughter, is catching, it flashes from one brain to another, and soon the august, quiet M—— and eloquent P—— and good-natured —— and —— and —— and —— said in in earnest, the result being a perfect torrent of brilliant speeches, conundrums and anecdote—all of which (seemingly to ourselves) being to the point, creates genteelly boisterous and prolonged laughter.

Dinner, speeches and wit (the latter conceited, of course) over, a return to the snug room where the "New Year's log" burns brightly and cheerfully, rendered more so when seen through several glasses of egg-nogg, brewed by our handsome co-bachelor acquaintance, H. C——

Before leaving this scene of genuine New Year's hospitality every one had a pleasant word for host and host, save and except the writer, whose native bashfulness "tied his tongue," but who, having determined to scribble his thankfulness for those pleasant moments, does—wishing Mr. and Mrs. Bennett many a happy New Year—sign himself H. M. I.

The Murder of Fred. W. Loring.

[From The Boston Advertiser.]

The following is an extract from a private letter just received in Cambridge from a member of Lieutenant Wheeler's party, dated camp Whipple near Prescott, November 7th. It gives some new and, we believe, trustworthy particulars of the murder of Fred. W. Loring and his companions:

Loring, Hammill and Salmon, of Lieutenant Wheeler's party, were on the stage to go home. Besides these the passengers were one Kruger, a German; one Adams, a jeweler of Prescott, and "Moll Shepard," a disreputable character. The stage was an open box wagon, topped with canvas, with sides to let down; back being generally down is somewhat protected from sight at least, while the front is open to full view.

An escort went with them, as usual, through the dangerous country, i. e., as far as Wickenburg. Six miles beyond this place they were suddenly fired into. I do not know how much damage was then done except that the driver's arm was broken. Still he drove on some distance, till shot through the head, when the unguided horses turned back toward home, and into danger. Kruger and "Moll" were on the back seat, not so easily seen, and escaped with wounds. Both emptied their pistols and managed to jump out before the horses turned back, and ran on ahead. In a mile or two they met the "buckboard" going the other way. The driver took them on, and, fearful of being followed, turned back. Finally he left them and the mail in the bushes, took a horse, and by a trail reached the Vulture Mill, near Wickenburg, got assistance and returned to the scene of the murder. Two of the victims were found to be shot in the eye, two in the forehead, and one in the back of the head. An old man with a black beard, who had fought hard, was missing, and may have escaped. This man must have been Hammill.

Heavy rifle cartridges were found, and their use probable from the great number of shots fired—there being twenty through the stage. The mail had been opened, and such letters as contained money examined, and the baggage searched for money. No horses, nor harness, nor guns, nor bright blankets, nor any such things as Indians covet, were taken. There is no doubt about it; they were not Indians, nor Mexicans, as the shooting was too good; white men did it—"road agents," as they are technically termed here. They generally simply rob. It was reported that a man was asked some time ago at Wickenburg to rob the stage that brought "Moll Shepard" down, as she would have much money. Kruger also had much money with him, as he was a Government agent of some kind. The murderers did not find the greater part of the latter's money and seem to have left precipitately.

—In the East there are not less than two hundred thousand enterprising but impecunious young gentlemen who can not pay their board and washing bills because their "mothers were burned out in Chicago."

SQUIBLETS.

—An universal want—Want of money.

—The best "church-service"—matrimony.

—Profitable mining—mining one's own business.

—Maids of honor—those who do not jilt suitors.

—At a wedding ceremony in Sioux City, Iowa, the choir sang "The Ham Fat Man."

—"I pride myself," says Naggs, "on playin' the fiddle like Paganinny, or any other ninny."

—Thirsty Chicagoans when about to imbibe, say "Specify your funeral promoter."

—Why are pen makers the most dishonorable people in the world? Because they make people steel pens and then say they do write.

—A Louisiana engineer was acquitted of gross in running over a man, because "the grass on the track grew so high as to obscure the person."

—An irate subscriber waltzed into the sanctum sanctorum of a newspaper the other day and inquired: "Does Josh Billings read the proof on this paper?"

—Kerosene applied with a cloth to stoves will keep them from rusting during the summer. It is also an excellent material to apply to all iron utensils used about a farm.

—"What makes your cows so cross?" said an old lady to the milkman the other day. "Cross, ma'am? They are the gentlest things in the world." "Well, the milk is always sour," the matron replied, sharply.

—A Michigan doctor, who was arrested because his patient died, has been acquitted on the ground that he did the best he could, giving all the medicines he knew the names of.

—In the East there are not less than two hundred thousand enterprising but impecunious young gentlemen who can not pay their board and washing bills because their "mothers were burned out in Chicago."

—A man in Ohio who has buried three wives has had their photographs put in a group, with a place left in the centre for his own picture. Underneath is the inscription: "The Lord will provide."

—"Dr. Smoothman is quite a ladies' doctor," observed Mrs. Faintaway. "So nice!" said one lady, "So chatty," said another. "Never prescribes nasty things!" said a third. "Oh, he's a duck!" cried an interesting young matron. "You mean a quack," growled her husband who had just seen the doctor's bill for one year's attendance.

—Upon the trial of a suit for divorce one of the witnesses was asked whether he had spoken to any of the jury since the trial commenced.

"Yes, sir. I spoke to Mr.——," pointing to a juryman with a face as red as a blood beet.

"What did you say to him?"

Witness appeared reluctant to tell. The attorney insisted upon an answer. "Well," said the witness, "I told him that he had a pretty face to sit on a jury to decide whether a man was an habitual drunkard or not."

TEN THOUSAND MILES AWAY.

Sing, O, for a brave and gallant bark,
And a stiff and rattling breeze,
A bully crew and captain, too,
To carry me o'er the seas;
To carry me o'er the sea, my boys,
To my true love so gay-ay-ay,
Who went on a trip in a Government ship,
Ten thousand miles away!

CHORUS—Blow ye winds, hi oh!
A-roaming I will go!
I'll stay no more on Hingland's shore,
So let the music play.
I'll start by the morning train,
To cross the raging main,
For I'm on the road to my own true love,
Ten thousand miles away!

My true love she was 'andsome
My true love, he was 'andsome you
Her eyes were blue as the violet's hue,
And silvery was her tongue;
And silvery was her tongue, my boys,
And while I sing this lay-ay-ay,
She's a-doing of the grand in a far off land,
Ten thousand miles away! CHORUS.

Dark and dismal was the day
When last I saw my Meg;
She'd a Government band around each hand,
And another one round her leg;
And another one round her leg, my boys,
As the big ship left the bay-ay-ay,
Adieu, said she, remember me,
Ten thousand miles away! CHORUS.

A THRILLING STORY.

Ten Years with the Savages of the Far West.

[From The New York Times.]

Captain John Hobbs, a famous ranger and Indian fighter of Sonora and Northern Mexico, is the guest of a well known publisher in this city. He arrived in the metropolis a few days ago direct from Fort Sedgwick. He has probably suffered greater hardships from and has gained a greater knowledge of the plain and frontier Indians than any white man living in this country. His thrilling adventures and hand-to-hand conflicts with the Apaches during the past quarter of a century and captivity of ten years among the Comanches, would afford splendid material for a first-class romance. The exploits of this individual utterly overshadow the deeds of the renowned Kit Carson, with whom he is intimately acquainted, and completely surpass the doings of "Buffalo Bill" and "California Joe," whose names in connection with Indian fighting have been before the public in various periodicals during the past seven years.

Last evening a Times' representative enjoyed an hour's conversation with the grim old veteran, and learned from his own lips some particulars of an eventful career. The Captain was found at the office of a stenographer, who was busily employed in taking notes to be used in connection with the history of his forthcoming life. He invited the reporter to be seated, and handed him a pipe of unique pattern, with a stem about four feet in length, which he first lighted and indulged in a few whiffs as a starter. "That pipe," said he, "I captured from Algalaumme, a Montezuma chief, thirteen years ago, and I would not part with it for a thousand dollars." While smoking, the reporter surveyed the borderman. He is fully six feet in hight, squarely built, is as straight as an arrow, has small, black, piercing eyes, long and coarse hair, as black as a coal, a swarthy countenance covered with scars, and a complexion in general that has been so tanned by exposure to the sun and wind that it strongly resembles that of an Indian. He wore a border suit of buck-skin, fantastically arranged, but his person was devoid of jewelry, which is such a characteristic weakness of frontier men. On a bureau at the right rested a huge white sombrero, while in one corner of the room, near the stenographer's desk, were scalps and tomahawks, and other relics of the forest, and of sanguinary conflicts with the savages. As he had been a captive such a great length of time among the Indians, it seemed a matter of surprise to the reporter that he could converse so fluently in his mother tongue. He explained this by stating that he had as a companion in captivity an American, and had frequent intercourse with trappers and herdsmen whom he had assisted in capturing. By this mode he had managed to retain his English perfectly. His knowledge of dates was also surprising when it is taken into consideration that he was carried off by the Comanches when but twenty years of age, and previous to that event had but little schooling.

He was born in a small frontier village on the Big Blue river, in the northern portion of Jackson county, in the State of Missouri, in the year 1829, but does not remember the month. When a mere lad he gained a great reputation among the hardy backwoodsmen and trappers of that section as a wonderful shot, as he had been known to bring down a deer at four hundred yards. At eighteen he was a successful trapper, and knew every elk path and otter pond for miles through the wilderness. His shrewdness attracted the attention of Bent, the great St. Louis fur trader, who secured his services when nineteen. It is to this incident that his subsequent misfortunes and ten years captivity and sufferings among the Comanches may be attributed. Shortly after entering the service of the fur company, as the Captain related, he and a companion, Jean Batties, a French Canadian, were sent to the Cimerone Springs, near the headwaters of the Arkansas river. At that date the whole country was almost a howling wilderness, with but a few settlers scattered here and there, and was swarming with hostile Apaches, Pawnees, and the scourge of northern Mexico, the bloodthirsty Comanches. On the 17th of September, 1847, as their luck had been extremely bad, Batties proposed to Hobbs to start further south, where game was supposed to be in abundance; the latter acquiesced. During the evening of the first day's trip Hobbs trailed a buffalo. His capture is given in his own vernacular. "Putting spurs to my mare," aid the Captain, "I soon overhauled the varmint, which proved to be a cow, which I killed. Batties soon joined me, and after we cut off the meat we wanted we built a fire and bunked for the night. The following morning, while preparing our grub, a war party of Comanche braves, with eight or ten Pawnee scalps and a drove of stolen ponies, appeared on the scene. The leader of the band advanced toward me with outstretched hands, and growled out, 'How!' I answered him in a friendly way, still keeping an eye on my shooting irons. All of a sudden one of the most demoniac yells that ever greeted mortal's ears was given, and before we could move the whole pack of hellhounds were upon us two poor devils. They killed poor Batties before my eyes, scalped him, and took off his moccasins, secured his rifle and ammunition and then made for me. But the chief somehow took a fancy to me and drawed off the pack after they had almost finished me and had the knife to my scalp. Look here!" So saying the Captain parted the thick black hair on the side of his head and a long white scar was revealed. "That's the commencin' place," he resumed, "and in two minutes time longer I expect they would have raised my top-knot for certain. Do you see this?" Here he pointed to a deep scar just above his moustache, to the right of his nose. "That's another mark they gave me with a tomahawk on that occasion. Well, to make a long story short, they carried me with them up to the mountains. They danced around me, sung and played on the tomtoms nearly all night, and to wind up they cut off my hair and commenced to cut up my face, or what you might call it, to tattoo me. I objected so strongly that they stopped it, but they managed to put a brass ring through my nose. This I wore during my ten years captivity. I was made a warrior, and went out with them on all their war and marauding expeditions across the Mexican border, and several times came near losing my life while fighting the Apaches and Pawnees. All told, my body bears seventeen bullet and arrow wounds." Removing his boots, the Captain exhibited to the reporter five buckshot "indentures" in his right leg, and three or four gunshot and arrow wounds in his left limb. "I remained with the redskins two years before I was made a warrior. About six months after this event, while hunting alone in the mountains of Lower Sonora, I heard the breaking of a twig not far from where I was standing. I cocked my rifle, thinking it might be a cinnamon bear. I did not hear the sound again, but instead saw the cause of it, in the shape of a big Pawnee warrior who stood partly concealed in a clump of chapparal about two hundred yards distant. We looked at each other fully five minutes without drawing a bead. Suddenly he raised his gun and fired at me without taking aim. I jumped to the right and escaped, still keeping an eye on the Pawnee; he dodged around, but I soon let him have it square in the head and scalped him. When nearing the lodges I got two ash poles and stuck the ends of each into the ears of the scalp—it is the style of the Comanches to take ears and all—and marched into camp. Five minutes later 700 warriors, headed by Old Wolf, whom the United States soldiers and Mexicans well know to their sorrow, surrounded me, and such shaking of hands and hugging I never experienced before. The chief next morning gave me his third daughter as a bride. By our marriage I have seven children." "Where are they now," queried the reporter. "Oh, they are running wild on the plains," replied the Captain, laughingly. He said that in the Fall of 1857, after numerous fights with the soldiers, during which he tried to escape (rather dubious), the Comanches concluded to sell him and another white prisoner named Kirker. Thus, after ten years of captivity, he was taken to Fort Bent, and was sold to Colonel Sumner, of the Sixth Cavalry. The Captain was ransomed for six yards of red flannel, one pound of tobacco and a string of beads. Kirker was sold for eight yards of curtain calico and a pound of common Missouri tobacco. After being ransomed, the Captain sought the home of his youth, but all his relatives had removed, and, heartbroken, he retraced his steps and made his way into Mexico, where he joined Placida la Vega in his war against the church party. At the conclusion he made his way to Chihuahua, and was employed by Governor Anglestres to fight the Apaches at the rate of $50 per scalp. With thirty Mexicans, during six months, he raised ninety scalps. Becoming disgusted with the Mexicans, he again cast his fortunes with Old Wolf and the Comanches. He continued fighting with them two or three years against other tribes, and when the French invaded Mexico he repaired to Chihuahua and was made lieutenant of artillery in the Liberal army by Benito Juarez, and participated in the battles of Los Membres, Mazatlan, Zapic, Santiago, Esquantito, Sierra Aleger, and various others down to Queretaro, when Maximilian surrendered. At the close of the war he again visited his Indian home, and growing tired of that species of existence, determined to live in the future among civilized people. His faith, however, in humanity has been terribly shaken since he has been in Gotham, as he lost $150 in greenbacks at a place of public amusement, a few evenings since, and he has changed his mind considerably. He speaks fluently the dialects of seven different tribes—Castilian and half Montezuma, the language of Northern and New Mexico and Sonora. He is probably the only white man that can aid the historian in translating them.

Columbus and Silver Peak—A New Route.

A correspondent of The San Francisco Bulletin, who has been paying south western Nevada a visit, among other interesting observations on the country generally, closes with the following:

In the districts about Columbus little or nothing is at present being done. At Silver Peak everything has been at a stand still for a year or more past; not however, from any fault of the mines, this inactive policy having been adopted with a view to effecting certain much needed financial and business reforms. In the Spring work will be resumed there on a large scale, and with the prospect of leading to better results than have heretofore attended operations. In the Sida, Palmetto and Gold Mountain districts, lying to the south of Silver Peak, scarcely anything has been done the past Summer; while Montezuma, Volcano and Excelsior districts further north are now completely deserted. There are valuable mines of the precious metals, with immense deposits of copper, lead, sulphur, etc., in all these districts; but they can only be turned to profitable account through the connection of these localities with commercial centers by means of railroads.

What is needed to start up this section of country and insure a more speedy utilization of its resources, both metalic and mineral, is cheapened transportation between Wadsworth and Columbus. These places are separated by a distance of one hundred and fifty miles, following the present wagon road, which, in order to avoid a stretch of excessively heavy sand near Walker Lake, makes a long detour to the east, passing over two ranges of mountains and much sandy country. It is now proposed to construct a wagon road via Walker Lake, making that water a part of the route, through the use of a steam scow for ferriage across it. This lake is thirty miles long, and as large freight teams average but ten miles per day on these deserts, a saving of three days each way would be effected in crossing it by steam, making a total gain, including four days saved through a reduced distance, of ten days in going from Wadsworth to Columbus and back. This road will cross Carson river near Fort Churchill and Walker river at Mason valley, and proceeding thence by way of the Lake and Rhodes' Marsh would follow almost a straight line from Wadsworth to Columbus. It would be not only shorter, but almost level and free from sand, and, it is estimated, would not cost over twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars, including bridges, of which there would be two, and the steam scow on the Lake.

This wagon road, if built, would, it is believed, merely serve as the pioneer of a railroad, which the shipments of the borates from the vast salines of the Columbus and Fish Lake Valleys will soon make a necessity. Both projects are now being considered by the Nevada Consolidated Borax Company, who own the principal deposits of these salts in that region of country, their claim embracing several thousand acres of land heavily charged with the borates of lime and soda, and who, being possessed of ample means propose going into the business of refining this article on an extensive scale. They will build this wagon road themselves, seeing in it a good investment, apart from the indirect benefits to accrue from the transit of their own freights over it. Recently their Secretary and managing agent, J. L. Sanford, of San Francisco, has made a careful examination of the route with estimated cost of the proposed improvements; all of which will shortly be reported to the company, who, should they then determine on building a railroad, will, as soon as preliminaries can be perfected, proceed to invite capital to aid in securing for it an early construction.

A Model Prescription.

A gentleman in Alabama, in exerting himself one day, felt a sudden pain, and fearing his internal machinery had been thrown out of order, sent for a negro of his plantation, who made some pretensions to medical skill, to prescribe for him. The negro, having investigated the case, prepared and administered a dose to his patient with the utmost confidence of a cure. No relief being experienced, however, the gentleman sent for a physician, who, on arriving, inquired of the negro what medicine he had given his master. Bob promptly responded:

"Resin and alum, sar."

"What did you give them for?" continued the doctor.

"Why," replied Bob, "de alum to draw de parts together, and the resin to soder um."

The patient eventually recovered.

Approaching Money Stringency.

[From The Sacramento Union, Dec. 27.]

By the terms of the treaty between Germany and France, the latter nation is bound to pay the former $130,000,000 in gold between the 15th of January and the 30th of April in the year 1872. This money is to be paid in eight equal instalments, every two weeks, of $16,250,000 each. The Bank of France has measurably got rid of the pressure these rapid and heavy payments would cause, from the circumstance that the French Minister of Finance holds large bills on London which have to be cashed in gold by the Bank of England. It is estimated by the New York and London papers that by far the greater part of this $130,000,000 will have to be drawn from the vaults of the Bank of England. When John Bull's purse is touched he grumbles and blusters, and when this state of affairs was first made public, and that England will have to cash the greater part of the German indemnity, some of the London papers talked of refusing to pay in gold and compelling the Germans to take paper. But John is at bottom an honest old fellow, and The Times is his mouthpiece. The financial editor of that paper in a late number very plainly warns the London merchants and dealers in stocks that the bank will have to pay all the French bills in gold, and that they must shape their business with a view to this disagreeable fact, which means high rates of discount at the bank, a great depreciation in all stocks and tightness in the money market. The New York Times thinks this stringency in England will necessarily affect the United States, and whatever Congress may do to contract our paper circulation we can not escape a share of the trouble that a money panic in England will cause. "If," says The Times, "gold is demanded of us for European use, gold to the extent of our resources will have to go forward;" and that a considerable change will take place in the value of many of our securities, it thinks is certain. It adds: "Really solid enterprises will probably hold their own; but it can hardly be doubted that the 'watered' railways and non-dividend paying corporations of the 'future' will have to go to the wall." Much has been expected in Utah, Nevada and California from London investments in mines. These expectations may be measurably blasted when the Bank of England shall have transferred from eighty to one hundred million dollars in gold from its vaults to the German exchequer, and the day is not four months distant when that will have to be done.

Another Bridge Project.

Some capitalists of San Francisco lately addressed a letter to the President of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, proposing a bridge by the Ravenswood route, the track to intersect the Western Pacific at Niles', and to come into the city along the bay shore from Ravenswood, terminating in Mission Bay. They think the city would vote a subsidy of $3,000,000, in bonds, to the railroad company, if the latter would build the bridge reclaim the Mission Bay lands, and build a depot there within thirty months. Gov. Stanford intimates the willingness of the company to agree to these terms and build the bridge as required, if legislation is procured relieving the company of the necessity of conforming to an arbitrary plan of blocks and streets in the improvement of its Mission Bay lands.

A Notable Death.

John C. Breckenridge died at his home in Danville, Kentucky, December 27. General Breckenridge was born January 16, 1821, and was therefore but 51 years of age. As Vice President of the United States, during Buchanan's administration, and a man of fine address and talents, he occupied a prominent place in the history of our country. His subsequent disaffection to his flag and acts as a Confederate soldier forever obliterated his bright prospects for political exaltation, which otherwise he might have attained, and he has died in comparative obscurity.

Below Gilroy.

The condition of the newly opened portion of the road between Gilroy and Watsonville may be judged from the following conversation overheard by a reporter at a way station, the name of which, oh! no, we will not mention:

Contemplated Passenger (approaching the ticket window)—Give me a ticket for Watsonville.

Urbane Ticket Seller—Don't issue tickets for Watsonville.

C. P.—Why?

U. T. S.—Road gone.

C. P.—How far can I go?

U. T. S.—Gilroy.

C. P.—How can get to Watsonville?

U. T. S.—Old line.

C. P.—What line?

U. T. S.—Walker's.

The contemplated passenger, like the man in the Bible, was seen to turn and go away in a rage.

The mails for San Jose will continue to go by way of San Leandro until next Tuesday.—S. F. Chronicle.

REPEAL OF THE LITIGANT LAW.

The repeal of the litigant law may be considered an accomplished fact, as the bill so ordering it has passed the lower House without a dissenting voice, and there is no reason to expect it to fare much better in the Senate. From its inception the litigant act has been condemned as a purely partisan measure, gotten up to bolster party papers that otherwise must go to the wall. As all the papers, even of those that favored the law, and of the then dominant party, could not share in its supposed benefits, there were many of both parties to condemn it without stint, and this fact accounts for the unanimous vote against it. Its fate, considering it as a mere partisan measure, is a just one, and as such, no one who desires to see laws for the people kept above party abuse need regret it. Notwithstanding the fact that THE INDEPENDENT was appointed as a "litigant" paper, its proprietors have always been inclined to view the law with disfavor, and would at no time have interposed any objection to its repeal, so far as the interests of the paper itself might be affected. The existence or non-existence of such a law can make no difference to this paper or any other similarly situated—at least its repeal can be no disadvantage, therefore our views in regard to the law may be considered as unbiased. Notwithstanding former opinions, a fair and impartial review of the workings of the law will show that it possesses real merits—that it is in reality what its title purports—"an act to protect litigants." Under that law the State is made a party in a compact and thus obtains a right to specify and fix rates of printing, which right no longer exists when the compact is nullified by the repeal of the law creating it. While the same kind and amount of printing remains to be done the State has no right to fix rates therefor any more than for subscriptions and ordinary advertisements or job work, so that the only restriction upon charges that publishers may impose upon litigants depends almost altogether upon their sense of right and justice—a sense liable to variations. Where but one paper exists in a county, legal advertisers have no choice but to submit to whatever charges publishers may see fit to impose, and they are just as liable to like imposition where there may be a number of papers, as in San Francisco, through collusion between the publisher of some irresponsible sheet and venal officers, who may select their medium of publication in accordance with the bonus received. The litigant, the party that has to foot the bills, has but little to say in the matter. Important legal notices may be, as they often have been, smuggled through a newspaper—and not an obscure one either—that are not held in bonds to give such notices due and proper publication, in such a manner as to escape attention from parties vitally interested, and still retain its legal force, and thus a swindle and a fraud may be perpetrated. Applications for divorces and other similar notices have been run through a legal publication by unscrupulous publishers, who run them without a distinctive head and apparently as part of another class of advertisements. Besides the advantage, or propriety rather, of having a regular medium for the publication of legal notices so that all may know where they may be found, there are other substantial reasons that may be adduced in support of this law that is no longer a law, but with one more remark we pass it. The rates allowed by this act are less than was generally charged in this State previous to its adoption, and are fully one half less than is now charged for like advertising in our neighboring State of Nevada.

Legislation for Inyo.

The only bill as yet before the Legislature special to this county is one introduced by Senator Wing to empower our Board of Supervisors to sell or redeed certain real estate. We have not seen a copy of the bill, but as we understand it its intent is proper and right. It will be understood from the following: Thomas Edwards, former owner of the town site of Independence, deeded to the county certain lots for the public buildings. The location did not prove satisfactory and he then deeded two others in another part of the town plat, but they were also rejected, and a third deed made out for the lots upon which the Court House now stands. A subsequent Legislature authorized the Supervisors to deed back the first mentioned lots to Mr. Edwards, the second two not having been abandoned by the county agents at that time. Legislative action is now required authorizing a similar disposition of the second two, in accordance with the original agreement.

—From the Encinal to Haywards, in Alameda county, every bridge and culvert has been washed away by the late rains. Gilroy was overflowed and some damage done to the railroad near there. Pajaro Valley was damaged $30,000.

STATE FORESTER.

Senator Betge, of San Francisco, in the early part of the present session of the Legislature, introduced a bill to create the office of "State Forester." The object of the bill is to prevent the destruction of forest trees, and as much as possible to replace those already destroyed. The intent of the proposed law is worthy of the highest commendation, but whether the desired end will be accomplished by the means and method proposed is a question of serious doubt. Similar means have been adopted in some of the old countries, and found to work well; but we fancy the conditions are vastly different from those of this State. There the power of the Forester, within his particular sphere, is very nearly absolute, while here nothing of the kind is either desirable or possible. Private owners, either individuals or corporations, of timber and other lands are wholly independent of any and every official as regards the management of their lands. The laws of the United States, when properly enforced, are quite sufficient to protect timber on the public domain, and with the exception of a few refuse school sections, perhaps, and the Yosemite valley, the State in her own right has none to protect. The question is, what can the proposed new official effect in the way of protecting existing forests, that can not be as well or better done through the agency of local officers?

The State Board of Agriculture can, with little or no additional expense, perform all the service that is marked out for the State Forester, and thus save in the way of his salary, traveling and contingent expenses the $10,000 per annum required for those purposes. His office would be a mere sinecure, for the success of the plan for growing trees would depend mainly if not altogether upon private enterprise after all, unless a horde of paid help is to be employed to look after the widely extended "plantations." Money devoted in that way is more likely to prove to be a corrupting fund than any thing else.

But the rapidity with which the forests of the State are disappearing shows conclusively that some action is necessary, if not to stay the hand of the destroyer, at least looking to their renewal. It is susceptible of demonstration that hard wood timber can be grown in almost any part of this State to a better profit than ordinary crops, taking their totals for the whole time necessary to produce trees of a marketable size. Of course it will be understood that the area of land for the two productions is supposed to be equal. While this fact may be generally known and admitted but few land owners can afford to wait so long for returns. It requires a number of years for trees to become a source of profit. For this reason some legislation is required to induce land owners to devote time and means in the culture of forest trees. Let $10,000 go directly to the object and not into the pockets of a useless officer every year, and soon our treeless plains will be made "to blossom as the rose."

PACIFIC COAST READAGRAMS

All the Government hay at Camp McDermott, Nevada, was burnt up, Dec. 18. The officers at that Post are very unpopular with the settlers, and it is supposed the hay was fired out of spite. Near the Post, a day or two later, an Indian stabbed a man named Peter Flynn. There are some indications of an outbreak there and near the railroad, by the Indians.

According to The Reveille, the late rain storm was the heaviest ever known in Eastern Nevada.

Two little sons of Robert Jones, of American Flat, Nevada, were frozen to death on the Ophir grade. They were coming home from Washoe Valley to spend Christmas, mounted on horses and driving some cows which greatly impeded their progress in the driving snow storm and the boys finally became so benumbed they could no longer ride or travel and so laid down, locked in each others arms, and died. They were found the next by their father, their clothing frozen fast to the ground. They were aged respectively 10 and 13 years.

The extensive orchard of John Briggs, located on the Feather river bottom, below Yuba City, had from eight to twelve feet of water over all of it during the late storm.

December 26 it was still storming heavily about Cheyenne. The snow was drifting fearfully, so that it was impossible to keep the railroad open, and no trains had passed over it for three days previously. At Helena, Montana, the thermometer stood 20 degrees below zero. Roads were all blocked in that direction.

Small pox has made its appearance in Gold Hill, Nevada.

EASTERN NEWS.

A wind storm at St. Louis, December 23, did considerable damage. Houses were unroofed, chimneys and firewalls demolished. The walls of several unfinished houses were prostrated and several persons hurt; none seriously.

A terrible tornado passed about four miles below New Albany, Indiana, December 23, breaking down the timber, destroying 700 feet of trestle work on the Air-line railroad, breaking the timbers off like whip-cords. Two men were riding in a buggy in the track of the storm, when horse, buggy and men were lifted in the air and carried forty feet, but escaped unhurt. Many buildings were unroofed, including the National Bank, Postoffice and telegraph offices. Several persons were injured.

In Chicago the walls of a number of unfinished buildings were blown down.

Alexis has arrived in Buffalo. He was enthusiastically received. Ex-President Fillmore delivered the welcoming address.

The small-pox is decreasing in Cincinnati. For the week previous to December 23, 57 deaths occurred.

The Committee of Seventy have perfected a new charter for the city of New York, subject to the action of the next Legislature.

Sumner has introduced a bill into Congress amending the Constitution so as to limit the services of the President to one term. The bill was laid over.

Sumner's civil rights amendment has been rejected by a vote of 30 to 29. The bill, after an amendment by Morton, was reported to the Senate from the Committee of the Whole, and the amendments concurred in.

On the advice of Fish, Secretary of State, Minister Schenck has withdrawn from the directory of the Emma silver mine.

Small pox is spreading all over Chicago—among the palaces as well as the huts of the poor.

The father of President Grant is at death's door.

Rumor says one of Connolly's chief bondsmen is about to withdraw, and that is probable this member of the Tammany thief ring passed New Year's Day in prison.

Railway and other corporations in the United States are owing $25,000,000 as taxes not yet paid to the Government for the last five months of 1870.

A Koklux outbreak occurred at Marshall, Saline county, Missouri, on Christmas Day. Five negroes were killed, and the party declare they will clean out all in the county.

South Carolina is $30,000,000 in debt—most of it stolen by railway and political thieves connected with the State Government.

It is reported that Tweed has fled, and all efforts to capture him had failed up to the 27th ultimo.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The Pope, December 22, performed the ceremony of pre-canonization of eighteen newly appointed bishops, including fifteen Italians and three Frenchmen.

In Paris Boileau is now mentioned in connection with the ministry to Washington, Ferry's nomination having been withdrawn. There was an unfounded rumor that General Chancey was to succeed Cissey as Minister of War, and the latter go to Washington.

The late violent radical newspaper, La République, in Marseilles has been prohibited.

The Erie Protection Company, of London, received a dispatch from New York, saying the new Attorney-General, Barstow, proposes, in his official capacity, to work up the whole combination of the Erie "ring" without respect to persons. The publication of the dispatch was received with great joy by parties interested.

A bill to increase the circulation of the Bank of France, and for the relief of trade and commerce, was still pending in the Assembly when it adjourned. The committee which has the measure in charge agree to its principles, but have not as yet determined upon a plan by which the circulation is to be augmented. An increase of 2,700,000 francs will probably be adopted in England.

The condition of the Prince of Wales was reported much worse on December 22.

French journals are bitter on Bismarck for his late threatening dispatch in relation to assasinations of German troops quartered in France.

Emperor William has prorogued the Prussian Diet until January 8th, 1872.

Bismarck has sent a dispatch to the German representative at Paris, in view of the late outrages perpetrated upon their soldiers in France, and threatens to occupy certain provinces unless assassins in future who escape there are delivered up to German officers by the French authorities.

Terrible Affair in Nebraska.

A gentleman who reached Kansas City on Saturday last, says a dispach from St. Louis of Dec. 12th, informed The Kansas City Times that on the Sunday previous a terrible affair occurred in Saline county, Nebraska. A party of immigrants, with their families, were passing through the country westward, when the cold constantly increasing, they concluded to camp. They were on a piece of high prairie and several miles from any house, but some three miles from them was a piece of timber. After unhitching their teams the men started for the timber for fuel. Not returning for several hours the women left their children and started to hunt them. This is all that is known, save that the next day the bodies of 17 persons who had perished from cold were found. The children, who were left in the wagons, were the only survivors.

The Public Land.

Representative Coghlan has introduced a bill in Congress proposing to amend the Constitution of the United States, as follows:

Article—. Section 1. The public land of the United States shall not be disposed of except to actual settlers thereon, and for homestead purposes only, and in quantities limited by general laws.

This is the only way to do it. Until there is a constitutional prohibition Congress will not cease to give way to the importunities of thieving corporations and land grabbers.—Sacramento Union.

A High Toned Thief.

A person who will "steal acorns from a blind sow," or take the copper cents from the eyes of a defunct Ethiopian, has hitherto been considered pretty low down in the scale of humanity, and no matter how much he may be lost to shame the subject of such allegations will always deny them with vehemence. But once in a while a person exists who will do even meaner things than stealing acorns and cents under such conditions, and though self-conceited, has not the manliness to cut his own throat. Such a case occurred here, within the past few days, compared to which the cent and acorn thief looms up as a paragon of honor and morality. Four little children, without father or mother, just on the eve of their departure to find homes among strangers, were each and all robbed of their little "banks," or tin safes, each containing a few dollars accumulated through presents from their friends, given at different times during the brief existence of the little owners. Aside from the intrinsic value of the money lost to these children (the late Mrs. Blaney's), these little boxes, with their contents, had a special value to them, that all who can remember their childhood will appreciate. It is this loss, and other circumstances, which aggravates the ineffable meanness of the crime. It can hardly be called a robbery, for the beast who perpetrated it has not the courage to rob even a child. In the darkness of the night the deed was done, as doubtless many others more criminal, though less mean, have been done by the same slinking, dastardly cur. If moral conviction could substantiate a charge in law, our jail would soon have a burly occupant, but in default of proof positive he will doubtless escape punishment, at least until he receives the oft promised coat of tar and feathers. In justification of the public conviction, it is well to state that circumstantial evidence less conclusive in its nature than can be adduced in this case has sent many a better man to the gallows.

Benton.

A correspondent writing from Benton, under date of January 6, says: "We have had no stage from Aurora for three weeks. The Independence stage, which made its usual trip on Wednesday, went on the following day to Dexter's Wells, 17 miles this side of Aurora, and brought in the express and part of the mails, which were carried over the snow by Indians. In mining matters, nothing of importance has occurred since my last. Creaser took about 20 tons of ore to Reno in the early part of December. The prospects are that for a time this will be rather a dull camp, as the chief mines will have to reduce their working force, on account of the impassable roads and the idleness of the new mill. Last June parties commenced putting up a ten-stamp mill at this place, bringing the machinery from Aurora. With a reasonable amount of energy and enterprise, it might have been completed in sixty days; however, after working about seven months the storms found the furnace and part of the machinery uncovered, so that they had to suspend for the Winter. Had it been completed there would have been no occasion to send rock to Reno, as a few tons of ore were worked, enough to show that the works were a success. But, as I said before, our camp will be a dull one for the balance of the Winter, and mainly on account of an incompetent superintendent."

Needs Attention.

The attention of the County Supervisors is called to the condition of the bridges across the river between Lone Pine and Swansea, and between this place and the Eclipse mill. A portion of the railing is gone from the first mentioned, from which fact a good deal of risk is involved in crossing with a team easily frightened. If nothing but repairs to the railing were needed it would be a matter of small consequence, but that is not all by any means. Neither of these bridges can be safely crossed by heavy teams, though both are subject to such trials daily. The county is liable any day to be sued for damages caused by the breaking down of these miserable apologies for bridges, and as there is risk to life and limb as well as to property, in that event the bill the county might have to foot, would possibly not be less than $50,000 and at the least for a sum sufficient to replace both by new and substantial structures.

Drug Store.

Dr. J. D. Blair to-day places his advertisement before the public, calling attention to his fine stock of drugs, chemicals, medicines, toilet and fancy articles. Our climate is deplorably healthy, but nevertheless almost everybody want something to be obtained in a first-class drug store, and the Doctor will be found a pleasant man to deal with.

The New Departure.

The Messrs. A. M. Loomis & Bro., of Lone Pine, one of the pioneer firms of Inyo, this week announce another departure from the old system of long credits and high prices, and are running on a cash basis and selling at low rates. They have a big stock, are doing a rattling business and well deserve public patronage.

New Tunnel.

The Wittekind boys have started in a new tunnel, to tap a large body of exceedingly rich ore, which has been opened below their present working level. It will intersect the ledge about 120 feet in depth and be 200 feet long.

Billiards.

The Sazarac saloon has just put in position a new billiard table, with accoutrements complete, in consequence of which John Wallace will soon be on his pins again.

Gone Below.

County Clerk Moffat on last Tuesday morning started below with the Blaney children, for the purpose of placing them at school.

Thirty Stamps.

The Eclipse new mill is now being run with a full battery of thirty stamps, with very favorable results, so far as only partial clean ups can determine.

Another Enthusiastic, Communicative Diner-Out—Bad Effects of a Good Dinner.

EDITORS INDEPENDENT—On Monday morning, "New Year's Day," just as old Tempus had clipped off another measure of time and buried it in the unfathomable gulf of eternity, leaving us to mourn over the departed—then, as if by magic, the glorious luminary of the day burst over the eastern horizon, and with his effulgent rays proclaimed a Happy New Year to all, and bid us smile again—as the sun was nearing its zenith I awoke from a reverie to the remembrance that I, with others, had been invited to partake of a New Year's dinner, given by R. M. Shuey and his kind wife, as a link of friendship to bind the past to the future; and as they are about to remove from our midst in a short time, I hope and trust that they will not take it amiss that I have thus publicly noticed that which would otherwise have been entirely private.

As I was about to say, at 11 o'clock A. M. an old bachelor might have been seen emerging from his lonely cell where he is wont to move around in his conceited majesty and to exclaim, with Alexander Selkirk,

"I am monarch of all I survey,
My right there is none to dispute;
From the center all around to the wall,
I am lord of the fowl and the brute."

And about 12 M. Mr. J. Shepherd and wife, accompanied by the lights and joy of their house, arrived, and shortly afterwards might have been seen approaching the house from different directions, those lonely old bachelors like myself, who make up the greater portion of the inhabitants of this beautiful valley, who are ever ready to acknowledge that

"Happy is the man to whom kind Heaven, Rich in grace, a wife hath given."

As one after another arrived, they were welcomed with a "happy New Year" by the inmates of the house, and when once within its walls they seemed for the time to be lost from all dull care, when Miss L——, with a countenance beaming with delight, announced "dinner." When lo! the festive board was spread before us, crowned with all that the heart could wish. Chickens, ham and all that is esculent, together with gorgeous cakes, fruit and finely-wrought pies—all of which were dealt out with a sumptuous hand. The way all these things disappeared was the best proof that need be produced that some one was well versed in the culinary art: and as the magnificent tea and coffee was quaffed a spirit of mirth seemed to take possession of even the venerable sire R. M. S——, and then, with electric speed, the whole company was filled with a spirit of revelry, and jokes were freely given and kindly received. Dinner being over, the remainder of the day was spent so agreeable to all that time passed so quickly that before we were aware the sun began to disappear behind the western horizon, and we were led to exclaim "sic transit voluptas mundi," and realize that "Pleasures are like poppies spread,

You seize the flower and its bloom is shed;
Or like the snow fall in the river,
A moment white then melts forever;
Or like the borealous race,
That flits 'ere you can point the place."

Before leaving this place, where New Year's day was made so happy, many a kind wish was entertained and expressed for our old pioneer friends who are about to leave us, and all wished, none more than the writer, that they may live to enjoy many a happy New Year in their new home. Hoping that the Horn of Plenty may ever shower its blessings on their festive board, I sign myself one of the

SQUIBLETS.

—The first person singular—Adam.

—Play'n words—words punned upon.

—To mend bad sherry—have a sherry cobbler.

—How to raise beets—take hold of the top and pull—H. G.

—A debt for which there is no attachment—the debt of nature.

—George Washington stabbed Henry Clay with his little pocket knife, at Omaha, a few days ago.

—When does a gambler resemble a stingy man at a bar? When he orders up something and goes it alone.

—A rural poet indites a sonnet to his sweet-heart entitled "I kissed her sub rosa." The compositor knew better than that, and set it up "I kissed her snub nosa."

—A gentleman was introduced to a young lady recently, and addressed her as follows: "Where do you live when you are at home?" to which she promptly replied, "When I am at home I live there."

—A gentleman writes to an editor, accompanying a letter for publication: "I sometimes misspel a word, and it is possible I have spelt sicafunt rong."

—"It is forty years, my old friend Susan, since we were girls together." "Is it?—well don't speak so loud, there's that young widower in the next room."

—Sir Robert Peel once presented a farmers' club in England with two iron plows of the best build. On his next visit he found the old plows with the wooden mould-boards again at work.

"Sir," said a member of the club, "we tried the iron, and we be all of one mind, that they do make the weeds grow."

—A man who was reprimanded by a divine for swearing, replied that he did not see any harm in it.

"No harm in it!" said the minister; "why, do you not know that the commandment, 'Swear not at all?'" "I do not swear at all," said the man, "I only swear at those who annoy me."

—An exchange says: "One brand of Cincinnati whisky is warranted to contain 437 fights to the barrel." The rest of the brands might well be warranted to kill the consumer before he has time to go in search of a fight.

—A burglar was once frightened out of his scheme of robbery by the sweet simplicity of a solitary spinster, who putting her night capped head out of the window, exclaimed, "Go away! ain't you ashamed?"

—Dr. Medlicott, who poisoned a patient whose wife he was in love with, at Lawrence, Kansas, has been sentenced to be hung on the 26th of the present month.

—While T. D. Jones was in Columbus modeling his bust of Chase, a young man of the Spangler order of architecture approached him one night at a social gathering, with the inquiry: "Er-er—say! Er-er—so you're the man—er—that makes round heads, ain't you?" "Yes," said old Tom, blandly; "do you want a new one?"

—One of the reliable physicians of Chicago states that he has means of knowing that 500 children were born on the prairie and on the streets during Monday and Tuesday nights, at Chicago during the fire.

A Remarkable Set.

Old Farmer Gruff was one morning tugging away with all his might at a barrel of apples, which he was trying to get up the cellar stairs, and calling at the top of his lungs for one of his boys to lend a helping hand, but in vain. When he had after an infinite amount of sweating and puffing, accomplished the task and just when they were not needed of course the boys made their appearance.

"Where have you been, and what have you been about, I'd like to know, that you could not hear me call?" inquired the farmer, in an angry tone, and addressing the eldest.

"Out in the shop, settin' the saw," replied the youth.

"And you, Dick?"

"Out in the barn, settin' the hen."

"And you, sir?"

"Up in Granny's room, settin' the clock."

"And you, young man?"

"Up in the garret, settin' the trap."

"And now, Master Fred, where were you, and what were you settin'?" asked the old farmer of the youngest progeny, the asperity of his temper somewhat softened by this amusing category of answers. "Come, let's hear!"

"Out on the door step, settin' still," replied the young hopeful seriously.

"A remarkable set, I must confess," added the amused sire, dispersing the grinning group with a wave of his hand.

A Sad Result of Heroism.

It is rather late in the day to publish incidents of the Chicago fire, but The Post publishes one which deserves more than local circulation. It is the story of an Indian who had arrived in the city but a few days before the great disaster. As the flames advanced, he was standing on the sidewalk of State street. He gazed upon the rushing columns of fire as contentedly as if he was viewing an Apache brother cutting the throat of an Arizona settler. All about him was crackling ruin, but his bronzied face gave no indication of fear. Although, through the smoke and fire the panic-stricken multitude called on him to fly, he stood immovable as a statue, and vouchsafed no answer. The curling tongues of flame wrapped him in a blazing garment, and soon he perished—a victim to a mistaken idea of courage. The proprietor of the cigar store, who had him carefully chiseled out of a pine tree at a cost of $25, is inconsolable.

The World Without Newspapers.

[From The American Newspaper Reporter.]

The newspaper is to current rumor, what history is to tradition. It is life epitomized; talk abbreviated; events daguerreotyped in the very act of happening; it is everybody and his wife dropping in to tea or to breakfast and telling you in good English all they have seen and been doing, without disturbing your quiet or household economy. Beginning with bulletins from courts and dispatches from seats of war or councils of state, the newspaper has by insensible degrees enlarged its function, until it covers with its insatiate tentacula the whole field of public and private transactions, and what it does not tell is not worth knowing. The Yankee is no longer inquisitive; what he wants to know he can find out in his daily paper. Take it away from him and he would be a lost man. It is his directory, his railroad guide, his business or financial correspondent, his familiar gossip, his message from home. It is the Vanity Fair, where you can find what you will, whether business or pleasure. The maid opens the damp sheet to glance at the marriage column; the maiden aunt at the obituaries; brother Tom to scan the tally of the last "national game;" and in this indispensable ephemeran everybody's world is represented.

The world without newspapers would be at a sudden loss for its ready made ideas. Its wits would go ragged, at least for a season. The manufacture of public opinion, of the different approved varieties, has become an industry of enormous proportion. The well bred and well-fed Englishman has no opinion they say, on the latest event, till he has read The London Times, and every man has his printed oracle, which he consults when too busy or too lazy to do his own thinking. Dionysious and other monarchs used to keep a philosopher or two in the house to supply them with ideas, or keep their minds in motion. Now a similiar luxury is open to the poorest, who may secure for a trifle the daily or weekly visit of a Mentor. Busy people can't really have time to think of everything as it happens, and they love to have some kindred mind, of the same sect or school, dish up the news for them with appropriate notes and comments, that may say "Just what I think about it," as very like it is, if they had time and art to get at their own thoughts and get it out into words. The writers for The London Times are said to make its success not by attempting to shape, but simply to express the thought on current topics of the average englishman. The last leading editorial of a great newspaper is at least a foil for thought, and provocative of intellectual activity in all circles. In the discussions of cars and stages you recognize the familiar voice of Times or Tribune. The literary and religious weeklies are echoed and reflected in large circles of admiring readers; the sparks struck out on their editorial anvils scintillate all over the land.

The world without newspapers, even if every duodecimo and quarto and folio was spared, would fall into comparatively cimmerian darkness. Knowledge is really not published for the masses until it gets out of books into the convenient and cheap and quickly read newspaper. Many a mind is started upon inquiry and investigation by some scrap of curious or scientific information which "I read in a newspaper." As it is said that the New Testament might almost be reproduced from quotations in the writings of the early fathers, so quite a fair representation of modern literature and science might be gathered up by excerpts from newspapers which are read one day and burned the next. A good newspaper for a year is a small circulating library.

Anecdote of the Grand Duke Alexis.

The Emperor's third son Alexis is in the naval service. Somewhat more than a year ago, when holding the rank of midshipman, the flag-ship in which he was serving was wrecked on the coast of Denmark. The Admiral ordered the life-boats to be lowered, and directed Alexis to take charge of the first boat. The royal midshipman declined to obey the order. It was peremtorily repeated: "I, your commanding officer, order you into the boat." "Admiral, I can not obey you," said the young prince. "It would not become the son of the Emperor to be the first to leave the ship. I shall remain with you to the last." "But I shall put you under arrest for disobedience of orders as soon as circumstances will allow me to do so." "I mean no disobedience, but I can not obey," replied the youthful hero. In due time almost the entire crew reached the shore in safety, only some four or five having perished in the transit from the ship. Among the last to land were the Admiral and the Grand Duke Alexis. Tents were hastily erected from the sails and spars saved from the wreck, and the rigid discipline of ship life was promptly resumed. The young prince was placed under arrest for his previous disobedience of orders. As soon as possible, the Russian Minister at Copehagen was informed of the facts and telegraphed them to the Emperor, from whom he received the following reply: "I approve the act of the Admiral in placing the midshipman under arrest for disobedience of orders, and I bless and kiss my son for disobeying them."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Of Course He Knew Her.

The Gold Hill (Nevada) News relates this amusing occurrence: A little incident occurred in front of the International Hotel, Virginia City, a few days ago, which is worth the room of a local to relate. There resides in Gold Hill a married man—a tall, good-natured Scotchman—whose wife went on a visit to the east some eight months ago. Nights being rather cold lately, the husband imploringly wrote to his wife to return to her home—that he had had enough of the life of a Washoe bachelor, and he wanted no more of it. A couple of weeks ago she wrote him a letter that she would leave for home, and that he might expect her to arrive in Virginia City on a certain day. At the appointed time our warm-blooded Gold Hiller (who had scarcely talked to any living woman since his wife left for the East) anxiously waited on the sidewalk in front of the stage-office to embrace his long absent wife; and several of his friends, noticing his impatience, inquired the cause, when he enthusiastically informed them that he expected his dear wife, who had been absent for eight long months, and he would be so happy when she arrived—that it would be equal to getting married again—and he was sure she was on the incoming stage, as she wrote him exactly the day she would start for home, and it took just so many days to come on the cars, and the time was up, etc. The stage arrived and drew up in front of the International Hotel, where our friend had already engaged a comfortable chamber, as he knew his wife must be tired and sleepy after such a long journey, etc. The passengers all got out of the coach except one lady on the back seat, who was deeply vailed and had on a thick checked shawl. Our Gold Hill friend made a rush into the stage to embrace and kiss his wife—he knew it was her by the check shawl she had on, as it was the one she left home in—and just as he was about throwing his arms around her neck and pushing her heavy brown vail a-side, to get a good smack at her lips, a deep, sonorous voice from under the veil exclaimed: "Never mind, chile. I kin git out myself, I kin!" Horror of horrors! could such a thing be that it was not the long-expected wife? The would-be husband withdrew from the stage and out bounced a big, fat colored woman of at least two hundred and fifty pounds in weight, and throwing aside her vail she cast a terrible pair of black eyes at the intruder, with this remark: "You can't fool dis gal afore all dis crowd" The disappointed husband asked the crowd into Captain Vesey's saloon to drink, provided the whole thing was kept a secret—the which has been strictly observed. His wife has since arrived, and he is happy, but he swears he will burn up that check shawl she wore when she left home. No more check shawls for him.

Libel Suit.

In the Sixth District Court yesterday G. W. Spaulding, of the firm of Coffroth & Spaulding, commenced a suit for damages against the proprietors of The Sacramento Daily Union, claiming that he had been injured by the publication of editorial remarks, December 2d and December 9th, 1870, concerning the case of Jones vs. Singleton, Figg et al., in which case Spaulding was retained as an attorney for the defense. Plaintiff alleges that the first and last of said articles were published by the defendants with the malicious intent and meaning to cause the public of California to believe: First—That the plaintiff was and is an incompetent and negligent attorney, unfit and unworthy to be employed or trusted with professional business. Second—That the plaintiff had either negligently, ignorantly or fraudulently omitted to make a proper defense in said cause. Third—That plaintiff, as such attorney, could and should have introduced in evidence on the trial of said cause certain documentary and parol evidence which he failed to introduce, and in consequence of which failure or neglect the defendants lost their case. He also alleges that the articles mentioned were understood by the readers of the paper to carry and bear the meaning above alleged, and that it was the intention of the defendants that they should bear such meaning, and that such meaning is utterly false and without any foundation whatever. Wherefore he claims damages to the amount of $20,000 and costs.—Sacramento Union, December 27.

—The story is told of Dr. Bellamy, that one of his parishioners, who was a notorious scamp, came to him, saying, in the parlance of the divinity that pervaded this portion of New England at that period, "I feel that I have obtained a hope!" The doctor looked surprised. "I realize that I am the chief of sinners," continued the hypocritical canter. "Your neighbors have long been of that opinion," rejoined the doctor. The man went on to say out the lesson: "I feel willing to be damned for the glory of God." "Well, my friend, I don't know any one who has the slightest objection."

—"How is your wife to-day?" said a friend to a French gentleman. "Oh, moche de sem," said he, "she is no better, and I 'fraid ver little wass. If she is gon to die, I wish she would do it soon, I feel so unhappy—my mind is so moche unsettled. When she die I shall not be so moche dissatisfied."

Dancing at Home.

Henry Ward Beecher took occasion in a recent sermon to allude to recreation and amusements in the home circle as being healthy and natural, and we append what he said about dancing:

Some persons, when they join a church, think they must pull all the mirth and glee and music out of their lives. Don't do it. If a love song ripples up to the surface of your heart, sing it! sing it! Don't let it die. My second mother—for I remember no other—was my ideal of gentleness, propriety and elegance. She was not, however, very demonstrative. She used before marriage to be quite a belle, and was often known to trip the light fantastic toe. One evening as my father played a tune on the violin, my mother arose and in the most graceful manner possible to conceive commenced to dance around the room. I did not know what to make of it. I was speechless with consternation and delight. My father looked on in surprise. Never in the whole course of my life had I known such a thing attempted in my father's house. It was delicious, and I got a lesson then which has lasted me ever since. I think to this day if my mother had danced oftener and used the catechism less it would have been better for all of us. If you have a talent for music, cultivate it; for dancing, cultivate it; whatever gifts God has given you, make the most of them, whether of voice, foot or eye.

Good Writing.

Compared with the large amount of matter that is printed in newspapers, the quantity of really good work that is done is very small indeed. The best talent on a newspaper seldom has time to write at all, while the "writing editors" produce so much matter that little of it is above the mediocre in quality. It is, in fact, a matter of surprise that the standard is as good even as it is, when it is considered how much is expected of a newspaper man. No one thing a man can do for a livelihood is so wearing, so inexorable, so inadequately paid. Copy must be ready in time, or it is useless; articles on matters of the hour must be written at once, or be of no avail. Fatigue and headache do not excuse; the paper must come out on time. Some amateurs think they produce, and do sometimes produce, a good article, but they have had the time for reflection, the opportunity for revision, a choice of subject, a particular time to write, conditions which the professional journalist can not hope for.

The only chance for improvement in these things depends upon the growing intelligence of the country, which will demand more careful writing, and such increased prosperity in newspapers as will permit them a larger staff.

LITIGANT PAPER FOR INYO COUNTY,

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY

CHALFANT & PARKER.

JAS. E. PARKER | P. A. CHALFANT

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.;

Saturday,.....January 20, 1872.

Wants Territory.

The following communication was received in Sacramento not long since:

STATE OF NEVADA,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
CARSON CITY, December 14, 1871.

Hon. R. Pacheco, Lieut.-Governor California—Sir: In compliance with a request therein contained, I herewith enclose a Senate joint resolution of this State, asking the Legislature of California to cede that portion of the State of California which lies east of the Sierra Nevada Mountains to this State.

Very respectfully,
L. R. BRADLEY, Governor.

The people living in the section of country specified in the above, it would seem, are something like the poor boy at the "corn shuckin'"—nothing to say as to their future political destiny. As a matter of politeness if not of right it would be well enough to consult the wishes of us sage brushers about this thing before it goes too far. Geographically considered there is no question but the section alluded to properly belongs to Nevada, but we are too poor to stand a removal, two of which is said to be equal to one fire. We would a little rather not, although the most we ask is to be allowed to pay our taxes in quietness, caring but little which State government can get away with them with the greatest celerity.

Leap Year.

It is probably entirely superfluous for us to remind marriagable ladies, either consolable widows (and where is one that is not?) young or old maids, that this is Leap Year, but we mention it by way of impressing upon them the importance of making hay while the sun shines. During the present year the law requiring a declaration of matrimonial intentions three months in advance is suspended out of regard to the ladies, it not being supposed that they know that far ahead whether they want to get married or not. All they have to do is for each to select her man, (care being taken not infringe upon pre-existing rights of others) and corral him at once. The church, in consideration of his misfortune, will impose no additional penance for the expiation of his sins.

An Honest Old Soul.

Senator Harlan, of Iowa, appears to be mixed up with one Wright in some Indian frauds, for which the latter is now undergoing a trial, and the chances are that Mr. Harlan will not be re-elected Senator. With a salary of $8,000 a year this whilom school teacher and bright and shining light of the church has only managed to save up a few hundred thousand dollars in the past twelve years, and his constituents begin to think if he can't do any better than that as a public official he ought to have a chance to turn an honest penny against a rainy day as a private citizen.

Two Commissions.

The Hon. A. A. Sargeant left for Washington City, December 27, bearing with him a cetificate of election as a member of the House of Representatives for the present term which expires on the 4th of March, 1873, and also a certificate of election as a member of the United States Senate, to succeed Senator Cole, whose term of office expires at the same time Sargeant's term in the House of Representatives does. Verily the Hon. M. C. has fortune at the flood-tide, and is being borne as rapidly as possible to the highest position a civilian can aspire to.

To the Ladies.

All ladies are lovers of flowers, but comparatively few thoroughly understand their cultivation. All needed information on that point can be obtained by sending ten cents to James Vick, Rochester, New York, for a copy of his Floral Guide and Catalogue. It is a work of 112 pages, elegantly printed on fine tinted paper in two colors, and illustrated with over 300 engravings of flowers and vegetables, two colored plates and a beautiful photograph of the author. It is the most beautiful and instructive work of the kind we have ever seen. Send for a copy.

Journalism Extraordinary.

The Sacramento Union has always been noted for its enterprise and completeness as a first class paper, but its latest effort eclipses all previous ones, and is quite extraordinary. The issue (daily) for January 1, 1872, is a triple sheet, containing eighty-four columns of statistical political and industrial tables, statement of births, marriages, deaths and notable events in the State during the past year, and other matters of interest. How big the weekly is we can't say, but we do say success to The Sacramento Union.

THE ONE TERM PRINCIPLE.

Senator Sumner's resolution to amend the Constitution so that the President may be restricted to one term in his office has opened an old question anew—one that has been periodically discussed almost from the foundation of the government, and always with the same result. Though this is not a party question it is quite possible that the immediate object is to defeat Gen. Grant's aspirations for a second term. Looking at it on general principles without reference to President Grant, or any other person particularly, we do not see any good to be derived from the proposed change. It is true there is no constitutional limit to the number of terms the same person may serve as President of the United States, nor is there need of any, so long as the people have the constitutional right, which no President can take away, of deciding that matter for themselves. A bad and unscrupulous man may become President, and during his term of four years, a bad and unscrupulous President may inflict great evils upon free institutions, but with all the political power he may wield by virtue of federal patronage it is scarcely possible for him to perpetuate it nor the evils of his administration, unless the people shut their eyes and blindly submit. There is far more danger of bad government under the proposed limitation, for even a demagogue will shape his course somewhat on the principles of right and justice so long as there is hope or a chance for future preferment, which, with all his vast power, is clearly beyond his reach, should its abuse be sufficiently alarming as to excite general opposition. The difficulty is there has always been under every administration from the first to the last so many persons to cry "wolf, wolf!" in order to compass their own selfish ends, that a note of real danger may not be heeded; but this possible danger, so far as we can see, is very remotely, if at all, contingent upon the two term principle.

If one term of office has proved a President an honest and an efficient officer why must he be shoved aside for some untried man, who in turn, whether good or bad, must give way by the time he has fairly learned his duties at the public expense, to still another expensive experiment? No private business is ever successfully conducted on that principle. A real reform would lie in the other direction, which would be to extend the terms of office of almost every grade. Every few years the whole country is plunged in a state of semi-revolution that a new set of inexperienced officers may step into place, each in the full knowledge that a continuance therin for another term depends in no degree upon his honesty or efficiency, and that to reimburse himself for the necessary outlay in secure his position he will have to make hay while the sun shines—a knowledge prolific of official peculation and political corruption. In regard to the Presidential limitation the adoption of the proposed amendment, by interposing such a barrier to future reward and preferment, withdraws a very important incentive to well-doing.

No form of government has ever yet devised or perhaps ever will be that may not be endangered by bad officers at its head, but our own is as safe as any other, to take its past history as a criterion for its future. There is nothing so far, croakers notwithstanding, to excite alarm by reason of a second Presidential term.

Passed.

The following bills have passed one or both houses of the Legislature since it reassembled: Bradley's bill repealing the State paper act, and Oakland street improvement amendment passed the Assembly on the 4th, and in the Senate a bill appropriating money to pay for the translation of the laws into Spanish; a resolution was also adopted instructing committees of the two houses on public building to make joint inquiry into the construction of the State Capitol. A bill to repeal the five per cent. act was referred to committee. Numerous other bills of more or less importance were introduced, but not having received a full report of the doings of the Legislature since the holidays we can not give them in detail.

An Apology Due.

We owe an apology to Gen. John C. Breckenridge for having summarily sent him to "that bourne whence no traveler returns." The General will no doubt excuse the error when he finds out that we were led into it by The Visalia Times, which paper had been without a mail for eight days previously. It was the death of the venerable Presbyterian minister, writer and patriot Robert J. Breckenridge, far more favorably known than his nephew John C., who received the benefit of numerous obituaries, that was telegraphed to this coast and misstated by several papers.

Affairs in Arizona.

Since the inauguration of actual war measures against the Apaches, affairs in Arizona begin to wear a more hopeful aspect. The Sacramento Record learns from a correspondent that many who had abandoned all hope of being able to live there under the foolish Collyer policy, and who were preparing to remove their effects, have concluded to remain, now that the military power is again in the ascendancy. The soldiers have confidence in the ability of Gen. Crook to force the Apaches to terms, but they had none in the rose-water policy of Collyer. Had that policy been carried out, Arizona would have been depopulated of white settlers within a twelvemonth; but the prudent and timely change of programme has restored confidence to the residents, and inspired them with renewed energy and hope.

Pendulum Experiments.

A series of careful experiments for determining the gravity of the Earth are about to be made at the Mont Cenis tunnel. They will be made first in a lateral chamber about the center of the tunnel, and will be afterwards repeated at the corresponding vertical point on the mountain, the difference of level being about 1,600 metres (5,000 feet). In addition to these observations they propose to determine the earth's magnetism and the temperature of the strata to which they can obtain access. By preliminary observations they have ascertained that the movement of trains will not to any serious extent interfere with the precision of the observations. The different points of the observation will be connected with telegraph wires for the purpose of chronographic registration.

Pacific Year Book of Facts.

We are receipt of a copy of the "Pacific Almanac and Year Book of Facts" for 1872. As a compendium of useful statistics and general information this almanac is worthy of a place in every household. It is worth a cart load of the too common patent medicine almanacs, comprising as it does, a history brief but complete, of this coast for the past year, and much other matter of interest. Price, 50 cents. Published by Henry G. Langley, 612 Clay street, San Francisco.

EASTERN NEWS.

By reason of the late storms on the plains the G. D. has been compelled to forego his contemplated buffalo hunt. P. S.—A later date says he will go on the hunt accompanied by Gen. Sheridan, and will come through to San Francisco. There is not a word said about his coming to Independence.

Richard Tweed, son of the "Boss," testifies that he is worth $7,500,000, having received a very large amount of property from his father, the consideration being "love" and "consanguinity."

An account says in her voyage across the Atlantic the United States frigate Wabash, carrying General Sherman, encountered a severe storm and lost thirty to forty of her crew overboard. This is contradicted as to the loss of life by another account.

One of the discharged Tammany officials gives out that he knows all about the murder of Nathan, and will tell if the authorities will exempt an accomplice in the murder from punishment.

An affair of serious import took place at New Orleans, January 4, between two political factions in the Legislature. It resulted in the arrest of the Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor, Speaker of the House, and a number of Senators and Representatives by the United States Marshall, backed by United States troops, acting under the Kuklux act.

Eighteen indictments for bribery have been found by a Grand Jury against Aldermen and ex-Aldermen in Chicago.

The Cherokee Legislative Council refuse to adopt the Constitution formed for the proposed Territory of Oklahoma.

A number of Kuklux prisoners, recently convicted in South Carolina, have been sentenced to fine and imprisonment—the fines ranging from $20 to $1,000, the imprisonments from three months to five years each, according to the degree of the crimes committed.

Report says Daniel E. Sickles wants to be United States Senator from New York in place of Conklin. The Legislature elects a Senator this month.

Charles O'Conor opposes the indictment of Mayor Hall.

O'Donovan Rossa presents to the New York Legislature a memorial claiming representation from Tweed's district, saying that 6,000 votes were unlawfully cast for Tweed; consequently he asks the expulsion of Tweed.

The New York Senate has ratified the Fifteenth Amendment, by a vote of 21 to 1.

A great excitement was created at Rochester, New York, by a negro named Howard having ravished a little girl. She was supposed to be fatally injured, and a report of her death being circulated, a mob surrounded the jail, and in the endeavor to take the wretch out were fired upon by the police and two men killed and others wounded. Six companies of military with artillery were put on guard, with orders to prevent the lynching of the negro at all hazards. A dispatch of the 3d instant says: The negro, Howard, has been indicted. The police in a body have made a charge on the mob gathered in the vicinity of the jail and are driving them through the streets in every direction. Several of the soldiers who stepped out of the line this afternoon were knocked down by ruffians. It was thought that Howard would be taken into court this afternoon, but the Judge of Oyer and Terminer will not consent until it is determined whether his victim will recover or not. Judge Smith and the County Judge, have fully directed the Sheriff not take Howard from jail at present, and to protect the property and preserve the public peace at all hazards. The howitzers have been removed to a position where they will command Exchange street and the approaches from the east side of the river more effectually. A dispatch dated at midnight stated that all was quiet, and that no further outbreak was apprehended.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The ladies of Strasbourg, now a part of the German Empire, are taking subscriptions to pay the indemnity owing by France.

England has offended the Transvaal Republic by the annexation of the diamond fields of South Africa. Gold has been discovered in the annexed region, and the mines are now attracting much attention and taking adventurers from the diamond mines.

On New Year's Day the King of Italy sent an embassador to congratulate the Pope. The Pope refused to receive the embassador.

Gen. Sherman arrived at Marseilles, France, on the 1st instant.

The Communists of Paris are about to establish a colossal bank in Paris, whose capital shall rival that of the Bank of France. Forty million dollars have already been subscribed.

In a recent gale a Russian steamship foundered in the Caspian Sea, all on board being lost. The vessel carried down 1,000,000 rubles in treasure which it had on board—a sum very nearly equal to $800,000 of our money.

A steam road wagon exploded a boiler in the streets of Glasgow, Scotland, December 30, killing five children and mortally injuring seven others who were following in a great throng in child-like curiosity at the new locomotive power.

Latest Mexican news, received by way of the west coast, is to the effect that Juarez has substantially crushed Diaz's revolt in the State of Oaxaca; that he is confident of his ability to restore peace and order without any foreign aid, and that he regards the United States as the sincere friend of his Government.

Famine continues in Persia and the entire population in some districts has been swept off. Government aid is unavailing.

English Investments in our Mines.

It took a long time and much effort to open the London market to American mining stocks, but when once open John Bull is found to be as brisk and greedy a speculator as any of his brethern. A London journal contains the prospectus of five new companies, with an aggregated capital of $6,000,000. These are new companies. Others have been organized and are working the properties they have purchased. So far as the investments of the English have been made in rock mining, it may be said they have not always been judicious. In the line of gravel mining, worked by hydraulic power, it is understood our cousins across the water have made themselves owners of some of the best mines in the State and are working them with satisfactory results.—Sacramento Union.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

 All advertisements, to insure insertion in these columns, must be handed in on or before 2 o'clock P. M., Friday.

The Races.

Considerable "horse talk" is being indulged in on the strength of the coming races, over the Lone Pine course, on the 22d and 23d of February. The entries expected for the purses as offerred are Mulkey's b. s. Billy Baffem, Bennett's b. h. Sheep Driver, Gregg's s. s. Jack Hawkins, and Hitchcock's s. m. Jane. Other purses than those announced will probably be offered, and races made for longer heats, with what is considered faster stock. In fact, Armstead, of Benton, sends a challenge to run his horse (name unknown hereabouts) against the s. m. "Lucy Dale," for from $1,000 to $10,000, and Mulkey requires him to "throw the horse in sight;" and the indications are that the race will be made. At the Benton races, week ago last Sunday, McBride's horse got away with the stakes, beating Turners' Slim Jim 92 feet in a half mile, making the distance in 47 seconds, as is claimed—which is somewhat doubtful. In the same race Slim Jim led Joe Reed's horse 1½ feet. All the horses mentioned are reported as in rigid training, and will be in thorough condition for anything which may come up on the occasion referred to.

Severe Accident.

At the Eclipse mine, on the 15th instant, a party of workmen were engaged in raising a boiler, weighing about three tons, up the canyon to the shaft, for use in the new hoisting machinery. At a critical moment the chain gave way, the boiler falling back some thirty feet and striking Isaac Jackson (formerly a soldier of Col. Devin's command at Camp Independence), one of the workmen. But for the fortunate interposition of a block of wood he was chucking up with he would have been mashed into an indistinguishable shape. As it is he is severely injured about the left hip and loins, and badly bruised in the right hand and wrist, having fallen backward. Dr. White was immediately summoned, and, unless something unexpected happens, the Doctor counts upon his recovery.

Prospecting.

The recent experiences of Jimmy Sharpe, the irrepressible prospector, who has just returned from a sojourn in the Inyo Range, are well worthy of mention. He was on the summit some six or eight weeks, snowbound a greater portion of the time and suffering not a little from the cold and exposure. During the time he sunk six feet upon one of his discoveries which he calls the Blue Belle, taking out two tons of not less than $200 ore in the operation. The ledge is of unknown width, having every indication of wealth and permanency. Considerable attention has been attracted to the mine, and the probabilities are that Sharpe will yet be rewarded with a stack of hard twenties.

The Mails.

Will somebody move in the matter of having our mails forwarded from San Francisco via Visalia? A written request, generally signed, should be sent to the Postmaster at San Francisco. Ten feet of snow effectually blocks the northern route for passenger travel, and, as three times a week is an improvement upon only one, the bulk of the mails should also be transferred to the other line. We presume that the people living on the route of the upper stage would turn out and help clear the road but for the fear of being charged toll on their return.

Riding Match.

For the purpose of settling a dispute in regard to the equestrian abilities of a trio of bronco riders—John Anderson, Al. Vickard and Charley Butler—a match ride will take place to-morrow at Cofer's place, near Camp Independence, for a purse of $40. Each will ride "broncos" selected with special reference to their vicious, "bucking" proclivities, and at the close of the trial Anderson proposes to ride a wild bull.

Redemption of Warrants.

Holders of county warrants will take notice of County Treasurer Harris' advertisement this week, announcing that sealed proposals will be received for the surrender of $748 66 worth of county warrants, which amount is in the sinking fund to be applied for that purpose. The bids will be canvassed by the Board of Supervisors and the Treasurer on Monday, February 5th, at which time occurs the regular session of the Board.

The Big Sale.

According to due announcement, Joseph Holden, the Assignee of the Kearsarge Mining Company, bankrupt, will sell that company's property, at the mill, on Saturday next. It would be a good idea for our Inyo capitalists to combine and purchase it, with the assurance of getting their money back during the first season, with economy and good management. The snow is now five feet in depth at the mill.

The Weather

Seems to have cleared up for the Winter. The mornings are yet cool, but old Sol warms things up in the afternoon, by way of amends. Grass is starting up, and should we escape another cold nip an early Spring will result. The very deep snow on the mountains assures the farmers an abundance of water.

Communication.

We have received from Mr. A. Bashfulman a well-written communication detailing some of the operations of a recent serenading party, at Bishop Creek. But the matter contained is just a little too personal for publication.

Lumber.

The popular lumberists, Smith & Engle, of the Black Rock, give due notice that they are still in the field, ready to furnish any amount of lumber, timber or shingles. Send in your orders early.

Opposition.

Acting upon their favorite maxim that "opposition is the life of trade," C. & M. Cohn, of Lone Pine, this week spread out, display and otherwise improve their advertisement. Read it.

Religious Revival.

The Baptist and Methodist denominations are united in protracted meetings at Bishop Creek. The church is crowded every evening, and quite a number have professed conversion.

Withdrawn.

The appointments for preaching by Rev. E. H. Orne, for Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next, are withdrawn.

Inyo House.

Mr. C. H. Parsons gives notice that he has leased and will hereafter conduct the Inyo House.

The Wheeler Guides, Again.

Through the politeness of Major Egbert we shall in our next issue be enabled to present a full and reliable statement relating to the Hahn-Egan affair. The statement is written by Lieutenant Lyle, the officer in command of the detachment from which both these guides so mysteriously disappeared.

Returned.

Sheriff Elder and R. A. Loomis returned from a trip to San Francisco and some of the other villages on the other side, per Visalia stage of Thursday last. Why didn't our worthy Sheriff come the other route? They report that Mr. Moffat, with his little charges, arrived safe in Visalia, in due time.

The Ice Business.

Until within the past two or three nights the weather has not been propitious for making ice with which to fill the new ice house, that is all ready for it, just west of town, nor does the mercury get quite low enough down yet to insure much of a crop and the success of the enterprise.

Mechanics' Hall.

Our old friend Burkhardt will formally open a saloon bearing the above title, on Sunday, January 28, at his place in Lone Pine. George is a bully fellow, with a host of friends, and the "opening" will be a gay affair.

The Rumored Change.

For some time it has been currently reported that W. F. Wilson, the popular Nevada stage man, is about purchasing the line from Aurora here, "a consummation most devoutly to be wished for."

Query.

Can anybody tell what is proposed to be done with that $1,800 subscribed "for the purpose of protecting the town from fire?" Some of the aforesaid subscribers would like to know.

Bullion.

Beaudry has about 3,000 bars of bullion at his furnace, awaiting shipment. Belshaw's, Beaudry's and the Swansea works are all in active operation, turning out metal by the cord.

Special Notice.

Should you need either new goods, old goods, poor goods, rich goods or good goods, read the advertisement of J. S. Rothschild & Co., and then go there and buy some.

Horses and Wagon at Auction.

Mr. Cheney will, on Saturday next in this place, sell one wagon, three horses and some harness at public auction. See advertisement.

New Shop.

P. Monto has opened a blacksmith shop at Fish Springs. See advertisement.

Speed of Racers.

On all race tracks in the United States the mile is measured three feet from the inner rail, that being the supposed place where the inside horse will run. Now, if a circle be made one mile around and a horse runs four feet from it on the outside he will have run 25 feet and 1 inch further each mile, or 100 feet and four inches in four miles; indeed, if a circle be made of any given circumference, and a circle be made four feet from it on the outside, there will still be the same difference of 25 feet 1 inch, whether the inner circle be one yard round or 10,000. As race tracks are not made in circles, but usually as the Metairie is to wit: Two straight stretches of one quarter each, and two semi-circles uniting them of one quarter mile each, the same rule holds good; for as the two straight stretches are the same distance to every horse, whether he be one yard or ten yards from the inner fence, and the two semi circles making one whole circle, the same distance of 25 feet 1 inch to the mile will exist between horses running four feet from each other. As horses rarely, if ever, run lapped four miles, let us take an extreme case and one likely to occur often. Suppose one horse trails another for three and a half miles, and on entering the eighth or last turn of the four miles, he makes his brush and laps his opponent, and the race is declared a dead heat. In this case the outside horse would really have beaten the inner twelve and a half feet.

Lexington's four miles in 7:23¾ was run at the rate of 47 feet 7 inches and one line to the second. Longfellow's race in 7:19¾ was run at the rate of 48 feet 0 inch and three lines to the second. Now the nearest approach to these two races were Lecompte's and Idlewild's in 7:26 or 47 feet 4 inches and three lines to the second; so that 7:23¾ beats 7:20 106 feet 6 inches, and that 7:19¾ beats 7:26 296 feet.—New Orleans Picayune.

Using of Sulphur in Nests.

The powdered sulphur sold by all druggists is a cheap and handy preventive of parasites upon young chickens. After a hen has been setting till well established, sprinkle a small handful upon her eggs when she is off, and upon every part of the nest, and for a little distance all around it. Then when she goes on disturb her just enough to make her bristle her feathers, then dust another handful down to the skin upon her head, neck, and every part of her body not in contact with the nest, and do not omit to scatter a pinch under each wing. Then, when the chickens are hatched, there will be no vermin whatever to leave the hen and gather upon the young, as is frequently the case when no precautions are taken. One thorough application such as we have described will suffice.—Rural Home.

The Late Frederick W. Loring not an "Oarsman."

Most of the papers that have noticed the death of this estimable young man at the hands of the murderous Apaches, have spoken of him as being "one of the crew sent by Harvard University to meet the oarsmen of Oxford upon their own waters," and also as "the 'stroke' of two crews which successively won the flags from Yale on Lake Quinsigamund." These references are incorrect. When Mr. Loring was in this city, just previous to his departure on the Wheeler expedition, he called upon us, and in the course of conversation alluded to the embarassment he had often experienced on account of the similarity of names, and disclaimed all honor as an "oarsman." The celebrated "stroke" is still living and, we believe, in business in Boston.—Scientific Press.

A Newspaper Lawsuit.

Among the singular suits decided by the English Court of Chancery was that of the proprietor of The Times, Mr. Walter, against the proprietors of The Evening Mail to dislodge them from a privilege enjoyed for more than seventy years of using the news matter, type and machinery of The Times to print the editions of The Evening Mail. The arrangement dated back to 1790, when The Mail was first started, and gave that paper great advantage in getting out an evening paper of the best type, while it was fairly profitable to The Times. But in 1861 Mr. Walters gave notice to The Evening Mail proprietors that they were not to use the matter or type of The Times any longer. They demurred to the notice, claiming that the continued custom of three-quarters of a century gave them a prescriptive right to use the matter and type of The Times. The Chancery decision was in favor of The Times, on the ground that no written cantract was shown between the first Mr. Walter and the original proprietors of The Mail, and that mere custom, however long, conferred no such right as was claimed. The Evening Mail was ordered by the Vice Chancellor to be sold, but no one would buy it, with its privilege of using The Times detached, and the paper was ruined, thus reducing the number of London dailies by one.

Traveling Stones.

Many of our readers have doubtless heard of the famous traveling stones of Australia. Similiar curiosities have recently been found in Nevada, which are described as almost perfectly round, the majority of them as large as a walnut and of an irony nature. When distributed on the floor, table or other level surface, within two or three feet of each other, they immediately begin traveling toward a common center, and there huddle up in a bunch like a lot of eggs in a nest. A single stone removed to the distance of three and a half feet upon being released at once started off with wonderful and somewhat comical celerity, to join its fellows; taken away four or five feet it remains motionless. They are found in a region that is comparatively level, and is nothing but a bare rock. Scattered over this barren region are little basins, from a few feet to a rod or two in diameter, and it is in these that the rolling stones are found. They are from the size of a pea to five or six inches in diameter. The cause of these stones rolling together is doubtless to be found in the material of which they are composed, which appears to be loadstone or magnetic ron ore.—Gold Hill News.

Heavy Surf.

During this week of fearful and unbroken storm, the waters about the Bay of Monterey have been terribly agitated, keeping up a deep and trembling roar resembling much the shock of heavy ordnance. The people living near the foothills, more than a mile from the beach, say the earth trembled frequently as though tortured by an earthquake, and the roar was so great as to preclude sleep for two nights. The surf was seen to rise seventy-five feet just below the lighthouse where the breakers are obstructed by a reef of rocks. If the scene could have been presented without the accompanying storm, its sublimity would be appreciated, but when we are compelled to receive so much rain and consequent discomfiture, a little more moderation is preferable.—Santa Cruz Sentinel, December 23d.

Keep it Up.

A man having brutally tortured an ox, The Sacramento Bee says: "The man who could be guilty of such a deed deserves to be hung up by the thumbs until they are torn from his hands." Whereupon The Alta says "the man who could make such a barbarous suggestion should be flayed alive and soundly cowhided with the skin." Of course, after this barbarous suggestion, The Alta man would, if slowly roasted before a fire, acknowledge the justice of his punishment.—Figaro.

Housekeeping Hints.

All kinds of poultry and meat can be cooked quicker by adding to the water in which they are boiled a little vinegar or piece of lemon. By the use of an acid there will be considerable saving of fuel, as well as shortening of time. Its action is beneficial on old, tough meats, rendering them quite tender and easy to be digested. Tainted meats and fowls will lose their bad taste and odor if cooked in this way, and if not used too freely, no taste of it will be acquired.

In Roasting a Turkey,

If the legs and wings are covered with common clean writing paper, securely fastened over them, their parts will be as nicely cooked and juicy as any other part of the animal, and not dried up or burned, as when cooked without such a protection. The idea may not be new to all, but it was to us until we saw it in The Maine Farmer.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

Saturday,.....January 20, 1872.

—At a picnic last Summer, lunch was ready, and as all were gathering around the little piece of smooth ground that did duty as a table, and looking with eager anticipation at the dainties spread before us, McD——— apologetically exclaimed, "There I meant to have brought some calf's-foot jelly, but I couldn't catch the calf."

—A doctor lately informed his friends, in a large company, that he had been eight days in the country. "Yes," said one of the party, "it had been announced in The Times." "Ah," said the doctor, stretching his neck importantly, "pray in what terms?" "Well, as well as I can remember, in the following: 'There were last week twenty-seven deaths less than the week before!'"

OVER THE RAILROADS.

[Correspondence of The Inyo Independent.]

EBBITT HOUSE, WASHINGTON, D. C., December 27, 1871.

MESSRS. EDITORS: When I left San Francisco thought I would write you often, but have neglected to do so, but will now attempt to give you a short sketch of what I have seen and done en route to this city, including a short stay in our great city of San Francisco.

Had a pleasant time in the Bay city and shall long remember Dr. Regensburger, who, by the way, is a friend of Mr. Rhine, of your place. The Dr. called for me at the hotel often and many rides we had over the city, and many pleasant hours were spent with him and his friends. After getting through with business there I started for this city. Before I left I was asked to make the acquaintance of of Oregon, elected on the Democratic anti-subsidy platform. While we were at the junction of the railroad, east of Sacramento, there came aboard the train a large, fine looking gentleman who took a seat next to mine. Soon, in the course of conversation, it proved to be the Hon. Mr. Slater himself. In our talk I remarked that they (the people of Oregon) ought to have a railroad to tap the C. P. somewhere between Elko and Ogden. He said that was true but he had been elected in opposition to railroad subsidies, and of course could not ask for a grant of land in aid of such an enterprise. Here was a chance for a proposition: Ask for a land subsidy and bind the company receiving it to sell to actual settlers only, and in small parcels, say 160 acres to each. The people could not object to this. This met the views of the honorable gentlemen precisely, and now in this city the question is being agitated and will carry beyond a doubt. The road they must have, is the fixed conclusion.

I stopped at Reno to get my letters, and my friend came on the next morning. I started on again and when passing could see many familiar places, although I had been through that country but once since 1862; found the Great Central had imparted great life and prosperity to this once wild, sagebrush country. After passing many other towns finally reached Elko, where I hoped to stop long enough to meet some relatives but the conductor told me he should not stop but five minutes as the train was behind time. I left a few lines in the office for my friend. After returning to the cars who should I find but my friend and his youngest boy, bound for Salt Lake! From that on to Ogden, where he changed cars for Salt Lake, we passed the time so exclusively in talking of the past and the probable future, that I saw but little of the country through which we were flying.

Now again we pass on at lightning speed, too, as the train was still behind time. Found plenty of snow, and still snowing, but fortunately there was no wind, and the snow, although deep, was cleared by snow ploughs and did not drift much. We sailed clear and arrived at COUNCIL BLUFFS.

Here again I stopped to see Mr. Ira Platener, a relative of Mr. Shephard, near Independence. Found them in a very few minutes. They are among the oldest inhabitants, and finely fixed; and most estimable family too. Had hoped to see Mr. Gregg, formerly of your place, but he was absent. After remaining a few hours, I am again on the cars, and passing through a fine, prosperous country; many large corn-fields on either side of the road led me to inquire what corn was worth, and found that it was valued at 24 cents per bushel, and slow sale at that. The next place I stop at was Ottumwa, Iowa. Here I found a brother, who lives six miles from this place; rode out to his place on horseback; bitter cold weather.

A BIG FAMILY.

This was Saturday evening, and Sunday his children and their families came in to see me. How many do you think there were? Over 20! I could but look with astonishment on this great family, and remarked that they should meet on every Thanksgiving Day, and how happy would such meetings be. We had dinner and a pleasant time generally; he seems to be one of the most happy men on the globe. Monday morning, to Pella, about 25 miles, to another brother's, and here again met and visited with his great family. Staid here over night; talked, walked and met with other relations, one of whom is a niece; was when I left for California a small girl, now the mother of a large family. Some 25 years had elapsed since seeing any of those whom we met to-day. A pleasant night and part of the day Wednesday here and hereabouts. At 12 A. M. off again for Indiana. Was detained some on the way, for want of connection with the cars on the route that my ticket called for. We are constantly passing through almost a continuous corn-field in Iowa and Illinois. Hogs and cattle are fed here by the thousand. Hogs worth 3½ cents; cattle 4 cents; corn 25 cents, other things in proportion

OFF AGAIN

Many fine towns, and withall we have

BITTER COLD WEATHER.

I left my heavy blanket coat in Iowa, as people gazed at it so much, but when out of the cars feel the want of it. Finally we came to the Wabash river, and as we cross it on the massive bridge, was brought to reflect of days past when I went down that river on flat-boats, commonly called "broadhorns". The country looks quite familiar, and I could remember plowing up the prairie new lands; plowing corn, and raising and selling this article at 10 cents per bushel, New Orleans being our principal market. I shall now endeavor to take some notes from this on and dates. May write again soon.

CALIFORNIAN.

ON THE ROAD.

MESSRS. EDITORS: I left the Wabash River, Indiana, Friday, December 8, 1871, en route for Washington. There were a great many passengers aboard the train; three of us were associates, particularly—a gentleman that had been out in Kansas looking at the country, another from Philadelphia who has been out in Illinois buying grain, etc., and myself. Allow me to conjecture that as all kinds of trade is now going direct to the different large cities. There are freight trains owned by companies which they load at all points in the West and send straight through to the seaboard, regardless of the Lake City. Railroad companies charge mileage for transporting them over their roads, and from the time they are loaded they are never unloaded until they reach their destination. Formerly most of the productions of the West went to Chicago.

CHICAGO HAS SEEN ITS BEST DAYS,

CRAWFORDSVILLE, 8:30, A. M.

Here we change cars for Lafayette; after eating a hearty breakfast we hasten to the depot, expecting the train will start immediately. The depot, as is always the case, is out at the edge of town. After two hours waiting one of our party stepped up to the telegraph office in the same building and requested the operator for information of the train. A boy about 19 years old was the operator, and he was too busy to tell anything about it. After about another hour reported train off the track, but that the accommodation would be along in half an hour. This is a miserably managed road, although the first built in the State. Here a gentleman joined us with whom in years past I had had a slight acquaintance, making four chums of us. Soon came the train, and it was a long one, of freight cars, it would reach from your office to the Inyo House. Cars of hogs and stone coal, and away behind was a passenger car. After arranging more freight, got started at 2 P. M.; travel slow, stopping a number of times to add more cars of hogs; night approaches; all hungry; nothing since breakfast; temporary stop and off to a house and found bought one; ten cents; no change; told the lady would give her four bits for the three in sight; agreed to; handed her the coin; question, after turning the coin over doubtingly—"How much is this?" Answer—"Silver—50 cents." Conductor calls "all aboard," and away we went with the three pies, the lady looking after me with a suspicious air. At 7:30 arrived at Lafayette and soon found my brother and subsequently still another living seven miles out. All my relatives living in that section came in and we had a pleasant time, you may be sure. In the evening off to Lafayette, and Monday, with brother, start out north in the Grand Prairie about 30 miles, part of the way by rail, the rest in spring wagon. The greater part of the country we travel is under fence. Finally we came to a gate opening into one vast farm containing about

SCRAPING AN OLD FIDDLE

SOME PUMPKIN PIES;

THIRTY-TWO THOUSAND ACRES,

all enclosed and divided up into fields. A new railroad is being put through it, imaginary town sites being laid off, some building. Here I saw them laying railroad track which progressed rapidly, notwithstanding the snow and cold weather. On and about this farm reside many relatives, and hear I met our only sister now living; she, God bless her, is and always was the idol of our family. You can imagine our meeting and her surprise, as twenty-five years had passed since we met. Stay over night and see all, from house to house, on the following day; and, although the stay was short, we had a pleasant one. At 7 P. M. bid all good-bye, and the parting with my sister was hard. We go again to a railroad, at Kent, eight miles distant. Here we have a neice, who is blessed with a nice family and a husband, a merchant, that would stem the current of California life. Remain over night, and at 7 in the morning away on the cars to Lafayette, remaining over night at my brother's. Friday, 15th, go to the Postoffice and find no letters from home, which causes me to feel sad. But I my neice accompanying me to Indianapolis. This is a fine place, as is also Lafayette, both containing some jobbing houses that would do honor to any city. In search of some one to talk to I looked from car to car, and found two California miners. They had the usual large rolls of blankets, and the people would gaze at and feel of those blankets as if they were something wonderful. I thought of my coat in Iowa, but the three of us were at home together. We pass many towns, and at 3 P. M. stop for dinner at Hamilton, Ohio. Thence to Cincinati, arriving almost at dark and saw but little of this beautiful city. Here my California travelers stop. On the cars and off again at 10 P. M. With trunk in hand I proceeded to the back part of a sleeping car and sat down, near an elderly gent next seat in front.

START FOR WASHINGTON,

Californian to Elderly Gent—"Does this train go direct to Washington?"

Elderly Gent to Californian—"Sleeping car goes."

Cal.—"You, I suppose, reside at Cincinnati?"

E. G.—In Kentucky."

Cal.—"You go through to Washington?"

E. G.—"Yes."

You see I was after finding out what he was; I thought that from the way he swelled and strutted about that he savored of honors, and soon found out that it was

SENATOR DAVIS, OF KENTUCKY.

I pulled out The Harpers' Weekly, prepared a light, and began perusing it. At this juncture the conductor came along to the Elderly Gent, saying "ticket, sir." The Senator handed him a section ticket, and on these tickets are printed instructions to the holder not to separate them, that when separated they are of no value—and this one was torn off. The conductor remarked that he was instructed not to receive those tickets when torn off.

Elderly Gent.—"I bought and paid my money for that ticket, and will ride on this car."

Conductor.—"Nothing was said about your riding; I am a hired man and should obey my instructions, and this places me in an unpleasant position."

E. G., raising to his feet and repeating as before in a loud tone and with gestures—"I will ride, and if you put me off you will do it at your peril!"

C.—"Nonsense! Nothing has been said about putting you off, but since you are so unreasonable I would do it, were it not for your age," and turned and left him. Now it was whispered around that this was "Senator Davis, of Kentucky." I would have given something if the Harper's could have sketched him in this heated state, in one of their beautiful representations.

In the morning I saw some of the sights of the great and honored State of Virginia. More anon.

CALIFORNIAN.

ON THE CARS, West Virginia, December 16, 1871.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—I left you last night near Cincinnati, Ohio, and arranged to be awakened early in the morning. It is pleasant but cold, and some snow on the ground. We are now traveling through West Virginia, and a miserable looking country it is, to me at least. The dwelling houses are hewn logs, and built no telling how long, with a few old dilapidated negro huts about each dwelling. They show the effects of old Abe's Proclamation—are empty. The rail fences seem to have stood until they have sunk down from age. The land being poor, in former times the production of this country was, I am told, principally negroes, but now seems to be railroad ties and staves for barrels; the latter are shipped to the oil regions, or some kind of regions. When we come to a town there is quite a population, mostly machine shops and some manufactory that support them. We were pointed out the house John Brown occupied at Harper's Ferry for quarters when he put the people in commotion with 18 men, and they turned out their great cavalry in defense of the country and finally, as history will tell us, subdued the enemy.

This is a nice town, and we now see some nice country; not very extensive from appearance; but on we go at lightning speed, passing many towns and some farms. Almost forgot to tell you about Senator Davis. He got up at 10 A. M., and your California Yankee had some talk with him. You know it is a great weakness of mankind, especially your humble servant, to get to talk and toady to great men and rich men. I found I had taken his measure when in conversation with the conductor, and was not mistaken in the man. On we go and night comes and we find ourselves in the

GREAT POLITICAL DEPOT,

Washington, D. C., as such it seems to be.

Just before stepping off the cars I enquired of a fellow traveller, Dr. Scott, for a good house, and he gave me the name of Ebbitt as being one, and of course all Californians are supposed to go the best hotel. Next day, Sunday, went with some others to church, and when we returned two traveling companions and myself rode East, West, North and South, as far as possible, on the street cars. Then got a buggy and traveled all about, and were shown by the driver, and names learned of all the noted places. Monday came, and as I had a little business to attend to, that was the first thing, as it would take but a few minutes; but to my surprise it was not so easy got along with it, and I began to think my case was something like the old man that came from North Carolina, some time since. He rode all the way, and when he fairly reached here went up to a stable, and the hostler asked if he would have his horse put up, said no, he only had a small claim against the Government to collect, and going out soon, would hitch to the post there. The horse stood there all day and all night. Finally Mr. Hostler took pity on the beast and put him up. The old man staid until he wore out his Sunday clothes, money gone, and had to leave without making his collection. I returned to the hotel and sat considering the matter seriously, and began to nerve up for the occasion, Finally an old friend stepped in and advised me to take a little time, but to crowd gently and keep asking and keep doing. This gave new courage and I concluded to follow his advice, and thought in the course pointed out I could see hope. Concluded I would now go to the Congressional Hall and look around through that GREAT, FINE BUILDING.

Got on the street cars, as I felt rather feeble after my morning's defeat, and soon arrived. On entering the door found it was warm and pleasant, being warmed with heated air. I pulled off my overcoat, threw it over my arm, and strolled about through some of its rooms, viewing the beautiful work and massive marble finish, and was brought to say that when we entertain the idea for a moment of moving the Capitol from Washington it was all folly. This building alone cost over $12,000,000. Then looking East from the dome about 100 rods there was another, the Postoffice, and as I had occasion to see the inside of in the morning, struck me quite forcibly. Across the street from that the Patent Office Department. West again, about 80 rods, the Great Treasury building. Further on the White House; still further on Navy Department, yet further on the Army Department. All these are massive buildings, with magnificent marble finish. I pause again and think for a moment. Looking and moving slowly along, who should I meet but our old friend Elliott; we were both glad to meet each other. We sat down and talked, he had many inquiries about you and many others. Finally he said: "Come, let us go to the Chamber of the House," and we went, and took seats. He pointed out many whom I knew, and I remarked that some were sent here that I called rather poor material. Alluding to the affair on the cars, he thought I must be mistaken and that it was some other man asking me if I could go to the Senate Chamber and point him out. I said I could, and we went. There set the sage Senator; I pointed him out, "Here, Elliott, we are to expect fine talent, I suppose," Casting my eyes about, I could see Stewart and Nye of Nevada, Casserly of California, and as one of the Senators would rise, would ask Elliott who he was, and he would tell me. Sumner was one; he is a different man from what I supposed he was; when he speaks you can see that his very voice and action causes you to conclude he is honest in what he tells you. I supposed he was a feeble looking old man, but he is large and rather fine looking and inclines to get fleshy as he gets older. One Senator kept hitching about in his seat, and finally snapped his fingers, a page came and he, I suppose, ordered a glass of water as one soon came; could see, also, he would soon speak, and

SEEMED TO BE GETTING PRETTY FULL.

Soon he got the floor, and I inquired of Elliott who that was, and found it to be Trumbull, of Illinois. He is rather slim, of medium size, thin lips and seemed to press them together before speaking, and is a nervous kind of a man. He began, and using a California phrase I thought there was some brains. He had a paper in his hand and commenced eulogizing this bill at the same time holding up the paper. His hand trembled; this gave his discourse an earnestness. Soon I found it was the old Amnesty bill, a general pardon to Rebs, from last session, that Sumner then branded

A GRAND CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

Then the same said Trumbull, if memory serves me right, opposed it; his voice and manner was that of a Senator, his voice was rather too sweet to carry with it conviction. Thought he wanted to embrace somebody. I soon saw the old thing; he proposed to loan his fingers to our brothers down where Sherman went to pull out roasted sweet potatoes. Could see in every move "I want to be President," and will Brother Democrats offer him the nomination, have no doubt he would have kissed them then and there, and I could but think what a meeting it would be; could imagine I saw our Democrats coming towards him, and thought of old camping grounds in '49, when on the way to California. After crossing deserts and coming to such noted places we would hold our noses—dead carcasses about. But as I don't admire the pretended sincerity of this speech; soon got tired, and began to reflect that we should have in that Senate Chamber sincerity only, and the country must and would see and hold this man up in his true light, should he get the nomination for President, I think honest Democrats will never permit such action in the party. They would rather suffer defeat over and over again, than to approach the camping ground of 1872 with this carcass on it. We leave for the hotel.

BUSINESS.

On the following morning, start out again, and in passing it I proposed to call at my place of business. Dropped in and set awhile, and as good recommendations were brought and handed in, am somebody, to say the least of it; but I don't swell any, like our would-be great man on the cars. We talk about California; some of the wants of a new country, and finally, for fear we try our friends' patience too much, and they become nervous at our sight, go on up to the Capitol, and hear them speaking in the Senate. To-day they have something to do with several bills, among them the Civil Service bill. The Democrats seem to be hunting for a mouse in the sack, peeking about everywhere; but soon a committee is appointed to investigate, and now the powers of the committee are canvassed, and the conclusion is that full powers are given. Now our great Senator from Kentucky rises and offers a resolution instructing the committee to investigate as to presents given to the President, and his appointment of the givers to high places. He seemed to think that he had found a large rat, and the great oratorical powers which he displayed on this occasion was almost equal to that little incident on the cars. I could but think that if this was but an age of ghosts and that of the great, noble and patriotic statesman should come and see this man occupying his place in that chamber, it would proclaim "My God!" and sink again, never to arise. Things are coming to a pretty pass, when such men as this attempt to bring scandal on our good and great soldier and President, Gen. Grant. I will say, Messrs. Editors, to you and all reasonable men, that we must not view men because of their position as Senators; not weigh them and take them by the pound, but sample them as to quality, for some of them are mere imitations of men. I now leave the Senate Chamber and call on Secretary Gorham; become acquainted with several Senators and members of the House. Met our Member of Congress,

HENRY CLAY,

S. O. HOUGHTON.

He is very much of a man. On the return to the hotel I stop a few minutes on the way. Am getting very well acquainted now, am somewhat attached to the city and feel almost at home. I have learned a lesson—that patience and perseverance, said a great and good man, will accomplish anything within the reach of man. I leave the Halls of Congress not to call again, as they will soon adjourn for the Holidays.

SUNDAY, December 24.

In company with Elliot and other friends, attended the Methodist church, and listened to the finest sermon I ever heard. The speaker was an orator; had the use of language to perfection. General Grant and family attend this church. Remained in my room the rest of the day and evening, as the cold sits close upon me.

CHRISTMAS

is a pleasant, day the snow is disappearing; stroll down Pennsylvania Avenue to hear the bands and watch the display of hundreds of buggies and fine turnouts and the many on foot, all seeming to vie with each other to see who could enjoy themselves the most. Am sorry to say that many showed they had been in close communion with Old Bourbon.

PLACE FOR NO. 1 CORRESPONDENTS.

All correspondents that stand No. 1 congregate at the Pacific Union Corresponding Office, 10 Pennsylvania Avenue. You know, Messrs. Editors, that when great men meet the very atmosphere is impregnated with talent and bright ideas shoot, and your correspondent is now standing No. 1., and his productions sought after. It is almost too public for me, but if there are not too many calling shall consider it my place of business.

WEDNESDAY, December 27.

Your correspondent has obtained about all the information he can in this city, and thinks he will travel soon. I have about perfected all the business in hand for your locality; have assisted in getting

MORE MAIL FACILITIES FOR INYO.

You will, it is to be hoped, have one mail per week from Los Angeles, one from Visalia; likely, but not positive, however, three from Aurora, and a daily from Cerro Gordo to Independence. The next thing you should get is a telegraph from Aurora, and if you go to work with a will can easily accomplish it. Just write to the Stage agent to negotiate for the wire and refer him to your correspondent to assist in extending it and we will put a large coil on the stage and pay it out as the stage travels, like a cable from a flat boat. I know how that is done and we will soon reach your place. Now, is there any great work about that? We can then receive Senator Trumbull's next speech over the wire at once; this of itself, if not too old when it reaches us, will pay for all the trouble. Should you adopt the above plan and wish to have messages before I reach Reno get Dow, of the telegraph line, to get the wire and I'll put it on the stage and pay it out.

A PROPOSITION.

The Postmaster General has to-day, the 20th, addressed a letter to Mr. Robinson, mail contractor from Los Angeles to Havilah, making him an offer which I think Mr. R. will accept. It is for him to extend his route from its present terminus at Willow Springs to Lone Pine. This with the other mail increase granted your valley, will bring you in connection with the outside world in very good shape. Now, Messrs. Editors, write me on receipt of this to Reno, per express, giving the name if you can of our telegraph company, and I will see the managers and endeavor to have the line extended from Aurora to your place.

LITIGANT PAPER FOR INYO COUNTY,

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY

CHALFANT & PARKER.

JAS. E. PARKER | P. A. CHALFANT

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.;

Saturday,.....January 27, 1872.

A WORD OF EXPLANATION.

Owing to the pressure of much interesting matter out of the usual line upon our somewhat limited space, we are compelled to forego our customary amount of news items, "squiblets," etc. Also, to defer the publication of several interesting communications; these will appear next week. We present a larger amount of reading matter than usual, the most of which will doubtless be highly appreciated by a majority of our readers.

The State Printing

Some of the leading papers are strongly advocating the abrogation of the office of State Printer, and the substitution of the contract system. If the repeal of the law is to take effect from the day of its passage or during the term of the present incumbent, we would consider it an unjustifiable violation of an implied, if not a positive contract, just the same as to deprive any other State officer of his position. It is a fat office without doubt, and the State has had to pay more for the work than it was worth, but as this is mostly due to the practice of making too much "fat" the evil can as easily be checked under fixed rates, as at present, as if the work were to be let to the lowest bidder. In the latter case there is a better chance for swindles through collusion with officials and in other ways, even though nominally the work was to be done for half the present rates. The opportunities for making "fat" are the same in either case. There is not a rule or principle connected with this printing that can not be distinctly specified in law beforehand so that a non-compliance with its requirements would be perfectly obvious, even to an officer who was not a printing expert. The adoption of the contract system is only to open a field for bribery and corruption in obtaining contracts, while with a State Printer, the whole business can be definitely limited, so that swindles are no easier accomplished than in any other State office.

Look to It.

Mr. Whiting, of the Assembly, writes us in effect that he and his colleagues are ready and anxious to see to any legislation that our people here may deem best for their interests. Mr. Whiting very reasonably expects an explicit statement of the object desired, which is best effected by sending a bill ready drawn, accompanied by a petition as numerously signed as possible.

We have in a previous issue specifically named a number of points intimately connected with our county's welfare that should be brought before the Legislature, and in so doing have good reason to know that we expressed the general desire. But something more is required; the gentlemen who represent this county have no personal knowledge of our wants, and naturally enough want some definite expression of the general desire, and the duty will devolve upon parties directly interested to frame the bills they wish passed, or at least plainly state the object desired and forward at once to Mr. Whiting or some of his colleagues. These things should receive immediate attention or it will soon be too late.

Not Encouraging.

Contrary to reasonable expectation the passage of a no-fence law hangs fire, and the chances are that the nearly unanimous wish of the people in this respect will be ignored. The mustang lords maintain an effective lobby at Sacramento, and will probably demonstrate the fact that each one of them, resolutely working in his own interest, is fully equal to five thousand of his opponents who sit quietly down and trust to luck. The whole number of men in the State whose interests lead them to oppose this law is said not to exceed one hundred and fifty; but they have money and know how to use it. Or, possibly our Legislators became intimidated and generally demoralized when the great Tulare orator, Senator Fowler, made that speech in which he told them that if they passed the no-fence law he would go home and they might go to—a place a little warmer than Tulare, perhaps.

Still at It.!

It is again snowing and blowing on the Union Pacific Railroad, and trains are being delayed in consequence.

HERE AND ELSEWHERE.

The year just past will be noted in history for its many remarkable and extraordinary events, with the most of which must ever be associated in the hearts of the present generation, memories of the most painful character. Without noting the destruction and distress wrought by human agency, it will be seen that the elements, wide spread epidemics and famine, one or all, have laid heavy hands upon almost every people on the earth. In the countries of the East millions have perished from famine, and millions more from contagious disease. In our own fair land scarcely a State, and we might say, scarcely a county but has been the scene of some unusual public calamity—fires, floods, drought, tornadoes, extreme cold, sand storms, epidemics—all have made their marks. Our own State is no exception, for here too, our own county almost the only exception, destructive winds and sandstorms, drought and floods have left their imprint. In view of all these, the perfect immunity which our own particular section has enjoyed from all general causes of distress and discomfort is as remarkable as it is exceptionable, and while sorrowing for the misfortunes of the less favored, should be a source of pride and congratulation no less than of heart-felt thankfulness to us all. Let all those who are wont to consider this out-of-the-way corner of the world a mere temporary abiding place, to be sooner or later exchanged for one of supposed superior advantages, give these facts due consideration. Where is there a locality that can show a more equable, pleasant climate, a more generous soil or other superiorities without greater corresponding disadvantages; that possesses within itself a greater number of the elements of prosperity and groundwork of happiness? Our mountains, rugged and forbidding as they are, will continue to yield stores of gold and silver for a hundred years to come and then be hardly broached. Our soil will produce anything that grows in the temperate zone, and there is scarcely a void in the sum of human desires that may not in time be compassed in a country possessed of so many natural advantages, by an energetic people determined to make the most of it.

How the Cold Affected Buffaloes.

It appears that buffaloes were much discommoded by the late terrible snowstorm on the Pacific railroad. While one train of cars was imbedded in the snow, these animals gathered to the lee side for shelter. A writer says: "If anyone felt so disposed he might, from his seat in the car, pop them over with his revolver—the rest would not move. They could not be driven away by engine whistling or the human voice, but crowded their shaggy sides close up to the cars, and there stood with bowed heads for the storm to pass. Many were seen to fall down in their tracks, dead from cold, and when at last the train was dug out and moved off, the track was lined with these huge, shaggy, frozen carcasses. We think a robe a luxury in winter—and so it is. Imagine the severity of the weather when the animal which furnishes the robe freezes to death under his own natural protection!"

A Noted Man Murdered.

James Fisk, the great railroad king, was brutally murdered in New York in the Grand Central Hotel, by Edward B. Stokes. Fisk was ascending the stairway of the hotel on the afternoon of the 6th instant, when his assassinator fired at him from the top of the stairs, inflicting two wounds from which he died the following day. There are but few men in America more generally known than James Fisk. Possessed of immense wealth and an indomitable will, he hesitated not to suborn juries, bribe Judges and Legislatures to consummate roguery. His boldness and generous nature in some degree compensated his evil ways, and his sneaking and cowardly taking off has awakened a more general sympathy in his favor than would otherwise have been possible. Stokes was the paramour of Miss Mansfield, the notorious woman with whom Fisk was engaged as defendant in a blackmailing law suit. Stokes has been indicted and will have his trial next month.

Another Great Man Gone.

Maj. Gen. Halleck, of the United States army, died at Louisville, January 12. Gen. Halleck was so generally and favorably known that any special notice of his many great and important services to his country during its most trying ordeal may be deemed superogatory. His name will go down in history as one of the great men of his day.

Thanks.

We tender our thanks to Mr. P. B Bacon, of the Assembly, for numerous public documents.

THE MINER'S GRAVE.

What is the sagebrush saying?
Oh, partner, I hear it still!
Hark! 'tis the wild sage saying:
"A lone, lone grave on the hill."

Write, pard, and tell them only
I tried, I waited and tried;
I lived in the hills so lonely,
Faltered, and fainted, and died.

Hark! hark! to the sagebrush saying:
"Broke miner, sick miner, come!"
The wind thro' the wild sage playing,
Write home, and tell them at home.

What are the rude boys doing,
Away from the shaft and the mine?
Ah, they are watching and viewing
The form in the box of pine.

Sadly, kindly and slowly
They bear him forever away,
To ground that God made holy
'Ere ever a priest could pray.

What is the sagebrush saying?
Oh, partner, I hear it still!
Hark! 'tis the wild sage saying:
"A lone, lone grave on the hill."

Disgraceful.

A demonstration by German residents in the North Division of Chicago against an ordinance on its passage by the Board of Aldermen, degenerated into a disgraceful mob. The odinance forbids the erection of wooden buildings within the fire limits, and the mob, lead by A. C. Hessing, editor of The Zeitung, were determined to prevent its adoption, by force if needs be. Some members of the Board had to escape by the back doors and windows, while the mob, which could no longer be controlled by the leaders, smashed things up generally. It is expected the obnoxious ordinance will pass, notwithstanding.

Dangerously Ill.

We are sorry to note that Philip Lynch, Esq., the genial editor and proprietor of The Gold Hill News, is very seriously ill from a continued attack of hemorrhage of the stomach. At latest accounts, however, he was slowly improving.

Hens in Place of Dogs.

There is hardly a family that does not throw away enough table scraps to feed at least half a dozen hens, and many that keep a nuisance in the shape of a dog, that does no good, but eats more than a dozen good hens, complain that they can not afford to keep hens. One dog in a neighborhood is generally a greater trouble to the neighbors than a flock of hens would be, for if hens are well fed at home they will rarely go away. But who ever saw a dog that was not a pest, running across the newly made garden, and sticking his nose into everything? Kill off the curs and give the food to the hens, and you will find pleasure as well as profit in so doing. We wish there was a tax of $100 on every dog in the country. Those that are of value as watch dogs could be retained, while the host of snarling, dirty curs would give way to some more useful and less troublesome pet.—Poultry Standard.

Homicide in Cerro Gordo.

On the morning of the 22d instant, a Mexican named Albino Alvarez, while breaking in a window of Mrs. Moore's brothel, Cerro Gordo, received a shot through the right breast, which caused his death in about an hour afterwards. It subsequently appeared that another Mexican named Rosalia Garcia was occupying a bed with Mrs. Moore, standing near the window broken in by Alvarez, some of the debris falling on the bed. The shooting occurred immediately after, and but little doubt exists that it was done by Alvarez. Deputy Sheriff Peterson was soon on the ground and promptly arrested Garcia, taking him up to D. Williams' saloon for safe keeping. Some thirty Mexicans held a meeting, and after passing and reducing to writing a resolution in Spanish, marched in a body up to where Peterson had the prisoner, and presented the paper to the officer. As he could not read the document, he at once concluded from the attending circumstances that it was a demand for the prisoner, and at once drew his revolver and ordered the crowd to stand back. One or two attempted to force their way in, but as Peterson showed such a commendable determination to do his duty and protect his prisoner at all hazards, the mob were forced to fall back and give it up. Some of them afterwards stated that their only object was to ascertain if Garcia was under proper arrest, etc. The following day, as there was no magistrate in Cerro Gordo, Garcia was taken before Justice Stratton, at Lone Pine, for examination, P. Reddy, Esq., appearing for the defense. Peterson was the only witness examined. The shooting was done before he reached the ground, and as the pistol found upon Garcia was still loaded, the prisoner was discharged for want of evidence.

School Report.

The school in this place closed a six months' term Tuesday last. The pupils generally have advanced in their studies finely, and Mr. Hardy's management as teacher has been eminently satisfactory. It will be remembered that a union school between Independence and Milton districts was agreed upon, the term of which was to be nine months, the first six of which was to be held in this place, the remaining three at the Milton school, and each term free alike to the children of both districts. In accordance with that arrangement the term at the Milton district began last Wednesday. The school house there, by the way, is too small to properly accommodate all the pupils likely to attend. As our school facilities here are limited at the best, and no positive assurance that there will be any at all for some months after the present term, it behooves parents to make the most of it. It is to be hoped that the parties on whom the duty rightfully devolves will see that proper accommodations for all that wish to attend are provided. Following is a summary of the teacher's report for the term just ended: Average number of days attendance, each month, 501; days absence, 49; tardiness, 54. Whole number of boys enrolled, 20; number of girls, 14; average number of pupils during term, 30.7; percentage of attendance, 89.7. Following, in alphabetical order, are the names of pupils who have attained a place upon the roll of honor by unexceptionable deportment, regular attendance and correct recitations: Alice Clark, Edwin Earl, Guy C. Earl, Lafayette Gill, Geo. M. Gill, H. D. Gill, Evva P. Hardy, Joseph Harris, Alice Rhine, Bertram Rhine, Joseph Schalten, Louie Schalten, Hattie Schalten and Valentine Warden.

A New Programme.

It is with the profoundest gratification that we call attention to the fact that a new ownership and management has obtained on the northern stage line, running from this place to Aurora, as will be seen by advertisement elsewhere—Messrs. J. S. Ullrick and H. C. Wrights having purchased the same. The first named gentleman is an "old stager," owning a line between Virginia and Carson, and thoroughly understanding the business. A reduction of $5 on the fare is the first break made by these gentlemen, and as soon as possible a tri-weekly will be run in place of the present semi-weekly. Passengers will be put through to Aurora in two days, and on to the cars without stoppage, as the line is to be thoroughly re-stocked and fitted up. The new proprietors are liberal, square-minded, level-headed men, and will undoubtedly control a large portion of the passenger travel.

Mining Operations in Cerro Gordo.

Although we have no more strikes or extraordinary operations to chronicle, the general progress and prospects of Cerro Gordo are eminently satisfactory. There is enough snow there to furnish plenty of water, so that the expense of having it packed in from a distance is entirely obviated. Except for temporary stops for repairs, both furnaces are in constant operation. M. J. Byrne, contractor in the tunnel on the Front, is taking out large quantities of good ore. Barrows & Dodd are doing equally as well on the Union, taking out hard ore, and Beaudry & Belshaw are extracting quantities of soft ore from the Jefferson. Work is being prosecuted night and day on the Omega tunnel by contractors, all other hands having been drawn off.

The L. A. & S. P. Railroad.

Our business men will take note of the new advertisement of the Los Angeles & San Pedro Railroad, which appears in this issue. As almost every pound of Inyo's exports and imports pass over this road, the public will read the advertisement with interest, and be gratified to know that the time-table, etc., is permanently placed in our columns. We conceive it would be eminently proper for numerous other Los Angeles institutions to follow the example of the worthy Superintendent of this road in thus placing their business announcements before the people of the "Owens River country."

The Weather.

In another part of this issue will be found an article slightly laudatory of our climate, but in view of later weather developments, we are constrained to qualify the opinon therein expressed. For the past three or four days we have been favored with a gale, cold and strong, from the North, which excels that anticipated by Patrick Henry inasmuch as this brings clashing of bands as well as arms. Though the sun shines brightly the mercury has got very low down for this latitude, and there is no indications of its rising soon.

Aurora Letter.

We have a couple of interesting communications from Aurora which will appear next week, having been received too late for this issue.

AT LAST.

The Officers of the Wheeler Expedition Rise to Explain.

Our regular readers are doubtless familiar with the matter of the disappearance of the two guides engaged by Lieutenant Wheeler, and the fragmentary light which has been thrown upon the subject by his employees and others connected with the expedition, as it has been from time to time reported upon by this paper. William Egan and C. F. R. Hahn, employed as guides for Wheeler, were so widely known that their fate became a matter of the utmost general interest, and without regard to their character, much inquiry would naturally arise about men suddenly disappearing under circumstances so singular.

After the finding of Hahn's effects, the publication of Monto's statements, and the reflection that Egan was yet unreported some four different parties were despatched from the county in search of tidings of the lost men. In connection with the terribly damaging (if creditable) testimony of Monto, were numerous items from here and there, all severely reflecting upon the course and expressions in regard to the guides of the officers of the exploring party Then, in further condemnation, came the absolutely unaccountable effusion of Loring's, which unfortunately appeared to reflect a sentiment disparaging to Egan—and that he had gone away and "never would come back."

In our treatment of the subject, we have had occasion to strongly censure Wheeler, though not "broadly hinting that they (the guides) were murdered," as a cotemporary affirms; that was done by one of Wheeler's ex-employees, and should have been so understood.

Major Egbert, commanding at Camp Independence, has from the first taken a lively interest in the matter, and to him is due the fact that the public are placed in possession of any other information from which to form its conclusions. Lieutenant Lyle has addressed the Major in the following lengthy statements, which we copy entire, by the polite permission of that officer.

It will be seen that Lyle accords to Mr. Egan praise befitting a man so universally esteemed. Upon the harmless but erratic Hahn he casts reflections, the pertinence or injustice of which will doubtless be duly considered by the friends of the old linguist, miner and mountaineer. Although Lieutenant Lyle acknowledges amenability to no [newspaper] authority, we are constramed to accept his statements as facts, and as such we are willing to give them, content to let the matter rest until "the sea shall give up its dead" and the mysteries of the Valley of Death are unraveled:

ENGINEER OFFICE,
EXPLORATIONS IN NEVADA AND ARIZONA,
San Francisco, Cal.

MAJOR H. C. EGBERT, Commanding Post, Camp Independence, Cal.: Dear Sir—In regard to the loss of Hahn and Egan, who were guides for parties of Lieutenant Wheeler's expedition, I will state to you the facts in both cases, as far as I can recollect them at this time. The dates and details, in both instances, are embraced in my journal, where every event is noted upon the day of occurrence, and this, up to the present, has not reached me, having been shipped from Prescott, Arizona Territory, but all will appear in my official report to the commanding officer of the expedition.

Hahn's case is simply this: On the 21st of July, I think, I started with a small party to cross the Inyo range of mountains and reach Grape Vine Springs, and thence to communicate with Lieutenant Wheeler and party at or near what was known as the Heart of the Amargosa. Mr. Hahn was to act as our guide; he told me he had been across there and could lead me to Grape Vine Springs, which was my first objective point. On the 21st we crossed Owens river and went up Mazurka Canyon, camping at a spring on west slope of the Inyo Mountains that night, and next day crossed summit and camped near Waucoba District. I got into camp early, and Hahn said he would walk down to the mouth of the canyon and take a look at the country. He went and came back before sundown. After supper he, Hahn, said he would like to go ahead a day's march and see about grass and especially water. I took him aside and said, "Mr. Hahn, I want you to tell me exactly what you know about the country to be traversed, and how far you think it is to Grape Vine Springs." He hesitated a moment and then said, "It is about 30 miles; and if you would allow me, I should like to go ahead one day's march and see about water, etc., and I can start in the morning and go there and back by 10 o'clock to-morrow night." I replied, "I don't think you can do it, I believe it is about 60 miles distant; I don't think you will get back before 2 A. M. next morning. But if you think it best I will let you go ahead and I will move down the canyon three miles and will wait for your return till 5 A. M. day after to-morrow, and if you are not back by that time I will start out and follow your trail. I will send Kohler and an Indian, Sam, along, and you can take them along and leave them at Grape Vine till I arrive." Kohler had orders to make collections in natural history at that point, while awaiting my arrival. Accordingly next morning I sent Hahn with my chief topographer down to the mouth of the canyon, and told him to point out some topographical points to the latter, and afterwards to join Kohler and Sam and go to Grape Vine, and to be sure and return that night, if he had to ride all night. I again asked him to give me some idea of the physical features of the country I should have to traverse, but failed to elicit any definite information whatever. I believed at that time, and am still firm in the belief that Hahn knew nothing of the country beyond the Inyo range, that we had to cross to reach Grape Vine Springs.

I waited according to agreement till 5 o'clock next day for Hahn's return, but he did not return. I left camp at that hour and started out on his trail, which led in a northeasterly direction. The trail of the three animals was often scattered, and led very tortuously over extremely rough ground, often being difficult to follow. A great part of the time I had to go on foot to follow it, but the extreme heat and hot, burning winds coming off the heated sand hills which we passed in the forenoon caused the animals to travel slowly, and all of us to suffer much from thirst; we had some water, but had to use it sparingly. In the evening we had followed the trail to a rugged peak, up which it led. I got the train partly up and there halted. I climbed to the top and could see no practicable pass from that point by which I could cross over, or even reach the summit. I descended, and my animal being much fatigued I camped and waited till dawn, when I set out to find a passage, which I found about 9 A. M. I brought the train up this canyon, and soon struck the trail of Kohler, Hahn and Sam. Their tracks were easily recognized—Sam was on a horse, Kohler's mule had a very small foot and Hahn's a pretty large one. This mule's track was with the others till near the summit. Here they diverged, and Sam's and Kohler's tracks were seen together, and Hahn's had passed, I think, to the right of a butte near the summit. They again joined in a canyon, whence they made the descent into the northwest arm of Death Valley. This canyon was very difficult to pass, on account of falls from 12 to 30 feet high, but with great labor we made the descent. Our animals and ourselves were at this time suffering severely from thirst, the heat in the narrow canyon being excessive. I told the men of my party that we should have to go for water, as the animals could not stand it much longer. It was about three in the afternoon, and we had passed all the falls and were going down to the valley. About 4 o'clock my packer, who was riding at the head of the train, called out "water." He pointed up to a green spot on the hillside to the northwest of the mouth of the canyon. I left the trail, which turned to the left around the bluff to go down into the valley and in direction of Grape Vine Mountain, and went off to the spring. Myself and two more of my party were barefooted and footsore, and the animals were very weak from lack of forage and water.

I calculated that we were about 20 miles from Gold Mountain, which lay to the east and a little north of us. I concluded from not meeting Hahn that he had either gone on with Kohler or, finding out that he had undertaken a project which he was unable to carry through, had deserted us and left us to our fate. I thought probably I might find him and Kohler at Gold Mountain. I set out for that point next morning, and while crossing the head of the valley we crossed a mule track bearing northward toward Tule Canyon and Palmetto. This track all the party pronounced to be that of Hahn's mule; I thought so myself. I arrived at Gold Mountain about 4 o'clock that evening, and upon inquiring of Mr. T. I. Shaw, who lived there, he said, much to my surprise, that he had not seen or heard anything of either Hahn or Kohler.

My animals were so used up, as were also myself and party, that to start for Amargosa without a day's rest was out of the question. Mr. Shaw kindly volunteered to convey a message to Lieutenant Wheeler at that point, and did so. In the note I informed Lieutenant Wheeler of the absence of Hahn and his supposed desertion, if he had not gone on with Kohler. I still thought that probably Hahn, finding no passage into Death Valley that was practicable for pack mules, would come to the conclusion that I would follow his trail to where they crossed over the range and would then turn back, and thought he had better try to reach Lieutenant Wheeler and guide him in. Mr Shaw succeeded in finding Lieutenant Wheeler, and the latter wrote back to me a note saying Kohler had joined him, but Hahn had not been seen. I then thought that Hahn had deserted without doubt, as he had told me on two different occasions that he had led a party of citizens into Death Valley and left them to shift for themselves.

A few days after, on going down Tule Canyon, I saw the track of a single mule going toward Tule Spring, and within 7 miles of it. Miles, the packer, and myself both thought it was the track of Hahn's mule; when I saw this I concluded that, being well mounted and fitted out and having led us into a dilemma from which he could not extricate us, had deserted and gone for the White Mountains, he having expressed a strong desire to prospect in that range. A few days after I led Lieutenant Wheeler's party via Palmetto to Owens River Valley and Camp Independence, where I met Lieutenant Wheeler, he having gone across to the latter place. I gave him a verbal report in detail in regard to Hahn and my trip to meet him, and upon consultation with him, taking into consideration information which Lieutenant Wheeler had himself obtained regarding Hahn, we concluded that he had deserted my party and that no further action was called for in his case.

I make this detailed statement to you for your information, and in vindication of the kindly interest you have shown in behalf of both Lieutenant Wheeler and myself, which I assure you we both fully appreciate and feel very grateful for, and not because that either Lieutenant Wheeler or myself are amenable or accountable to any authority except that to which all these reports will be rendered in due time.

And now in regard to

THE CASE OF MR. EGAN.

His fate has been the cause of great pain and anxiety to me as well as to Lieutenant Wheeler. Mr. Egan was a gentleman of birth, possessed of talents, good sense and great experience and discrimination, which, coupled with a fine education, made him a man at once to be respected and admired. Though our acquaintance had been short, I had learned to have a great respect for him, which rendered our mutual relations both agreeable and interesting. From the time he joined me at Swansea to the date of his departure from Rose Spring, we were constantly together, and I had ample opportunity to observe his many excellent qualities.

In Mr. Egan I had the greatest confidence; he acted as guide to my party from Swansea to Rose Springs, a point near Telescope Peak, on west side of Telescope Range. He led me to that point without difficulty, and displayed so much intelligence and such a varied and correct detailed knowledge of the physical features of the country traversed, giving extremely accurate accounts of every point of interest in regard to the country we should pass through and which was duly verified when I passed over the ground, that I was positive of the reliable character of all the information which he gave me.

At Rose Springs, where we rested one day, he went with me out on a small peak and described the position of every peak and pass in the neighborhood, at the same time pointing them out, so that I felt the utmost confidence in his knowledge of the locality. He had promised Lieutenant Wheeler to lead Mr. O'Sullivan and a packer up the range northward to a place called Cottonwoods, to take some photographic views, and then meeting Lieutenant Wheeler, return with him to my camp at Rose Springs. He, with Mr. O'Sullivan and a packer, started August 19, I think, to go to Cottonwood. I had not the least feeling of anxiety about their getting there. I was morally certain that under such able guardianship they could not but get through safely.

During the night of the third day after, Mr. O'Sullivan came in and reported that they had descended into Death Valley by what is known as Town's Pass on the first day out and camped in Death Valley, and that next morning, their animals being much weakened, with the exception of the one Mr. Egan rode, which was a fresh and powerful mule, they held a consultation. Egan told O'Sullivan that he would ride ahead till he found the canyon, when he would leave a sign for him and that he should follow his trail. O'Sullivan told Egan that the mules were getting very weak from excessive heat, thirst and lack of food, but that he would follow his trail till 11 o'clock, and if they did not find the canyon he was going to turn back. They estimated the distance traveled at 25 miles, in a northerly direction from our camp, up west side of Death Valley. Mr. Egan left there that morning and soon disappeared, as his mule traveled very fast; they followed until 11 o'clock, according to agreement, and not finding the canyon nor seeing Egan, turned back and went to a spring they had seen the day before, up on a mountain side, called Marble or White Chalk Spring; Egan told him (O'sullivan) that he was not going to stop until he get to Cottonwood.

Lieutenant Wheeler waited a day for them and then set out for our camp, which he reached the morning after O'Sullvan got back. On comparing notes we found that Egan could not possibly have arrived at Cottonwood before Lieutenant Wheeler started to our camp and thought that no doubt Egan got to the small party of our camp which still remained at Cottonwood after Lieutenant Wheeler left them. But fearing he might not, and thinking he might turn back and go to Marble Spring, the locality of which he knew, as he had passed it on his outward trail, I sent back a packer with a note to Mr. Egan and some rations, to be left at that spring for him. The note informed him of our future movements and the enfeebled state of our train, and lack of grass and water, and that press of time demanded and necessitated our again getting under way immediately. We left Rose Springs and crossed Death Valley to Furnace Creek, leaving provisions and letters at Rose Springs for Mr. Egan, but we were certain he had reached our detached camp at Cottonwood when he did not join us at Rose Spring.

At Furnace Creek we found no good feed, and had to push forward to Ash Meadows, eastward across the Amargosa Desert, reaching it in two days. Here I remained to recruit my animals, and Lieutenant Wheeler went forward to our rendezvous camp near Los Vegas to forward forage to me. While waiting here I was joined by the detachment from Cottonwood Canyon, which reported that nothing had been seen of Egan. I concluded that Egan had perhaps missed the canyon and turned up the wrong one, and reaching the summit and crossed the Mesa to Cerro Gordo, to the west of our travel, as he had told me that when he returned he thought he would go back that way. I felt necessarily uneasy regarding him, but still my confidence in his acknowledged abilities and knowledge of the country quieted my fears.

I have since learned that he never returned. No one can more deeply and painfully regret and mourn his untimely fate than myself, for in him I lost one whom I much respected and in whom I had the greatest confidence. And I think that Lieutenant Wheeler concurs with me in every respect in this feeling.

A copy of this I have furnished to Lieutenant Wheeler, and it is by his permission that I am allowed thus to anticipate my formal official report.

Again thanking you for your kindly interest in my behalf, I have the honor to remain,

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
D. A. LYLE,
2d Lieut. 2d U. S. Art.

EXTRACT FROM KOEHLER'S DIARY, COVERING DATE OF HAHN'S DISAPPEARANCE.

FRIDAY, July 21.—At 11:30 A. M. to-day a side party consisting of myself, an Indian, the guide Hahn, one packer, two soldiers and Lieutenant D. A. Lyle, commanding, left camp near Independence, on Owens River, to join Lieutenant George M. Wheeler, at or near the head waters of the Amargosa. Camped 15 miles from Independence, in Mazurka Canyon, on the western slope of the Inyo range of mountains, our line of march being almost due east of Independence.

SATURDAY, July 22.—To-day we left camp at an early hour. Travel all day crossing the Inyo Range, passing through some beautiful timber, consisting of spruce, pines, firs, etc., but on the eastern slope our trail led down a rough and narrow canyon, and from the summit of the range we had a good view over Satan's burial grounds, over which we shall have to pass. Camped within 2½ miles of the entrance to the mouth of the canyon.

SUNDAY, July 23.—This morning the guide, Hahn, myself and an Indian left camp at 8 A. M., it having been proposed by Hahn and assented to by Lieutenant Lyle, to search for a way leading out of that dangerous-looking neighborhood, and to return in the evening of that same day. Permission was also given to me to go on ahead, independent of Hahn, and await the arrival of Lieutenant Lyle and party at Grape Vine Spring, on the northeastern side of and near the head of Death Valley proper. (I will mention here that it has always been a part of my duty, under the orders of the officer in charge of the expedition, to go where I saw fit, in order to make collections in natural history from all parts of the country, and gather information from every available source, beneficial to the expedition.) We traveled on together, "the way we knew not," going over burning sands, lava, and dry, desert country until night found us in a labyrinth of mountains, from where Hahn wanted to get a look over the country towards Grape Vine Springs, but in which, I think, he never succeeded.

Range on range of mountains, barren and bleak, are towering before us, making the passage over apparently impossible. The last I saw of Hahn was about 8 P. M., with his animal, going where I can not tell, for he turned and left me without saying a word. I called to him, but no answer coming back I concluded that he must have gone back to meet Lieutenant Lyle and his party. I had determined to push on all night, for delay would have been certain death to more than one of us—knowing that it was an entirely different locality from that described by Hahn.

Next morning, July 24th found us, that is myself and the Indian, in rather a bad condition, though safely through that labyrinth of mountains, and in the head of Death Valley proper. The Indian's face assumed a rather whitish appearance—though he was naturally dark—and he was also almost speechless. I must confess that I was not much better. Upon looking around us we espied a green spot and made a rush for it; by digging it out with our hands we got enough water to awaken life again, though the animals only got four hatsful each. After having rested two hours, and having taken some food, I went on again to find Grape Vine Springs, the place appointed by Lieutenant Lyle to wait for him. I found it within 12 miles from the first pot-hole spring mentioned, traveling in a southern direction.

TUESDAY, July 25.—Waiting for Lieutenant Lyle and party to arrive.

WEDNESDAY, July 26.—Lieutenant Lyle's party not coming up, I leave this place, in order to meet Lieutenant Wheeler at the place appointed by him.

Collector in Natural History.

Those Dinners—Queries.

FIR GROVE, January 19, 1872.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Being a constant reader of your valuable paper, though like many other constant readers I pay nothing for the privilege, and having noticed your promptness in answering all reasonable questions asked, I take the liberty, although a non-producer, of asking a few questions as to the general condition of that class of men termed "Bachelors," who reside in your town and its immediate vicinity.

Do those "Bachelors" usually get more than one "square meal" during the year, or, in other words, do they ever get a "square meal" except when invited out to dine?

Are they as a class, full of poetry and Latin?

Do they sleep well of nights, or is their sleep disturbed by gastronomic visions of "chickens, ham and all that is esculent, together with gorgeous cakes, fruit and finely wrought pies, enhanced by sparkling wines and porter?"

Finally, do they usually enjoy good health after these annual stuffings?

Yours, quizzically,
FUZBUZ.

Earthquake.

A lively, rattling little earthquake occurred last Wednesday night about 12 o'clock, lasting nearly three seconds. The rumbling sound preceding it seemed to come from almost due east, but the "waves" were straight up and down. In the evening the weather was cold and clear, the full moon presenting a peculiar yellow-white appearance. Shortly after the shock a smart, intermittent breeze sprung up, which continued until nearly morning.

The Riding.

According to the programme, the three vaqueros named last week spread themselves on the backs of mustangs at Cofer's, near the Post. All rode so well, that an equal award of the stakes was made. At the bull ride, the animal thought best to tear through a fence, injuring that structure to some extent, as also the legs of the rider.

Correspondence.

On the first page of to-day's paper will be found some readable letters from Washington, from a well known resident of this section. Barring the politics, the letters are good. The mail, in its irregularity, brought them all at once, but a portion is laid over until next week.

County Court.

The County Court, Hon. John A. Hannah presiding, met in regular session on Thursday last. After hearing arguments on an appeal case, it adjourned to the 31st instant. Mr. Galliardo, a lawyer, was fined for contempt of court, and sent to jail in default. Good for a starter.

Dissolution.

By due notice given it will be seen that Munzinger & Lubkens and Joe Fernbach have dissolved partnership, each retaining the brewery interest in their respective localities. The regular advertisements of the separate firms will appear next week.

To Bibulanters.

We would direct the attention of lovers of mild and ardent beverages to the new advertisement of the Excelsior Saloon, Benton, run by our friend Alverson. Residents of that section, and the traveling public, will take notice.

Died.

Isaac Jackson, the workman who was injured by the falling machinery at the Eclipse mine, on the 15th instant, died on Wednesday last, from the effects of his injuries.

For a Toll Bridge.

M. S. Clark and Joseph Rowan will apply to the Board of Supervisors for a license to keep a toll bridge across Owens River at Bishop Creek, and give due notice to that effect.

For Sale.

The Messrs. Bell & Bro. give notice that they will sell their extensive and valuable timber and saw mill property, at Big Pine, on advantageous terms. Consult the advertisement.

For Patents.

The Silver Peak and Red Mountain G. & S. M. Company this week publish their notices of application for U. S. patents to their mines.

Sale.

The Kearsarge sale occurs to-day, at the mill.

How to Set Hens.

The nests of setters should be made at bottom of damp earth packed to a concave shape. It is not necessary to place them upon the ground, or to sprinkle the eggs with water if this rule is followed. It is proper that the eggs should be in some way exposed to moderate dampness during incubation, as otherwise too much of the water in their composition evaporates. An elevated box furnished with nothing but dry litter is not suitable. Cover the earth with straw, bruised until pliable and broken short. Long straw is apt to become entangled with the feet of the hen, causing breakage of eggs. It should not, however, be cut by a machine; because the sharp ends of the pieces will come in contact with the skin of the hen, or that of the delicate chickens. In very cold weather line the nest with feathers. We have successfully hatched eggs by preparing a nest thus, in a room where during part of the time of incubation the temperature was below zero. Set hens in large numbers at a time, having kept some of them upon artificial eggs till all are ready.—American Agriculturist.

LETTER FROM AURORA.

[Correspondence of The Inyo Independent.]

AURORA, NEVADA, Jan. 24, 1872.

EDITORS INDEPENDENT:—That insatiate and atrocious class of individuals known as newspaper readers will be the death of me yet. I write this with fear and trembling, for I have a shocking presentiment that the ravenous creatures above referred to have already killed and devoured at least one of the editors of your paper. We have rarely seen THE INDEPENDENT of late and knowing that the recent stoppage of the mails has rendered literary provender scarce in your section of country, leads me to fear that something awful has happened. Newspaper readers, like Oliver Twist, are always "longing for more," and are not very particular about the quality either, especially when they swallow what I give them. Therefore Messrs. Editors (or Mr. Editor, as the case may be), I have started to commence to begin to give your hungry readers a small dish of such fodder as I happen to have on hand, which is, or will be, done at great personal inconvenience to myself, and for the sole purpose of saving you from possible and probable harm. I should have come to your rescue much sooner but for a long time I have been suffering from a severe relapse of my old disorder—hereditary fatigue. I wish it distinctly understood that it is not laziness that ails me. Oh, no! I hate lazy men, and if my beloved fellow citizens call upon me (as I expect they will next fall) to be so kind and condescending and everlastingly obliging as to accept the office of President, I will, as soon as I am installed in office, have all the slothful classes arrested as enemies of the peace and dignity of the Republic. Laziness belongs to the "beggarly elements of this world," but hereditary fatigue is a "dispensation of Providence," that entitles the patient sufferer to the sympathy of "the whole world and the balance of mankind." Well, when I get to be President, I'll have a Secretary to do my writing, and will get Daniel Webster to do my thinking through some pretty female spiritual "meejum," and then newspaper readers can starve for all I care. Won't that be gay?

Christmas and New Year's have come and gone, but their pleasures are deeply embowered in the capacious memories and stomachs of the good people of Aurora, along with sundry gallons of milk punch and egg-nogg not to speak of several cart loads of roast chicken, mince pies, cakes, etc. I may here mention it as a startling piece of news, that the recent Christmas and New Year came respectively on the 25th of December and the 1st of January, and further, as a remakable coincidence, that the same holidays came on the same days of the same months respectively in the two preceding years. I don't claim any credit for the above mentioned important statements, because the discoveries were made by an Hon. member of the last Legislative Assembly of this State and not by myself, and of course I scorn to give valuable knowledge to the world and at the same time rob the great discoverer of his well-earned fame.

Well, as I said before, Christmas and New Year's passed—I passed—everybody passed—and then Old Time "ordered up" the trump and is "going it alone," and I'll bet a thousand acres of sagehens that the old conjurer will not lose a trick in the game. But then no matter whether I lose the sagehens or not (the winner must catch them); or whether Napoleon remains at Chiselhurst or returns to the Tuilleries; or whether the Presidential mantle falls upon me—yes, me, the undersigned and writer hereof—or remains upon Grant; or whether false hair be quoted at four dollars the ounce or forty (so long as it be obtainable at some price while the fashion lasts), the world will go on the same as now—weeping a moment and then laughing for a week. In fact I can think of but one human event that would completely unsettle all mundane affairs and involve the whole social fabric of the civilized world in utter chaos, and that would be the sudden demise of all the inventors and artificers of female fashions. I have sometimes thought that the world might possibly be able to survive even so rude a shock as that—but perhaps the thought is too monstrous to appear in print.

But I am digressing, and above all things I hate digression. Let me see! I was talking about Christmas, etc., passing. Yes, now I have got back on the subject. I intend to stick to it like sixty, for if I don't my letter will turn out like the fellow's chapter on "The Toads in Ireland"—all introduction and no letter. That chapter on "The Toads in Ireland" was the 99th of a very interesting "Serial" in a prominent and popular periodical. At the close of the 98th chapter the talented author announced with a grand flourish and many words that chapter 99 would be exceedingly interesting—that owing to the importance of the subject, etc., it would treat exclusively of The Toads in Ireland. Of course, the next number of the periodical was eagerly sought for and when the interesting chapter was found it consisted solely of the following half dozen words: "There are no toads in Ireland." Now I imagine that the author of that famous chapter on natural history had a just appreciation of the innate wickedness of newspaper and periodical readers generally, and merely played the aforesaid trick to get even on them, which of course meets my hearty approbation. But there is real merit in his "chapter" because it so skilfully avoids the dangerous shoals and breakers of digression which sometimes cause a man to make a fool of himself through an outrageous contradiction. A notable instance of the laughable results of digression once came under my own notice when I was considerably younger and (if possible) greener than I am now. Old "Pa C———" was a frontiersman of Western Illinois, whose wonderful stories of pioneer life gained him the admiration of all the wonder-loving youngsters of the neighborhood. He was a great digressionist, and once while relating some incidents of the cold Winter of 1832, he spoke in compassionate terms of some dragoons who encamped one night near his house. The weather was intensely cold and the snow very deep. The soldiers could get no feed for their horses and accordingly turned them loose to gather what they could for themselves. Then leaving the dragoons in the snow and their horses browsing in the hazel thickets, "Pa C———" expatiated for some time on the hardships of pioneer life in general, and finally wound up his reminiscences by saying that his chagrin could be more easily imagined than described when he arose next morning after the soldiers camped and found that their horses had broken into his field and destroyed several acres of his "green corn which was just then in prime roasting ear!"

There, I've been at it again, confound it! Now I will stick to the subject, right or wrong:—Christmas and New Year's came, and we all eggnogged and milkpunched and dined and wined and—darned if that isn't all I recollect about it.

The good people of Aurora, being debarred the pleasures of attending lectures, theatres, etc., are trying to make up for the loss by indulging to an unlimited extent in other equally innocent and far more exhilirating amusements. Coasting and sliding down the mountain sides on snowshoes are the favorite sports, and are indulged in by all classes—old and young, male and female. Coasting sleds are the rage just now and for some weeks Mr. Butler, the blacksmith and wagon maker, has had about all he could do to manufacture the trim little steel-shod cutters fast enough to supply the demand. And, oh, what health-giving and blissful sport it is on these long brilliant moonlit evenings to get on one of those little coasters with your arm around the waist of a pretty girl and then come sailing down Antelope street for a quarter of a mile, "like a meteor descending the dome of a fleecy sky." (How is that for high?) To a hopeless old bachelor like me it is simply superlative happiness—unspeakable bliss—forty degrees above proof, double distilled and triple rectified—a foretaste of that elysium which those only know "who wed young and live for love." Of course accidents sometimes happen, on account of the sleds occasionally flying the track and "bucking" their riders off against brick houses, awning posts, etc., as several black eyes and bruised noses now to be seen in this town abundantly testify. About two weeks ago Mrs. D. J Lewis, wife of our County Clerk, was seriously injured by the collision of two coasting sleds (on one of which she was riding), and is still unable to leave her room.

The snowshoe business is indulged in a good deal by young ladies, and as experts in that style of locomotion I may specialy mention our talented schoolma'am, Miss Josephine Brock, and Miss Etta Booker.

In business matters Aurora is extremely dull. There are no mills running and but few men working in the mines. The camp has not looked so gloomy before in ten years.

The recent snow storms were terrible here—the worst perhaps ever seen in this country by white men. The great weight of snow broke down numerous buildings, including M. A. Murphy's meat market, the old Union mill and the Methodist church. The roads were blocked up in all directions, and the continuance of the storm for three or four weeks rendered it almost impossible to re-open them during that time. Such was especially the the case on the road leading from Aurora to Hot Springs. Mr. Dexter, the late proprietor of the stage line between here and Independence, did all in his power to open the road—his driver with his team and several men working on the road sometimes when it was storming so that you could hardly see across the street. Often what was cleared out one day would be found filled up again next morning and worse than ever. The horses were soon used up and disabled by cutting themselves in breaking through the crust of the frozen snow, and as Mr. Dexter could not hire any (though he tried), the road opening went on very slowly. In a recent issue of The Sacramento Union I noticed that some crusty correspondent of this place, with ill-concealed malice, made the statement that Dexter had spent but a trifle of $50 or so, and had made but little effort otherwise to open his road and get the mails through to Independence. Now this Union correspondent, whoever he is, has either wilfully lied or been grossly deceived, for I know and many others in this town know that Dexter has done all that could be done to advantage under the circumstances to open his road; and further that he did more and spent more to open the road during the four weeks immediately succeeding the 17th of December last than was done and expended during the four preceding years in clearing snow from all the roads leading from Aurora. I have no interest whatever in Dexter's road, stage line, mail contract nor aught else that is his, but fair play is a jewel which I am willing all men should have, friends and foes alike.

The Dexter stage line changed hands a few days ago, Mr. Ullrick, of Carson, being the purchaser. I am informed (but whether on good authority or not I do not know) that Billy Wilson, of Carson, is interested with Ullrick. If so I congratulate the people of Owens Valley, for Billy is a whole stage line himself—has plenty of good stock and stages, and will make "Rome howl" when he starts in.

Well, since I have settled down to such everyday, humdrum, prosaic subjects my quill runs hard; besides I find it has scribbled over a good deal of paper. I find also, that my huge conundrum is all wrong—that I should have commenced right here where I am now leaving off. The reader can correct this error, however, by commencing at the bottom and reading from there to the top, reading the lines from right to left. I've tried reading it from top to bottom, and it won't work—"somehow or other" it won't bring out the sense of the piece to the satisfaction of

A. MALGAM.

LETTER FROM AURORA.

[Correspondence of The Inyo Independent.]

AURORA, NEVADA, Jan. 22, 1872.

EDITORS INDEPENDENT:—The great problem in life, and the one that has puzzled the wisest heads, is how to start right, even in the most trivial undertaking, but conversation and letter writing have ever been considered the most perplexing. However, nature always gives us an introduction in that exhaustless topic—the weather. For the last six weeks the snow, "the beautiful snow," has been not only the the absorbing topic of conversation and letter writing, but has absorbed business of all kinds, and obstructed the roads so that, until within the last few days, travel has almost ceased.

The road between this place and Benton has been so badly blocked with snow that the stage has made but two through trips since about the 17th of December, the storms being so severe that it was often difficult to get the mails as far as Dexter's wells. This accounts for the unusual delays in mail communication between this place and Independence, and the frequent complaints by reason thereof. Even THE INDEPENDENT has been growling, and in the last number suggests to the people of Owens Valley the propriety of having their mail matter sent round by way of Visalia, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Dexter spent near $300, over and above ordinary expenses, in his efforts to make regular trips from this place to Benton, during the late storms. With the exception of these delays—which are often unavoidable during the Winter months—the mails from San Francisco to Independence are delivered from 24 hours to 48 hours sooner by this route than any other as yet tried. The stage line from this place to Independence was sold by Mr. Dexter, a few days ago, to Messrs. Ullrick & Wrights, of Carson City, and the presumption now is, that there will be no further complaint about delayed mails, upon the principle that a new broom always sweeps clean.

Nothing of note has occurred in this snow-mantled region for some time past. There are no mills running at present, and but little being done on the mines. Our neighbors at Castle Peak are jubilant over the prospect of "better times in the Spring," as I understand from reliable authority, that the "Dunderburg" has been sold to an English company, who will commence operations as soon as the snow clears away. Should the Dunderburg mine prove a success in the hands of this new company, Mono county stock will come up in the market.

Right here I am somewhat at a loss, and will again revert to the weather topic to say that the storm is past and Winter appears to be receding from the approaches of Spring, and farmers and stockmen are looking for a bountiful "crop" of grass and grain. But this will all be knocked in the head if the predictions of the Piutes come to pass. They say that in the course of two or three moons hence, the Great Spirit will take the whole Piute tribe to the happy hunting grounds, and destroy the whites with a second deluge. It is to be hoped, however, that the Big Medicine Man has for once made a mistake. I will write again, should I survive.

EGO.

LITIGANT PAPER FOR INYO COUNTY,

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY

CHALFANT & PARKER.

JAS. E. PARKER | P. A. CHALFANT

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.;

Saturday,.....February 3, 1872.

THE NO-FENCE QUESTION.

It seems to be a conceded fact that no general trespass law will pass the Legislature this session, notwithstanding a majority of its members were elected upon that basis. The excepted counties will, beyond cavil, be placed at a great disadvantage; resident stock men will suffer almost equally with farmers. Such counties must become general herding grounds for all the nomadic stock men of the State, our own with the rest. Our grazing grounds are not extensive nor of the best quality, but with a no-fence law in force they are sufficient to accommodate the herds of resident owners very well, and and not intrench upon the rights of farmers either. But without such a law, even passing droves can inflict great damage on fairly fenced farms, while others crowding to remain for a market will soon render it untenable for all. Through local agreement, the northern portion of our county enjoys the full benefits of this law, which if repealed or nullified, would virtually induce civil war. It would be much better for the interests of every man in the county, stock men included, that the same law should extend over the whole of this valley at least.

The School Year.

Under the present law the school year throughout the State commences on the first of July and ends on the last of June. Mr. Luttrell has prepared a bill to amend section 112 of the school law so as to read: "The school year shall begin on the first day of March and end on the last day of February." Under the present law the school children throughout the farming sections of the State are generally unable to attend school regularly in July, August and September on account of harvesting. But the schools are necessarily kept open during those months, and are closed in the Spring for want of funds. The proposed change, it is alleged, will be better adapted to the convenience of parents and children in the country, and will not in any manner affect those of the city. The first of March is also the commencement of the fiscal year in most of the counties of the State.

To "Make Rain Come."

A civil engineer of Chicago, who believes that rain can be produced by artificial methods, has petitioned Congress to enable him to carry out his experiments. He wants to be furnished with 900 cannon of not less that 24 pounds calibre each, and 30,000 pounds of powder to fire in them, together with an electrical battery and other appliances, to enable him to discharge all the pieces simultaneously.

If that engineer will bring his cannon out anywhere in this region, and with their aid produce a shower of rain, the method may be considered a success. Sufficient notice of the time for the great explosion should be given, in order to allow the establishment of ear infirmaries.

Railroad Survey.

A party of engineers have lately been engaged in the exploration of the summit of Tehechepi Pass, and the survey of the Southern Pacific Railroad of California. According to The Courier, the party left Bakesfield lately for the purpose of extending the survey from the Pass into the Mojave plain. One line proceeds almost due east to Fort Mojave, on the Colorado, and the other in a southerly direction to Los Angeles, and thence southeasterly to Fort Yuma. After reaching the plain they will first survey the route to Los Angeles, and then, most likely that to Fort Mojave.

Death of Colonel Washington.

Colonel B. F. Washington, editor of The San Francisco Examiner, died at his residence in San Francisco January 22. Colonel Washington was a lineal descendant of a brother of George Washington. For many years past he has been prominently identified with the history of our State. Though politically a strong partisian, his death creates a void in the hearts of a large circle of friends. He leaves a family of four children, two sons and two daughters.

Steel Rails.

The Erie railroad is being relaid with steel capped rails, said to be the best in the world.

Tea Culture.

Col. Hollister, of Los Angeles county, is making extensive preparations for the culture of tea.

BONDS AND BUILDINGS.

There is probably not another county in the State of California whose annually recurring expenses in the way of sustaining public improvements is less than that of Inyo. From the nature of the ground, the construction of roads here is but a small matter in the first place, and when once properly done, the cost of keeping them in repair is merely nominal. They are not liable to injury from the elements, and consequently entail no expense other than from the wear and tear of daily use. We have but one water course needing bridges, but that requires not less than three to properly accommodate the most important traffic of the county, and for this purpose quite a large sum of money is required. A large sum has already been expended in that direction, but to so little purpose that it will have all to be done over. The existing bridges are of the shabbiest kind; liable any day to go down and cause a heavy bill of damages. Poor and unsafe as the bridges are, the county buildings are worse. Any one who ever gave the court house, to dignify our pile of sand and mud by that title, even a casual examination, knows that it is a dangerous building: that if it stood in any city where it was subject to a decision from an authorized board for such purposes, it would be condemned in thirty minutes, and be ordered torn down. Court has been more than once adjourned from fear of the building when but a moderate breeze was blowing. It is liable, like the bridges, to come down with a crash. In that event there may be great loss of life. It is true if officials only are killed their places will soon be supplied—there are always plenty for that purpose—but with a court room full of citizens, and with the county archives, the conditions are vastly different. The loss in that case is beyond a money estimate, and can never be made good. A catastrophe of this kind may happen at any moment, but should it not—should the building not fall, though it assuredly will before many years, for it is a fraud from foundation to roof—there is no adequate security for the safe keeping of records, or any valuable papers or treasures belonging to the county. In that respect it is little better than a canvas tent. County funds have to be kept in private safes, greatly to the inconvenience, and subject to the whims of private persons. In short it affords no suitable facilities for the transaction of county business, nor for the accommodation of its officers, and as for the apology for a jail standing alongside, it is simply disgraceful. Both were designed and built in a well intended spirit of economy as temporary expedients, to serve only till the prosperity and existence of the county, and the proper location for its capital, should become well enough established to warrant something better. In regard to the first of these conditions there is nothing in the least problematical—its future prosperity as a county is as well assured as that of any other in the State. In regard to the second, if there is any doubt or question on that point, now is the time to settle it, for the improvements above mentioned are now, or will be by the time they can possibly be effected, imperatively needed. This being conceded, as it must be, the question as to the best method of effecting or creating a fund for the purpose, is to be considered. Good financiers and some of the heaviest tax payers in the county, favor the issuance of 10 per cent. 20-year county bonds, in amount sufficient to cover the expense of building three good bridges across Owens river, and court house and jail. This would require the issue of bonds to the amount of $40,000, the market value of which would not be less than $32,000. This would be at 80 cents on the dollar, the minimum price, as provided by law, for which they can be sold. A sale of the bonds at that rate is virtually guaranteed in advance for every dollar. No bonds can be sold by the County Supervisors, who are managers, for less than 90 cents without due public notice, and then only in amount sufficient to meet present requirements. When all are sold a tax of 40 cents on each hundred dollars of our present taxable property would have to be laid to meet the yearly interest. With the natural increase of property values that we may reasonably expect, that rate, if maintained from year to year, would be sufficient to pay off the entire debt, interest and principal, when due. The Supervisors, however, may reduce the rate from year to year so as merely to pay the interest.

The advantages of this plan may be summed up in a very few words. As the proposed work would then be paid for in cash, one dollar would accomplish as much as three in scrip issued in the face of so much additional indebtedness, while in either case the rate of interest, dollar for dollar, is nearly the same, which in the aggregate, would make the interest nearly three times as much, besides the ruinous discount on the scrip. We defer further remarks in this connection for the present, but will say that our columns are open to any one who may wish to communicate his views in these matters.

RUMPUS IN THE SENATE.

The redoubtable Senator from Tulare, Fresno and Merced has got himself into trouble again, from the circumstances of which we conclude that the honorable gentleman is by nature much better fitted for a vaquerro than a Senator. In the Senate, on the 18th instant, the Committee on Agriculture reported back the no-fence bill without recommendation, and Senator Pendegast, of Napa, introduced a trespass law bill for Fresno, whereupon Senator Fowler arose and in an excited manner stated that he could take care of his own district, and he did not know whether to brand any one who interfered as a knave or pity him as a fool. Pendegast deigned no reply, but placed the matter in the hands of Judge Terry and Creed Haymond, his friends, who demanded an apology in open Senate for the insult—the language to be dictated by them—an apology or fight being the alternative. The document was written up by Messrs. Terry and Haymond, and signed by Mr. Fowler after a little protestation. On the following morning it was sent to the Senate and Senator, and read by the Secretary. The sympathy of the people of Sacramento is entirely with Pendegast, who is invariably courteous, gentlemanly and accommodating, who is regarded as being entirely right, while Fowler is adjudged as being entirely wrong. In commenting on this affair, The Fresno Expositor, hitherto a friendly supporter of Fowler, concludes its remarks as follows:

Literally speaking, our Senator made a hole, crawled into it, and then pulled the hole in after him. We have heretofore felt it a duty to defend our Senator, and shall continue to do so whenever he is malignantly attacked or any false asseverations made against him, but in this instance we must say that he has not only brought deep and lasting disgrace upon himself, but upon his entire constituency. A man who can not hold a better curb upon his tongue is not a safe man to represent this or any other community in the Legislature, and we hope that before he makes any more such breaks as the foregoing, he will resign and return home. Men can be persuaded, he should learn, but it is indeed a hard thing to drive them.

What's the Reason?

What is the reason that no mail matter from Los Angeles to this place ever gets through in less than two weeks, and rarely in less than three or four? If this was only an exception instead of the rule, it would not be worth bothering about, but, unfortunately, "it was ever thus," and likely to remain so until the P. M. at Los Angeles studies his geography or his duties a little better. There is no need for him to dump everything for this section aboard steamer for San Francisco or some other place. There is a direct mail communication between the two points, and has been for some time past, if we are not much in error, and making all due allowances it certainly don't take stages two weeks or more to traverse the distance.

Indian War in Nevada.

A dispatch to Gov. Bradley, dated Stillwater, Churchill county, Nevada, January 21, says the Indians have commenced war on the whites and cattle. They fired on the Sheriff and others and drove them into town. An Indian known as Capt. Breckenridge, and four others, are in jail. The Indians in large numbers svrrounded the town and fired into it. The Governor was requested to come at once and see what can be done, as there are some 3,000 on the Walker Lake Reservation in a starving condition, and unless they are soon supplied with food serious trouble will follow.

The "Japs."

The Japanese received a magnificent reception in San Francisco. "Ito," one of the Japanese chiefs, delivered a speech in English during a banquet, "which," says The Sacramento Union, "was the most remarkable and enlightened speech we have ever read." The Japs spend a great deal of money, and of course, are very popular. Two of them are paying the mines on the Comstock a visit.

State Finances.

A message from the Governor to the Senate, January 26, shows that the State debt is $4,114,305,68, instead of $3,462,000 as reported by Governor Haight in his December message; the State Capitol Fund has been overdrawn nearly half a million; the Normal School Fund, $100,000; the Asylum and State Prison are $85,000 in debt, and the Military Fund, $16,430.

Wheat Lands.

There are 60,000,000 acres of wheat lands in California, of which only 2,600,000 are under cultivation.

EASTERN NEWS.

The President, Cabinet and leading politicians agree that the Vice-Presidency should fall to some one east of the Alleghanies, and a New York railroad man is mentioned.

It is stated that the Cuban leaders who have been in this country seeking to induce our Government to recognize the Cuban Republic as a belligerent power, are beginning to despair of success. They will bring to bear in Congress now, the recent landing of 25,000 coolies, and also the landing of several cargoes of slaves on the island as arguments against Spanish rule.

A London letter says the Englishmen are much dissatisfied with the statement of the American case submitted to the Geneva arbitration. It is stated that the English public and probably the Government are startled by the extent of the demand made. The Britishers will warmly contest every point contended for by the Americans.

In the case of Mrs. Wharton the jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

Affairs look again threatening in New Orleans. The Carterites have given notice that they are going to reinstate themselves, and they request people to shut up shop and keep out of the streets.

A Kansas paper publishes the names of nearly twenty members of the Legislature of that State who sold their votes in the Senatorial election last year.

It is said that the Grand Jury of the Court of General Sessions found an immense number of indictments. They found large amounts of money—often as much as a million dollars—placed in bank at one time to the credit of certain members of the "ring." It has also been proved that one day over six millions were stolen from the city treasury. Five indictments were found against Tweed and fifteen against Connolly.

A special from Columbia, South Carolina, reports that Byas, a colored member of the Legislature, attempted to cowhide Tomlinson, correspondent of The Charlestown News, for something he had written, whereupon Tomlinson shot his assailant, whose recovery is said to be impossible.

In the Custom-house investigation on the 22d ultimo, D. H. Tompkins, Deputy Collector, testified to the amount of cartage expenses, and to the amount paid for the lease of the public stores. It appears that there was in one case paid in rent between 1867 and 1869 $21,000 for the same building, the proprietor claiming to have put $92,000 in improvements on it though he did not increase its size. At the evening session Bernard Hess, formerly a revenue officer, testified to having notified Delano when he was Commissioner of Internal Revenue, of the defalcations of Bailey, and that Delano took no action in the matter. He also testified to notifying the United States District Attorney of other frauds, without result. Witness admitted to having been indicted for falsely personating a revenue officer, but the District Attorney entered a nolle prosequi, there being no evidence against him.

Letters were offered by D. B. Whitlock, showing he was forced to pay half the storage on a cargo of sugar that never left the hold of his vessel, the Collector claiming his course was sustained by the Secretary of the Treasury.

James Gordon Bennett, Jr., is mentioned as Fisk's successor as Colonel of the Ninth Regiment.

Mayor Hall has resumed his office.

It is affirmed that the Rothschilds, with Jay Cooke and McCulloch, will absorb the $600,000,000 loan as has been reported.

Since 1861 the Federal Government paid back to the States $39,000,000 on account of expenses for furnishing army volunteers in the rebellion; $5,000,000 is yet claimed by the States.

A delegation of Cherokees, Creeks and Chocktaws waited on the President recently, to advise him that they don't want any such a thing as a Territorial Government extended over them. The President assured them that they should be let alone as they desired to be, and that there should be no Territorial Government established over them.

Their Occupations.

Out of the 71 Senators in Congress 50 are lawyers, and 11 have been Governors of States.

PACIFIC COAST READAGRAMS.

Dr. Trask, in his suit against Mrs. Fair, recovered $310 50, or ten per cent. of the amount sued for. He only wanted to charge her $50 per day for evidence and attendance during her trial, which was reasonable enough, considering the strain on his conscience occasioned by such testimony as he furnished. It was really worth more, if he could have made it stick.

Joseph Rawls, who was shot at Cloverdale by J. Gibbons, and who it was supposed would get well, died January 19. Rawls, some years since, killed a noted character named Sim. Olddam in Idaho, an act in which he was fully justified. He was a quiet, inoffensive but determined young man. He was shot to prevent him from testifying against the Sonoma county stage and mail robbers arrested by Steve Venard. Gibbons is yet at large and likely to remain so, if his arrest depends on the Sonoma officials.

Rafael Botillarez, who murdered his wife some months since, was tried in the District Court of San Bernardino, found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to be hung on the 8th of March next.

Ice formed in Los Angeles on the night of January 26, and the young orange trees were damaged.

James F. Leggett is confirmed as Governor of Washington Territory.

Brokers in San Francisco are hoarding up greenbacks in anticipation of the resumption of specie payments.

Duffy's no-fence bill came up in the Senate, January 26, eliciting an animated debate. Mr. Pendegast, of Napa, delivered quite an able speech in its support. The bill was made the order of the day for last Tuesday. It is intended to be general in its application to all counties where agriculture is the leading interest. Its fate is very uncertain, many petitions being sent in on both sides, the opponents of the measure being rather the most active.

The Assembly passed by a vote of 40 to 38 a substitute for the Senate bill repealing the five per cent. act. San Francisco, San Mateo, Santa Cruz, Santa Barbara, San Diego, San Bernardino and San Luis Obispo are exempt from the repeal.

The San Francisco Chamber of Commerce unanimously advocate the passage of a no fence law.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Thiers, on the 20th instant, handed in his resignation to the French Assembly, with the announcement that the Ministers would also resign. The Assembly refused to accept the resignations, which were tendered because that body voted against the ministerial measure for a tax on raw material. Thiers has consented to remain in office.

The Transmogrifications and Experiences of an Auctioneer—He goes out to Sell and gets Sold.

On board the downward stage from the north during a recent trip, and while at Hot springs, there might have been seen, and in fact was seen, a tall, fine looking young man, well dressed and possessed with an eye, or to be precise, with two eyes that unmistakably indicated business. His name, as shown by the way bill, was "Mr. Passenger." Notwithstanding his apparently well developed proportions, Mr. Passenger, or his name any way, as the sequel will show, was merely in course of transition from a chrysalis to a more perfect state. Simultaneously with the completion of the second stage of the route, which occurred at night at this place, the second transition of the chrysalis was complete. It then appeared on the books as "Mr. Richards," bound for Lone Pine and ports to the south'ard. He could tarry with us but a night, and hardly that, for long ere the Aurora of the morn had again dispelled the sable (or woolen) mantle of the night, and thereby rescued even a small portion of our sleeping innocents from the tenaceous clutches of the drowsy god, Mr. Richards was some miles on the road to Lone Pine. Close behind was an horseman, Clauson by name, and riding rapidly. Three miles out, at the house of a lonely rancher the horseman overhauled ye chrysalis, which now in the presence of that lonely rancher, had passed the third transition and was "Mr. Bond." As a necessary step toward a full development Mr. Bond now climbed to the hurricane deck of the horseman's mustang, and taking a course obliquely to the left and rear across sage brush and plain, rode boldly away. Soon he reached the foot of the great Sierra Nevadas, which, we might here remark, is an extension of some mountains in the Webfoot nation, and these he mounted step by step, through deep snows and howling winds, bearing, in addition to an honest heart and a pint of tolerable fair whisky, a flag—a red flag clearly denoting a sanguinary mission—that he was going to bleed somebody, perhaps a large number of somebodies—"Excelsoir" was not inscribed on the flag this youth bore closely stowed away in his right hand coat-tail pocket; instead thereof his actuating motto read "Never say Dye."—until the proper time. As one difficulty after another was surmounted he trolled forth this operatic snatch between snatches at the snow in his business eyes and the bottle in his pocket:

The higher on the mountain,
The greener grows the grass,
The higher an auctioneer climbs
The more he—exposes his person to the inclemency of the weather.

The end of the long line brought him to a point 9,000 feet high and to the Kearsarge mine. "My eyes!" said he, "the mine is high enough, if its finances are so low. It could't stand the Winters, and no wonder," he added sententiously, as he forthwithly hauled forth his red flag, and passing his last transition, stood forth a full fledged "Auctioneer in Bankruptcy, Deputy U. S. Marshal, Richard V. Dye" by music.

Mr. Dye had, in this straight forward manner, come to administer certain rites upon the bankrupt Kearsarge, and in order that the numerous creditors, who furnished it its life sustenance during the last six months of its precarious existence, should obtain their just dues it was deemed a matter of the first importance that the obsequies of their hopes should be conducted in perfect quietness—there could in that case be no wrangling over the spoils, and they would all share alike—and so they would. This honorable plan made the presence of any persons except those intimately connected with the company quite superfluous; it was to be a strictly private funeral, so as to save the feelings of the outside mourners, hence the aforesaid transmogrifications on the part of Mr. Dye, Deputy U. S. Marshal and Master of Ceremonies on this trying occasion.

Owing to these facts it may be quite correctly surmised that bidders were not as "thick as the leaves of Vallambrosa" by several, but of the four that were there, two were supernumeraries, to say nothing of the dog. It is strange, but no more strange than true, that people will crowd themselves in uninvited on occasions intended to be strictly private as in this instance. Sher. Stevens and Al. Briggs, representatives of the outside mourners, were on hand, and though they bore 20 per cent. of a large sum of money with which to assist in the impressive rites, their presence, alas and alas, gave no comfort to any soul there—barring the dog, always. Though legitimate enough, it would hardly to kill 'em, and so, in measured calls, the ceremonies went on. Sixty-one hundred and fifty was reached, and the auctioneer, who had come so far, overcome by his emotions, declared he could hear no more for four weeks from date—"this is no go."

After resting three days and about as many nights, he came down from that lofty mountain and save being bucked off once by bronco mule, reached our town in safety. In full sympathy with his dejected spirits, and in delicate harmony with his calling, every building in the place was decked with red flags, many bearing suggestive inscriptions and paintings in portrayal of his tribulations and devious journeyings thitherward. The spirit of the great auctioneer had infected everybody and everything—the whole town was for sale; would sail the first fair wind. But as the Kearsarge was not sold, neither was the town, although a streamer stretched high across the street announced in broad capitals and curious devices "sale in public," etc. No transparencies were used; none were needed; the whole thing was transparent enough without. When Mr. Dye rode into town he was received in solemn silence, out of regard to his lacerated feelings and dejected aspect. Not a shout was heard nor a laudatory note, save only the soft notes of the dirge "Root, hog, or Dye," and "I'll go home to Dye no more," both of which were plaintively whistled by a small boy, without a bobble except once when his whistling apparatus momentarily lost its pucker while noting the suppressed air with which the great auctioneer, and the sorrowful trio that composed his escort, stepped under some poster greetings that hung over Tom May's bar, and slowly gulphed a little spiritual comfort, three for a half. This impressive scene, from its marked exclusiveness, disconcerted a good many others, besides that small boy. These greetings read in regular order: "How are you, Mr. Passenger?" "How are you, Mr. Richards?" "How are you, Mr. Bond?" and, "How de do, Mr. Dye!" There was no response, and no one, except by what is herein laid down, knows to this day how the object of all this solicitude really did do, in the face of such a magnificent fiasco.

Next Monday

The august solons composing the honorable Board of Supervisors will meet, for the transaction of general business. The forthcoming report of the County Treasurer will be examined with interest by the public.

Hot Springs.

Our Benton letter gives the following detailed account of the encouraging prospects of that metaliferous region: "In order that all parties interested may have an opportunity of learning through your valuable paper the general business of this locality, permit me to state that Benton is still in existence, and from information lately received from Virginia City, Nevada, is likely to have another 10-stamp mill in the Spring. Through the influence and exertions of Mr. D. P. Pierce, capital has at last been induced to come to the relief of this locality; and if there is no mistake in the information and no backaction addender attached to retard its progress, we shall have a lively time this Summer and for a long time to come, for our mines are second to none on the Pacific slope of the Rocky Mountains. All that is required is a good mill and a liberal minded, competent man to manage it to secure a good return for the capital that will be required, and furnish employment for 500 men and make times lively. Already the news comes of another mill. Whether it comes or not it has had a wonderful effect on the people of this place. B. B. Alverson, having purchased the Excelsior Saloon, has overhauled and refitted it, and is going on at a lively rate. A general sprucing up all around is noticeable, while many miners that have been out of employment have gone to work on mines which have long laid idle, because there was no chance to get ore worked except by sending it to Reno, at a cost of $70 per ton for freight. Now, if this mill does come, good times may be expected. However, I will give you particulars as they may accumulate." The same correspondent adds this account of the following sad casuality: "January 21st our people were called upon to pay the last tribute of respect to Dennis Daley. The circumstances attending his death were sad indeed. On Saturday night he was alive and well, enjoying himself with his friends until 11 o'clock, at which time he went to the house where he was sleeping. On the following morning parties discovered his legs hanging out the window of his room, and upon examination it was found that the door would not stay fastened, and that he had fastened it on the inside and attempted to get out of the window. At the inquest it was elicited that he was subject to heart disease and fits, and that he had had an attack of one or the other just as he was getting into the window, causing his death. He was a machinist and engineer by trade, and leaves many friends to lament his untimely death."

Beaudry's Furnace.

We are indebted to Victor Beaudry, Esq. the preprietor, for the following detailed statement of the last, big run of the Cerro Gordo Smelting Works: The furnace, which had previously run 21 days, was started on the 1st of November, at 6 o'clock A. M., and stopped to rebuild on the 26th at 7 A. M. Started up again on the 29th at 9 A. M., and stopped January 23, at 4 A. M., for want of slags. The full running time was 79 days and 17 hours, in which was produced 6,909 bars of bullion, weighing 584,211 pounds, or 292 211-2,000 tons—an average within a fraction of 87 bars per day. There 927 bars remaining on hand for shipment. The furnace accumulated slags for eight days, and started up on the 1st instant, built anew and with some improvements.

A County Boarder.

J. E. Boyce was brought before Justice Gunnison January 30, on charge of petit larceny, in having stolen a pass-book from James Malone and obtaining goods thereon at the store of Earl & Harris, at Camp Independence. He was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $60, the property being ordered restored to Malone. In default of payment he will be allowed to rusticate in the county jail for a period of 30 days.

Harris & Rhine.

If anybody wants anything out of the usual line of country stores and will go to Harris & Rhine's and don't find it there, it may be safely assumed that it can not be found outside of the biggest wholesale houses of San Francisco. As for things in the usual line, they've got 'em, of course, and in quantities to suit. Read their advertisement again.

Dead.

In the appropriate place will be seen the sad announcement of the death of John Wallace, who has been released from his sufferings and all earthly care. The deceased was a good man, and many a sympathetic tear will be shed over his grave, while the entire community render deep condolence to the bereaved family.

At 3 A. M.

In the advertisement of the Aurora and Independence stage line, which appears on the first page of to-day's paper, the time of leaving Independence is put at 5 o'clock A. M., whereas it should be at three o'clock in the morning.

Several new advertisements for this week reach us at too late an hour for insertion. We again call attention to the notice at the head of the local columns in regard to this matter, and give fair warning that the rule will not be deviated from.

The Evidence.

The End of It—Fuzbuz Squelched.

INDEPENDENCE, Jan. 30, 1872.

MESSRS. EDITORS: In the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two, in the first month, on the twenty-seventh day of the month, Gen. U. S. Grant being President of the United States of America, and Newton Booth Governor of California, the people of the Atlantic States being in great commotion as to the welfare of the Grand Duke Alexis; on the self-same day there also appeared in your paper an article purporting to have been written at "Fir Grove," by one "Fuzbuz," whose Yankee imagination appears to have been wrought up to a high pitch, and filled with tender solicitude in regard to the well-being of a few old "Bachelors" in your immediate vicinity. Fearing lest the cogitation of his head might work evil with his digestive organs, and thereby damage that generous, sympathizing nature of his and cause it to become harder than the heart of a Pharaoh I hasten with all due diligence with a reply that there has not been any deaths or severe colics caused by what he terms "annual stuffings." Therefore I am led to say that all is well. And as to the query "Do they sleep well of nights, or is their sleep disturbed by gastromic visions," etc., I must reply that, judging from appearances, I am led to infer that their sleep is fully as sound as that of the man who, through a mistake, took too much of a dose of D. H. F. orders.

Finally, for the soothing of his nervous system, I will state that he need not fear that any of those gaunt, hungry fellows will come soliciting his aid to obtain a "square meal." Respectfully,

BACHELOR'S FRIEND.

KEARSARGE.

A Gentleman Communicates on the Subject.

INDEPENDENCE, Jan. 31, 1871.

EDITORS INDEPENDENT: The following may be of interest to your readers; if you think so please publish, and oblige.

In the Spring of 1871, Mr. John B. Winters and Mr. C. H. Van Gorder entered Independence with a grand flourish of trumpets. Fine horses, fine carriages and fine clothes don't always denote fine men. They came in grand style, with teams of their own and coachmen of their own to drive them. The people of this valley, bless their poor, gullible hearts, had an idea that something would be done with the Kearsarge mine. Their ideas were correct: something was done, but not exactly what they had been looking for. After Winters and Van Gorder had worked the mine all Summer; after they had run the concern thousands of dollars in debt; after they had used the good people of this section till they couldn't use them any longer, Mr. Winters and Mr. Van Gorder made their exit with a flourish of trumpets, but this time the flourish was very weak and the trumpets were very small—in fact, they had "come out at the little end of the horn." But, not satisfied with running the Kearsarge company thousands of dollars in debt; not satisfied with using the labor of poor men all the year; not satisfied with using the goods of the merchants and the produce of the farmers, all of which were obtained on credit (I believe the Kearsarge credit is below par now); not satisfied with all this they throw the company into bankruptcy, and leave the creditors to whistle for their money. Mr. C. H. Van Gorder and Mr. J. B. Winters present claims against the Kearsarge company amounting to over $75,000—individual claims. Does any sane man imagine that Van Gorder or more particularly, Mr. Winters ever expended any such amount for the Kearsarge mining company? Most of the sane men whom I know doubt if Van Gorder or Winters ever had that much money, and believe that Winters and Van Gorder, thinking this Kearsarge property very valuable and a "good thing to have in the family," are doing their "level best" to get the property into the "family, and leave honest creditors "out in the cold." The facts I will hereafter state, will bear the people out in their conclusions.

An assignee's sale in bankruptcy of the Kearsarge property was ordered by the District Court of the United States, to take place January 24, 1872. Winters and Van Gorder had not found the right man at that date, and the sale was postponed till the 27th day of January. In the meantime they had found their man. His name was Dey. They concluded to "stand the hazard of the 'Dey.'" There was very little hazard about it, however. The "Dey" was cast. Mr. Dey came, saw but did not conquer. "Never say die" is a good thing to say. Winters and Van Gorder will never say "Dey" again to this part of the country, at least. This Mr. Richard V. Dey came by stage from Aurora, booked as a "passenger." The morning after his arrival he took a walk, I presume for exercise. He spoke to no one, and no one spoke to him. There was a person in the town who knew him, it seems, but it wasn't convenient for that person to recognize him just then.

The Kearsarge property lies nearly directly west of Independence. Mr. Dey evidently likes travel, for Mr. Dey, second morning after his arrival, instead of hiring a horse, as most men would have done, to go directly west to the Kearsarge, he books his name as "Mr. Richards," per stage for Lone Pine, directly south. After riding about three miles south, he leaves the stage and is introduced to certain parties as "Mr. Bond." At this point, three miles south, there is a horse or mule in waiting to carry him to the Kearsarge premises, northwest. Parties here, to whom the Kearsarge company was indebted, fearing that there might be some "colored individual in the fence," concluded to send parties to the Kearsarge mill prepared to bid for the property. The parties, duly equipped with the "needful" arrived at the premises and saw, rather to their astonishment, the "red flag" nailed to the mill. At first the idea prevailed that the mill, like the affairs of the company, was sick; but proceeding further they found that the Nevada traveler, Mr. Deputy Marshal-Passenger-Richards-Bond-Dey on the premises, ready but not willing to sell the property to the highest bidder. Mr. D. M. P. R. B. D. was recognized by one of the parties sent to the mill as the gent who made the mysterious entree and exit. At the time specified in the notice, Mr. Circuitous Dey offered the property at public sale. The parties sent from Independence bid it up to $6,150, when the mysterious Dey from the north peremptorily withdrew the property from sale, and announced that, if not disposed of at private sale, it would again be offered at auction four week from that date, say February 24th. What was the matter? Had the parties from Ihdependence more coin with which to pay the twenty per cent. of the purchase money than the other bidders? This all looks very singular and very queer, but if I am correctly informed Mr. Dey is an adept at this sort of thing, for nearly the same thing occurred, with Mr. Dey as the leading actor, at Aurora, a few years ago.

It was evident that these parties, knowing the depth of snow at the Kearsarge premises, thought the chances against any one being there to bid for the property were directly in their favor; hence these mysterious proceedings. By deylating upon the subject we can gain nothing. Suffice it to say that the evident intention of the whole proceedings of the gentleman from the north was fraud, and fraud of the meanest kind. But the little game was blocked, for this time at least. What these parties may do in the future the future will determine. In the meantime, "forewarned is forearmed," and the creditors (the honest creditors) of the Kearsarge company must be prepared for the meanest, lowest and dirtiest kind of tricks. In relation to Mr. Dey, I would say: that if the United States has many more Marshals or Deputy Marshals of this species, I would respectfully suggest that the United States give them their discharges and let them go to the Tammanny Ring in New York.

Fast Time,

About the fastest railroad traveling on record occurred during the late conflagration in Chicago, when two fire engines were sent from Bloomington, Illinois, to the relief of the burning city. In two hours and forty minutes from the time they started in special train, over the Chicago, Alton and St. Louis Railroad, they were throwing water on the fire. The train made the run, one hundred and twenty-six miles, in two hours and ten minutes, and the run from Bloomington to Joliet, eighty-nine miles, was made in eighty minutes.

WINTER WINDS.

When Winter winds are piercing chill,
And through the hawthorn blows the gale,
With solemn feet I tread the hill
That overbrows the lonely vale.

Where, twisted round the barren oak
The Summer vine in beauty clung,
And Summer winds the stillness broke—
The crystal icicle is hung.

Where, from their frozen urns, mute springs
Pour out the river's gradual tide,
Shrilly the skater's iron rings,
And voices fill the woodland side.

Alas! how changed from the fair scene
When birds sang out their mellow lay,
And winds were soft, and woods were green,
And the songs ceased not with day.

Chill airs and Wintry winds, my ear
Has grown familiar with your song!
I hear it in the opening year—
I listen and it cheers me long.

The Louisville Courier-Journal complains that "Mr. Stephens' last joke, which appeared in this morning's Small Talk, did not arrive soon enough to afford us time to procure microscopes for ALL our subscribers."

—Here is a Missouri paper's notion of the high calling of journalism: "We are compelled to make this week's issue almost exclusively a local and advertisement paper; but look out for next week's. It will be one of the gayest, fiercest, hottest papers that ever went forth from an American news-raggery."

—A young gentleman of the State of Illinois was greatly disconcerted at a trick played upon him by a passenger locomotive. He had a bright silver ten cent piece, and was of the opinion that the weight of the engine would spread it out to the dimensions of a quarter. He laid it on the rail in advance of the train and awaited the result. The locomotive soon came thundering along, picked up the dime on one of its wheels and flung it, nobody knows whither. The boy is firmly convinced that the Illinois Central is by odds the meanest railroad of which he has any knowledge.

THREE SMOKERS.

Three gallants sat up an office fair,
In an office fair, as the sun went down,
Each cosily smoking and lounging there,
And watching the belles as they stepped down town;
For men must smoke and women look fine,
Though taxes are heavy and stocks decline,
And the grocers' bill be running.

Three wives sat up till the midnight hour,
And longed, and watched, and hoped in vain!
But the husbands, snug in their office bower,
Were smoking dull care from their weary brain.
For men will smoke, though women repine,
Though health, and wealth, and vigor decline,
And sickness and duns be on-coming.

Three corpses were buried from sight one day
By paisy, and consumption and fits cut down,
And none but the doctor had ever dared say,
That "sure as great guns" they were smoked out of town.
For men will smoke, though death does come,
To desolate fortune, and office and home,
And grocers and wives be mourning.

Keep Accounts.

[HENRY WARD BEECHER IN THE LEDGER.]

Do not laugh, Mr. Bonner, but I wish to urge upon all young people, whose habits are yet to be formed—not the duty of enterprise, nor of frugality, nor of temperance, nor of industry and thrift; but the duty of keeping accounts.

This is not performed by simply entering every penny spent, but of so balancing receipts and expenditures that one may know every day precisely how he stands with the world. Credit may be helpful in an organized business. But when a young man or woman are just beginning to earn a little money, it is wise for them never to owe a penny, not even for a day. It is better to go without a hundred needed things than to be in debt; and the poorer you are the more tyrannical will debt prove to be. A rich man may venture to go in debt; he has resources which have only to be collected to meet it. But a poor man in debt has only his scant earnings, which often barely suffice to pay his daily necessities, and leave the debt, with accumulating interest, to worry him, and to tempt him to dishonesty.

It is wise for every young man to refuse to incur debt, and to oblige himself to keep a clear and minute account of every cent gained and spent. The habit once formed, it will be as easy to be methodical in money matters as to be careless.

Small as this may seem, it will really exert a moral influence upon one's whole life. It is the foundation of business. If one begins to get on in life, he will have become so wonted to method and to a clear understanding of his affairs, that nothing will be left to chance. He will see every day just the road he is on, and far along he is.

It may seem superfluous to exhort business men to pursue the same course. But it is probable that not one half of the business men in America keep their accounts in such a manner that they themselves, or any one for them, could tell, without weeks and months of investigation, what their real standing is. The settling of estates is a melancholy business. All values seem to shrink; hundreds of things important to the estate when kept only in the man's head, and he dying, the record of them is lost, or is recovered only by long search. Two partners may get along smoothly while they are alive. Several instances have come to our knowledge of miserable results following the death of business men, arising from the want of thorough account keeping.

It ought not to be left a question of business prudence. A careful record of all affairs should be a part of business morality. It is part of right living to leave one's affairs so that they can be settled without misunderstanding or quarrel. No one has a right to roll over on his heirs a load of difficulties. It is part of a good preparation for death, to have one's affairs so that no one will be injured, and no one perplexed and burdened.

Parents should bring up both boys and girls to keep accounts. It should be impressed upon them, early and late, that business cannot be carried on without minute and accurate record. After a habit of accounts is once formed, system in affairs and method in accounts become easy. Instead of hindering they facilitate business, economize time, give clearness to one's course, prevent complications, enable one at any moment to know his actual condition, and keep his estate so that if called to leave it, he can do so without a liability of tormenting his family or heirs with a wretched tangle of vexations and disappointments.

Therefore, keep accounts!

Who Is Leet?

Colonel Leet was on General Grant's staff, and after the war, being desirous of leaving the army, he received from General Grant a letter to Mr. Grinnell, as an old merchant, to do anything to forward Leet's views, it would be very gratifying to him (Gen. Grant). This letter was presented to Mr. Grinnell before he was appointed Collector, and was all the notice that was required. Grinnell did do a good thing for the young Colonel. He gave him a portion of the General Order business ["only a crumb," Leet says]. By this arrangement Francis M. Bixby [another name for William M. Tweed] had to forward to Colonel Leet, at Washington, $5,000 per annum in monthly installments, Leet being at this time still an officer in the army, on duty in the War Department.—New York Tribune.

Graham Bread,.

Mix half a pint of yeast with a quart of luke warm water, or milk and water (two-thirds milk and one-third water); stir this into about a pint of wheat flour, and add Graham flour enough to make a stiff batter. Let it rise, in a warm place, over night. In the morning, add a teacup of molasses, a teaspoonful of salt, one of soda, and Graham flour enough to make a batter as stiff as can be stirred with a tablespoon. Put in tins to rise (fill them more than half full); let them stand until the loaves are light, and bake about an hour. This makes three loaves of bread, if baked in pint pans. Be sure and mould the dough into loaves as soon as it is light, as unbolted flour runs into the acetous fermentation much more rapidly than bolted or superfine flour. Unbolted flour requires a somewhat thinner or softer sponge, and should be baked a little longer than loaves of the same weight made of bolted flour. Soda is not essential if the yeast is lively. Yeast should be well mixed with milk-warm water before being added to the flour.

RECIPE No. 2.—Use one pint of wheat bread rising, half a teacup of molasses or sugar, one teaspoon of salt, half a teaspoonful of super-carbonate of soda, dissolved in a little warm water, one quart or more of Graham meal. The batter must not be as thick as ordinary bread dough. Pour the mixture into bread pans, or small forms, as deep as you want the thickness of the loaf. Set the batter to rise, and bake it in a quick oven. Cover the bread with thick paper during the first half hour while baking. —Hearth and Home.

Incident in Artemus Ward's Early Life.

In his lecture on Artemus Ward, Mark Twain tells the following:

When Artemus was very young he and a companion got hold of a pack of cards and learned to play euchre. Artemus was perfectly fascinated with the game, and played it as often as he had an opportunity; but it had to be done on the sly, and he had to hide his cards from his parents. So, when he was looking out for a place to hide them, the boys thought the safest place where they could put the cards was in the pocket of the minister's black gown, under the very ægis of the church. I don't know what ægis means, but it's a good word, and I suppose it's all right. Well, the old minister was called upon to baptize a convert, and as he went down into the water wearing the gown the cards began to come up to the surface and float off. The boys were on the bank watching, though in great fear, kept their eyes on the cards. As it happened, there came up first two bowers and three aces. Of course the boys were thrashed, and an old aunt of Artemus proceeded to lecture him on the enormity of the crime. "Why," said she, "just imagine how the poor man must have felt when he saw the cards coming up! I should have thought he would have fainted, and I don't see how he got out." "Well," said Artemus, "I don't see how he could help going out on such a hand."

A Slow Train.

Artemus Ward, when a young man, once brought up in Cleveland and took up the profession of reporter for one of the papers there. Out that way there was a remarkably slow railroad, and Artemus used to say there was a man, young, buoyant, full of hope, and as light hearted a convict as could possibly be found, who was going to spend a couple of years in the penitentiary at the other end of the road. He got upon the train and started for his destination. When he arrived there he was so old, decrepid and changed in appearance that he would not answer the description, and was refused admittance. The road was a source of great annoyance to Artemus, and one day he remonstrated with the conductor, telling him that the road was an injustice to mankind. "You ought to put the cow-catcher on the other end of the train—there's where all the danger is." "Why so?" said the conductor. "Well, you see that there is no likelihood that you will overtake a cow, but what's to hinder a cow from walking in at the rear door and biting the passengers?"

It Won't Do.

The following article, which is going the rounds of the press, won't do to publish in a juvenile work, for the purpose of teaching little boys to keep their faces clean. The oftener we see it the more convinced we are that it won't do:

"A small child in Illinois climbed up upon a chair to wipe its face on a hanging towel. The chair slipped, and the child catching in the towel was hanged by the neck and died."

If that child had been climbing up to steal a jam, it would have been all right, but he wasn't. He was a nice, clean little child and wanted to wipe his face, and got hanged. Cleanliness was the cause of his death. He was an infant martyr. It is a comfort to reflect that he is a cherub now, and keeps his feathers clean without running any risk.—S. F. Figaro.

Money Matters.

The San Francisco Alta of January 25, says: There has been a good demand for money during this week, and it has been freely supplied at Bank for commercial purposes at 1 @ 1¼ per cent. The loans at terms are 9 @ 12 per cent. per annum. The supply of coin has altogether been fair. Since the first of January $356,000 has been paid into the Custom House, but the Assistant Treasury has released $800,000 in the same time on transfers. Of this, $500,000 was notified this week and $300,000 on the 5th. This supplies rather more than the drain for customs and through the Post Office, independent of the operations of the Mint which have been limited by reason of the small receipts from the interior. The fine weather will, however, now facilitate the supplies of bullion, of which much is taken out in various localities after the storms. The agitation of the Bank commission and Mining bills in the Legislature is calculated to affect the markets by exciting distrust among lenders. The individual and foreign banks cannot be affected by it, but those persons who have deposits in corporate banks are liable under the bill to see their money suddenly sequestrated in the hands of the sheriff to be recovered by vexatious process under pretence that they were not safe in Bank. The subjection of mining stocks to frequent changes of management makes them less a favorite security with lenders than before. The demand for money for remittance is regular.

A Cure for Red Noses.

Electricity has achieved a new triumph. Already employed to restore nimbleness to gouty limbs, the recent discoveries of Dr. Bernier, a French physician, show electricity to be an efficient remedy for the evil effects of excessive drinking on the human nose. The doctor maintains that by application of an electric current to noses even of the most Bacchic hue, the flesh may be made "to come again as the flesh of a little child," and supports his assertion by a case performed on a female patient of his own, a woman of high rank. "Knights of the Burning Lamp," who have still some regard for personal appearance, will appreciate Dr. Bernier's discovery, as it promises them immunity from the dreaded outward tertimony to their pet vice. There is one danger, however, in the discovery, namely—its tendency, if confirmed, to encourage the growth of secret intemperance.

The True Bowery Boy.

Wendell Phillips, in his lecture on "Street life in Europe," the other night, gave one little instance of street life in America. Thackeray, on his visit here many years ago, was anxious to see a genuine Bowery Boy, and a friend pointed out to him one leaning against a lamp-post, with his hands in his pockets, his "soap locks" carefully regulated over his eyebrows, and his cigar tilted upright between his teeth. Thackeray was delighted, and determined to "interview" the monster. So he strode with his manly, sweeping gait, carrying that ever-present benignancy of expression on his face, up to the "Boy" and remarked very innocently: "Sir, excuse me, but I would like to go to Broadway." The "Boy" returned the look with one equally benignant and replied, "Well, why in h——l don't you go?"

An Unsophisticated Lady,

Who resides in New Jersey, and had never seen the burning of a house, visited Philadelphia and fortunately for her desire, a conflagration occurred within a short distance of where she was sojourning. Awakened by the passing engines and trucks, she got out of bed and hastily threw open the second story window. In a moment a hose truck dashed by, unreeling the hose as it sped along. The old lady gazed at the vehicle, and observing that it left behind what appeared to be a huge piece of leather, she stretched her neck out of the window, and waving her night cap excitedly towards the fireman, shrieked out, "Gentlemen, gentlemen! you are losing your strap."

—A lady, some time back, at the British Museum, asked if they had a skull of Oliver Cromwell. Being answered in the negative—"Dear me," said she, "that's very strange, for they have one at Oxford."

LITIGANT PAPER FOR INYO COUNTY,

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY

CHALFANT & PARKER.

JAS. E. PARKER | P. A. CHALFANT

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.;

Saturday,.....February 10, 1872.

OFF FOR HOME.

Our Junior started Wednesday morning last on a visit home. He goes to Nevada, and then in connection with some business affairs, to Sacramento, and back here again via the Southern route. He limited the period of his absence at four weeks; but we fancy he will find that limit rather too short. In the meantime we ask the indulgence of our readers, inasmuch as we are so short-handed in the office that there must necessarily be a dimunition in our usual amount as well as a depreciation in quality of reading matter. The Junior is, or was, the only good printer in the county, and as it is impossible to supply his place, it may be assumed that the remaining force may be found strictly "at home" and at the "case" pretty much every day during his absence.

No-fence Law.

In the Senate, after a desultory but somewhat exciting debate, a test vote was reached on Keyes substitute to the Fence bill, which embraced all the agricultural counties, except the mountaneous regions of Fresno and Tulare. The bill was lost by a vote of 15 to 21. Fowler is jubilant, has grown an inch and a half taller, and declares he can defeat any bill of the kind that don't suit him. The advocates of the no-fence law, however, have not given up the fight, but intend to introduce a new bill. A day or two previous Wing presented a petition signed by 50 citizens of Inyo county, asking for the passage of a no-fence law. He voted in favor of the bill, while Andross voted against it.

We are full in the belief that this is the worst bit of legislation that can, or will be inflicted on the State this Winter.

Valuable Table.

Below we give a table which may be of considerable use to our farmer friends especially. To find out the number of hills, plants or trees it is desirable to have in an acre at any given distance apart it is only necessary to consult the following:

Hills	1 foot	apart	each way	..	43,560
"	2 feet	each way		.....	10,890

Political Tribulations.

A late Washington dispatch says a convention composed of discontented Republicans will be held in Cincinnati immediately after the Philadelphia convention, and it will prepare both ticket and platform for the Democratic party. The Democratic convention will not be held until late in the Summer, and then will only ratify the work of discontented Republicans. Effor s will be made to nominate Trumbull by the recalcitrant faction. The fights of the Republicans are expected to be a strong element in carrying doubtful States.

Stock Sales.

Last week was a particularly lively one for the sale of mining stocks, both in Gold Hill and Virginia, as well as in San Francisco, and the excitement seems likely continue. Last week the sales in the San Francisco Stock Board amounted to the unprecedented sum of $4,540,000. The new Stock Board will commence business in that city next Thursday.—Gold Hill News, Jan. 26.

For Congressman.

The new apportionment allows California four members of Congress, instead of three as at present. It is probable that three will be elect d by districts and one at large. On the Republican side, Henry Edgerton is already spoken of as candidate for member at large.

—A few days ago a "gent" in the neighborhood of Cardiff, went out with his dog and gun. The dog (a pointer) came to a "point," when the sporting "gent," walking up deliberately, kicked the sagacious animal, saying, "You lazy brute, are you knocked up already?"

—A handy tune—Fortune. It is not a common metre.

A BAD RULING FOR PRE-EMPTORS.

Commissroner Drummond, United States Land Office, has notified the Receiver at the Aurora office that all persons who desire to make proof of pre-emptions, or perfect homestead or soldier-warrant titles to lands, must make personal application at the Land Office before they can receive certificates of final proofs or title, even though a portion or all the purchase money has been previously paid in. All proofs required from witnesses, however, may be taken before the County Clerk whose certificate of such testimony is sufficient. We have not seen a copy of the ruling, nor of the law upon which it is based, but believe the foregoing is a correct statement of its intent.

Now, as the most essential part of establishing a right of pre-emption or entry is included in evidence taken by the County Clerk, why is the presence in person of the applicant at the Land Office made an essential condition? His identity can be as clearly established through the County Clerk, as his right of pre-emption by certified proofs given by the same official. In fact the chances for fraud through false personification, if that is the point, are reduced to nothing by this course, because if an honest applicant is personally unknown to the county officer there is necessarily no difficulty or expense in establishing his identiy, while the case is vastly different if the same has to be done at a distant Land Office. There is not a single good reason obvious to a common understanding for this outrageous requirement, while there is an abundance for its abolishment. It is in contravention of the rights of the people, because it imposes an onerous and unnecessary expense upon all the actual settlers upon public lands in all the outlying districts like our own, which is one only among hundreds to feel the tax. It imposes upon every such settler a long, tedious and dangerous journey of from one hundred to two hundred miles; it involves an expense of from $100 to $200, from which cause a large majority are totally and effectually barred from securing their lands at all; in many cases men cannot neglect their business, or safely absent themselves from their families in their exposed and isolated homes, in ord r to make such long journeys; it is wholly unnecessary as was demonstrated by Commissioner Wilson, who suspended it to the extent of according discretionary powers to the officers of the local Land Office to enforce it or not, by whom it never was enforced thereafter. It is a requirement seriously affecting the prosperity and advancement of individuals and communities, and should be suspended or rescinded without delay.

AMNESTY IN THE SENATE.

The Amnesty bill being under consideration, Salsbury spoke at considerable length in its favor.

He was followed by Shurz in an elaborate speech in favor of universal amnesty, concluding as follows: "The people are fast becoming aware that great as the crime of the rebellion is there are other villainies which imperatively demand correction. They were beginning to look behind these vociferous assertions of an austere and exclusive patriotism to see what abuses they are intended to disguise, and to discover that good and honest government in the South, as well as all over the country, would do infinitely more to revive true loyality, and a healthy national spirit than laws calculated to keep alive the prejudices and resentments of the past."

Nye replied. He said he never would consent to give the rebel leaders the right to take part in the Government. He would keep them browsing on the outside till their hair grew as long as Nebuchadnezzar's, and if that was not statesmanship then he did not know anything about it. [Laughter.]

Shurz wanted the leading rebels relieved so as to bring a higher order of talent into public life at the South; but he would rather have a lower order of talent cultivated in the school of loyality. As to abuses in the government of the Southern States, the people had themselves to blame for it. They had sown the wind and must reap the whirlwind.

A Beggar.

Mrs. Potter Palmer, at her New Year's reception, wore a $2,000 dress, $25,000 finger rings and a $15,000 necklace. The dress was a handsome brown brocade, trimmed with rows of pheasant breasts and looped with scarlet fuchias. Her husband is the gentleman who is reported to have exclaimed, in tragic accents, the next day after the fire: "I'm a beggar! I'm a beggar!" We'd like to be a beggar.—Chicago Post.

—A school boy has written a composition on the horse, in which he says it is an animal having four legs, "one at each corner."

PACIFIC COAST READAGRAMS.

One of the boys charged with the murder of Mr. Dickerson at Stringtown, California, has been admitted to bail. Bail for the other two has been denied. Their case came before the Grand Jury on the 29th.

The recent burning of a miner in his cabin near Shasta, California, is supposed to have been a case of spontaneous combustion.

The loss of sheep by the late storms turns out to be greater than was at first expected. They wrere drowned in the lowlands or they perished in the cold. It may be found profitable to arrange for feeding and housing sheep and cattle in storm time, and to this end thousands are this year sowing alfalfa who never sowed grass or clover before.

Citizens of Ukiah having kicked in the Postoffice door, the worthy Postmaster says he will no longer sit up all night to distribute the mail.

Five hundred dollars reward is offered for the apprehension of J. R. Ridgeway, indicted for the murder of D. R. Andrews, in Santa Barbara county.

The General Lee Consolidated mine in Eureka district has changed hands at large figures. The principals in the new purchase are wealthy capitalists of San Francisco. The new company are to incorporate and put up a 20-stamp mill.

In the Salt Lake Council, January 29, the reading of the Governor's veto on the admission bill was followed by groans and hisses. The members spoke of it in mingled anger and contempt. Geo. Q. Cannon, the apostle, said the ignorance of the message was only equaled by its impudence. If he had a boy 12 years old who could not write a better document he would cut off his ears. A motion was finally made and carried that the message should not be spread upon the minutes. The Mormon papers are exceedingly bitter on the veto. The News says the Federal officers go so far in their antagonism and offensiveness as is not likely to be safe as to personal considerations. The Council appointed a committee to act with the House Committee to prepare a joint resolu ion submitting to the people the matter of holding a convention to draft a State Constitution and elect delegates to petition Congress for admission. It was said that the United States Attorney would, on the following day, move to admit all prisoners held under process of the United States Court to bail.

In San Francisco January 29, Wm. Ford was examined on a charge of attempting to outrage the person of his little girl, a bright and intelligent child of twelve years, and held to answer by Judge Louderback. His bail was fixed at $10,000. The case is one of the most revolting ever before in court. The mother, a poor, hard-working woman, is almost insane from grief and shame.

It was rumored on the street that Alvinza Hayward sold 11,000 shares of the Crown Point mine to an English company at $1,000 per share. The report is a canard, but nevertheless many believe there is a scheme on foot to run the stock up to the point named and then sell out to an English company, which is said to be negotiating for that purpose.

"Whisky has Used Him Up."

There is scarcely a community or neighborhood from Maine to Oregon, where this saying is not used almost every day in the year, and altogether too truly. A subject of this kind is to be found in almost every town. The merchant has failed, and whisky has done it. The lawyer, with a brilliant talent and large business, has fallen below the range of respectability and confidence. Whisky was the cause. The politician, with bright prospects before him, has played out, and the account is charged to whisky. The Judge, of age and respectability, i the subject of private and neighborhood talk. His enemies point with derision, and his friends hang their heads in shame, and whisky has done it. The kind-hearted neighbor and hard working man, has become a pest in society, and trouble to his family. Whisky beat him. Whisky will beat any man living, and that is just what it is made for.—Figaro.

Cheap Paint.

A cheap paint may be made for outbuildings that will last for years by taking milk and cement, or "water-lime," as some call it. Mix and apply three or four coats. Any dry color may be added. This will last for years, and by renewing once in two or three years, a building will look as well as if painted with oil paint. To put this on, the paint should be stirred constantly, or the finer parts will all soon be used out, and at last you will have nothing but sand. Have a boy to stir it all the time, and mix often.

EASTERN NEWS.

John W. Carter, who claims to be the legal Speaker of the House of Representatives of Louisiana, was during the war, Colonel of the Twenty-first (Confederate) Texas Cavalry. He was a Methodist preacher in Texas when the war broke out, and raised a regiment of cavalry in that State.

In the Lower House of Congress, January 29, bills were introduced admitting pine timber and lumber free for building ten sloops of war; repealing stamp tax on syrups and preserved vegetables; one by Butler, granting woman suffrage; Sloss, a land grant for a railroad from Decatur, Alabama, to Macon, Georgia; Harris of Mississippi, for renewal of land grant to the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad Company; Sheldon, arming the whole militia force of the United States; Stevenson, refunding to distillers the sums paid for Tice meters; Parker, to allow women to vote and hold offices in Territories; Coghlan, for the improvement of San Francisco harbor; Hooper of Utah, grant for right of way.

A bill for the recognition of a state of war between Spain and the Republic of Cuba and declaring both parties entitled to belligerent rights, including the right of each to carry their respective flags on the waters of the United States, was introduced by Voorhees, who moved a suspension of the rules and passage of the bill.

After debate the bill was referred to the Foreign Committee.

Among the bills introduced was one by Coghlan for short-hand reporters for the United States courts in California.

Burdett introduced a bill to allow half customs to be paid in greenbacks

Voorhees introduced a bill to place type and other printing material on the free list.

Hubbard a resolution, which was placed on file, instructing the Committee on Public buildings and grounds to inquire into the propriety and feasibility of procuring for the United States title to Independence Hall and Square in Philadelphia.

Congress has appropriated $50,000 to entertain the Japanese Embassadors in Washington.

The bridges at Chicago, across the river, are nearly completed, much to the joy of the citizens. The Clark street bridge will be one of the first opened.

It has been determined to drop the name of "Tammany" from the title of that society, from the leaves of the General and Ward Committees and from the building now known as Tammany Hall. The name to be substituted is "Columbian."

Brick Pomeroy was sued in New York, January 27, for $25,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage, by Sadie Wilkinson, of New Haven.

FOREIGN NEWS.

French reports say the Republicans are being severely pressed by the Bonarpartists, and that Bismarck contemplates another invasion of France.

Pere Hyacinth is to be one of the editors of a new religious journal in Rome to oppose the dogma of papal infallibility.

General Sherman is now visiting the cities of Italy. He received a banquet at Nice recently.

Alphonso, son of Isabella, is now supported for the King of Spain by al the Spanish Bourbons.

How Long it Takes to Read the Bible Through.

Elder Weaver, a man who has preached the gospel with good success for forty-five years, who is now settled over the Baptist church in Voluntown, stated in an address to the Sunday school in the Congregational church in Jewett city that he had heard a man say he had read the Bible through in sixty hours. Determined to ascertain whether the individual told the truth or not, he set about it himself, and read the whole of it alond to his wife in fifty-nine hours and something over thirty minutes. He read sometimes an hour, and sometimes two hours a day, keeping the exact time, with the result above indicated.—Ex.

Lo Lignified.

Captain J. Martin Reese has on exhibition at the old Sazerac Saloon, a thingumy that he says is the lower limbs of a lignified Indian. (Reese is a man of veracity.) Mart. says the Indian was buried about 230 years ago, and that by some process perhaps similar to that of petrification the lower limbs (including the hips) were transmuted into wood. Certain it is, however, the figure, whatever it may be or have been, rested beneath the surfac of the earth many years. The right leg is considerably larger than the left, and certain external ligneous organs, somewhat abraded, indicate that in life Lo belonged to the sterner sex.—Carson Register.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

 All advertisements, to insure insertion in these columns, must be handed in on or before 2 o'clock P. M., Friday.

For Other Lands.

Mr. Elder, who is still our Sheriff, spite of his desire to resign, has disposed of all his property interests in this county, and starts at once for Clarke District, where he will engage in smelting the extremely rich ores of that district. He has a furnace complete in every requisite now en route for that place, which he will put in practical operation at the earliest possible moment. We have good reason to believe, and most assuredly hope, Mr. Elder will make a grand success for himself and the district, which at present is no further advanced or developed than was Cerro Gordo at the time he and Mr. Belshaw commenced there. Clarke district is on or near the Colorado river, distant about 250 miles from Los Angeles and about the same from this point. It is a long way out of the world—no mails or similar advantages. A few white men have for a long time been engaged in taking out ore from the numerous very rich mines there and shipping it to San Francisco at a good profit, notwithstanding the great expense and other drawbacks under which their work has been carried on. The "Lizzie Bullock," said to be the richest mine on the Pacific coast, is in that district. We fancy the world will hear of that country soon, but we are sorry that Inyo has to contribute one of its best men to assist in the accomplishment.

A Gunpowder Plot.

A Mexican boy attempted a most diabolical outrage in Lone Pine, a few days since. It appears that he had taken umbrage on some trifling grounds against Sheriff Elder, or some member of his family, and in order to "get even," thought he would try and blow him up. He accordingly bored a hole in a stick of firewood, duly charged it with powder and awaited events. Not long afterwards Mr. Elder got hold of that identical stick of wood and built up a cosy fire and sat down to cogitate about Clark district or something. He didn't cogitate long; soon there was a fizz, a loud explosion, a whirlwind of fire and ashes and a Sheriff vamosing the ranch. Fortunately none of his family were in the room at the moment, nor any material damage occasioned to himself or property, by this fiendish attempt at murder. We don't vouch for the truth of the statement but we are told that Elder will give anybody $300 that will effectually "do" for that young hombre.

The Races,

Which are to begin in Lone Pine on the 22d instant, are exciting unusual interest. There will doubtless be a larger attendance this time than at any previous occasion of the kind that has ever occurred here. All the best horses in the county, to say nothing of the "scrubs," are in training and their respective backers express a strong desire to "come up" with the cash. We would submit a word of advice, only we know it would not be heeded. Parties interested will note a change of programme, in the appropriate advertisement, which changes the order of the mile and half mile races, the latter to be run February 22 and the former the following day. Also, that the entrance money must be paid in on or before the evening of Febuary 21.

Water Strike, etc.

Water in fair quantities has been struck in the Potosi or Lower Town tunnel in Cerro Gordo. The value of this strike will be appreciated when it is understood that all the water used there costs ten cents per gallon. The Belmont and Whittekind are both yielding large quantities of fine ore. Both furnaces are in full blast. The new road being built by Messrs. Darrow & Mears is nearly completed into Cerro Gordo. Mr. Beaudry has purchased the San Lucas mine from its former Mexican owners—an encouraging circumstance for the town, as Mr. Beaudry is not the man to allow such fine property to lie in comparative idleness..

Treasurer's Report.

Harry Isaacs, Deputy County Treasurer, has made a very elaborate report, from an examination of which any one can see at a glance the financial status of the county. This is our worthy Treasurer's, Mr. Isaac Harris, last report, as his term of office expires March 4th. We have good reason for saying that Mr. Harris has conducted the affairs of his office to the satisfaction of all, and we have no fears but the same will be said for his successor, Harry Isaacs, who is well fitted in every respect for the responsible duties of the office.

Breweries.

Parties who take any interest (we don't) in lager beer, how and by whom it is made, etc., will note the new advertisements relating to these matters. Joseph Fernbach owns and runs on his own account our brewery here, and Louie Munzinger and John Lubken the fine Lone Pine brewery. They are gentlemen, all sabe their business, and know how to treat callers as well as how to make good lager.

The Board of Supervisors.

The Supervisors have transacted quite a large amount of business during the present session. Were still in session yesterday afternoon.

Washington's Birthday—Wine

A Bishop Creek correspondent submits the following: "According to the Overland Almanac, published by Francis & Valentine, Washington's birthday will be the twenty-third of February, probably because it is leap year. People ought to be made aware of this fact. One other virtue of the wine raised around Stuttgart, of which you wrote about lately, is: If you pour one tumbler full of it on a regimental flag, it will draw the whole regiment together." If a simple sniff of this wine is so powerful in effect, a taste must be very dreadful.

The Difference.

Not long since a man called on an old gentleman, living in this vicinity, for the purpose of purchasing a hog. The price was agreed upon, the porker caught, tied and dumped in the wagon. The purchaser had climbed into his seat ready to drive off without having as yet said a word about paying. "Mr. J——," said he, "would it make any difference to you if I do not pay for this hog for a week or two?" "Yes, sir, it would," quickly came the answer, "it would make just a hog's difference." The hog didn't leave the ranch.

Strike in the Omega Tunnel.

A magnificent body of ore has just been struck on a cross lode in the Omega tunnel, or rather 150 feet below the level of the tunnel, and 450 feet from the surface. This cross lode is about 20 feet in width, mostly hard ore running near $200 per ton. The indications are also very favorable for a big strike in the main tunnel.

Improving.

Several parties have recently located lands in the vicinity of Camp Independence, and are busily engaged in making long lines of ditch fences and other improvements. Among the old settlers Messrs. Chaquette and Melone are setting out two or three miles more of live fence, and others are making like permanent improvements.

Worthy of Attention.

Rothschilds & Co., as we learn per Perham, and know from occular and culinary demonstration, have on hand and for sale a lot of the finest fresh bacon in the market. Duffield hams all the way from Chicago, and also a superior lot of home-cured, put up by Mr. Lank.

County Warrants.

Parties holding tickets in the county warrant lottery will do well to note their numbers and then those of "County Warrants payable," to be found in another column.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

Board met in regular session Monday, February 5. Present, A. N. Bell, John Simpson and T. K. Hutchison, President.

Ordered, that a drawing for jurors be made for the ensuing year. Also that a deed of lots 5 and 7, block 26, in the town of Independence, be made to Thomas Edwards.

The reports of highways made by County Surveyor Tuttle, Kingsley and Shaw, viewers, were accepted, and the following described roads declared public highways: One commencing at J. Rowan's house, running thence to Sand Springs creek; one commencing at Sneden's store to intersect the mill road. Surveyor Tuttle, John Clark and A. McDonald appointed viewers for a road to commence at or near the ranch of T. D. Lewis thence east to the lumber landing on Owens river.

John Bodle was appointed Road-master at Big Pine.

Survey ordered for a road to commence at Campbell's hotel via Hessian's ranch to Shukard's. Tuttle, Gregg and Bodle viewers.

The road from Lone Pine to Independence was declared a public highway; also that from Fish Springs to Campbell's; also from Independence to the Bend City bridge and to the Eclipse mine.

W. A. Fox was appointed Justice of the Peace, and W. C. Snodgrass, Constable, for Cerro Gordo.

Treasurer's report approved.

Road from Lone Pine bridge, on lines as surveyed, to, Cerro Gordo ordered opened up.

Report of Road-master Whipple approved.

Bills of D. J. Canty and Dr. Columber, passed.

Application of M. S. Clark and others for toll bridge license filed. A proposition from the same parties to sell their bridge to the county for $1,250, taken under advisement.

Petition of A. B. Elder, Sheriff, asking that his resignation be accepted, was denied.

J. A. Hannah, County Judge, was allowed $60 on the General Fund for office rent.

The Garcia-Alvarez Affair—Coroner's Inquest.

Coroner J. A. Lank held an inquest, January 24, upon the body of Sabine Alvarez, who was shot and killed two days previously in Cerro Gordo, some account of which we gave the same week. Following is a brief statement of the testimony elicited, and the names of the jurymen serving on the occasion. The verdict, which is also appended, is entitled to full consideration as coming from men of standing and unbiased judgment. The jury was composed as follows:

John Simpson, J. L. Belshaw, J. R. Hughes, J. K. Maloney, S. A. McDowell, F. F. Thomas, Robert Arnold, John W. McCuistion, A. A. McKay and W. A. Fox, Foreman.

R. L. Peterson, Deputy Sheriff, testified that on the morning of January 22, between the hours of 4 and 6, he was awakened from sleep by outside parties, who told him that a man had been shot, and wanted him to go and arrest the person that done it; got up and went to Lola's dance house, where he found a man on the bed who appeared to be in a dying condition; he was partly raised up, and could talk; in answer to a question, stated as witness understood him, that "Rosario" had shot him. "Lola turned and said, "'Rosalis' shot him;" went immediately to Rosalis' house and arrested him; found no other arms in his room except a pistol which he took from him. [At Lola's room] there was a matrass and blankets on the floor, the window had been broken, apparently from the outside and by a stick, pieces of glass being scattered over the floor and blankets.

Dr. Lesesne testified in effect that Sabine Alvarez had died from the effect of a bullet wound in the left breast, and in about one hour and a half after receiving it: that the dying man told him that Rosalia had shot him. The witness stated that the proper pronunciation was "Rosalia," not "Roscaltis;" that the nature of his wound would not materially affect the mind of Alvarez.

Alphonso Agualla deposed that deceased came to the house of Lola Travis on the morning of January 22, said he was shot and asked for the loan of a pistol; that he had been shot by Rosealtis.

C. F. Duval was here sworn in as interpreter of the Spanish language.

Jose Barrera sworn: Was alongside of Alvarez when he was shot; did not see the man that shot him, as he was behind a woman inside the door but heard his voice at the moment of the shooting; did not recognize it; witness was drunk and fell down; deceased was outside the door; deceased made no noise at the door; had told witness that he had something to do with a woman; witness told deceased he had better leave there. The woman of the house opened the door, and Sabine Alvarez told her he did not come there to insult anyone; that he respected the house and did not intend to do any harm. The man in the house used an oath something like "son of a ——;" no threat was made by Alvarez.

Wm. Barrows testified that he had taken the dying man's statement, which is substantially the same as the testimony of the last witness.

Rosalia Donzales stated that deceased was 26 years old, a native of Santa Cruz, State of Chihuahua, and that he has a brother living in Tucson.

Martina Sanchez sworn: Heard Rob. Peterson and Roscaltis talking together, Roscaltis telling Sheriff Rob. Peterson that a Mexican had come and took hold of the knob of the door and wanted to come in and take a drink with the woman in the house. Dona Pietra told the Mexican not to insult her or her house. The Mexican said that he would not do so; he had not come for such a purpose; Roscaltis said "if you do—" and fired. Peterson asked him how he killed the man. Roscaltis said, "I opened the door about four inches and shot him." Peterson asked what the deceased had done at his house as the reason for shooting him. Roscaltis said he had done nothing. Peterson told him that he, Roscaltis, would have to break a pane of glass to have a good defense. Witness said the glass was broken from the inside of the room, and the pieces fell on the outside; heard the glass breaking 10 or 15 minutes after the shot was fired.

Alphonso Agualla, on being recalled, stated that he had gone after the Sheriff and that the Sheriff came about 15 minutes after the shooting, and went into the room with Roscaltis; staid there about 15 minutes; came out together; stood by the bar, Roscaltis smoking a cigar and had a pistol sticking out of his pocket; saw Peterson whispering to Roscaltis; soon four or five Mexicans came in, and heard Peterson tell Roscaltis to go into another room, and Roscaltis done so, Peterson going with him.

Casmero Peralta sworn: Was standing on the outside of the house after the shooting, and saw a pane of glass breaking from the inside of Roscaltis' room; deceased had then been removed to the house of Lola Travis; did not know who broke the glass; it was done about half past six A. M.

Lola Travis stated that deceased came to her house about 5 o'clock, and that he was not drunk; danced twice and left the house; returned in about 15 minutes and said that Roscaltis had shot him; deceased had told witness that he had never had any previous difficulty with Rosaltis; deceased was not armed.

The jury then returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased was shot and killed by Roscaltis Garcia without just cause or provocation.

A warrant was then issued for the arrest of Garcia, but was returned unsatisfied, Garcia having left the country Home Again.

Judge Van Decar and our worthy County Clerk, Mr. Moffatt, have just returned from the muddy country on the other side, about Sacramento and San Francisco.

CONNUBIALITIES.

"Wilt thou be an ancient maiden?"
Say the matrons unto me;
"Wilt thou have no chubby children, Clinging fondly to thy knee?"
"Ruddy matrons! happy mothers!
What are children unto me?"

"Wilt thou live alone forever?"
Say the matrons unto me.
Light I answer: "Who is single
Should be ever blithe and free.
Sober matrons! thoughtful mothers!
Liberty is sweet to me!"

"Youth is scornful in the sunshine,"
Say the matrons unto me,
"Drop thy 'kerchief, boastful beauty!
While thine eye is bright of glee.
Age is lurking in the shadow—
Age is creeping up to thee!"

And I answer, lightly laughing,
What the matrons say to me;
"I am given to Diana—
To the huntress, fair and free—
And the lumpy, lovesick Venus
Has no follower in me."

Farming Implements.

[From The Rural Press.

Farming implements are likely to be scarce during the approaching harvesting season, if we are informed correctly. By the market reports for the past two years we find that very few agricultural tools, particularly harvesting machinery, have been imported to California; the large dealers in those articles in San Francisco having two years ago a heavy stock left over on their hands, by reason of the drouth and consequent limited demand; this fact, in conjunction with a depression in prices last year, discouraged new orders. The commercial embarrassments of the old house of Treadwell & Co., which had an immense stock on hand, which was put upon the market in the midst of the season, by the assignee, at about 80 per cent. of the cost, caused another serious loss to other holders of this class of goods in San Francisco; as, rather than carry a heavy and unprofitable stock for another season, they sold almost at any sacrifice. This heavy stock of agricultural machinery—which they have to hold over—was one of the principal causes of Treadwell & Co.'s financial embarrassments; and the season had so far advanced before the red tape of a bankruptcy court allowed goods to be put upon the market, that Brandenstein & Co. (who bought the whole speculation, because it was about half cost) had to hold to their threshers, headers and mowers over another year; but the subject has a more serious aspect for our farmers, who have little to do with the profits of commercial speculations, and that is why we allude to the matter now. The coming season promises to be one of the most prosperous for many years for cerials; in short it will be the great wheat year of this decade. If, then, there is to be a great demand for harvesting machinery of all kinds, and there is likely not to be sufficient to meet that demand, will not the prices go up accordingly. It is possible that the best class of threshers, headers, mowers and reapers, before Spring may not be found when wanted, for love or money. It would be well for our farmers to look out in time, and be prepared for this possible emergency.

Arizona News.

A dispatch dated at San Diego, Febuary 3, gives this intelligence:

The Tucson (Arizona) Citizen of January 27 publishes a letter under the heading of "three men murdered and one wounded," as follows: The report by Captain Smith at Camp Boyce, dated January 25, says: Yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock the mail driver from Tucson, named John Bedford, arrived at this post and stated that both mails had been captured by Indians, and that he was wounded. I at once got together as many men as I could spare from the post, and proceeded to bring in the ladies and what property I could find. About five miles from the post I found the dead bodies of A. J. Price and John Pety, who were bound West. Within three miles of the post I found Thomas Donovan, who was riddled, and the animal belonging to Tuttle, beef agent of this post. The two first named persons were completely stripped of clothing. I found a note in the buckboard, the one coming east from Tucson, but no trans mails except from the letters picked from the west-bound mail. I started out this morning in search of the mails with 100 men, and hope to get trace of them. I send dispatches to Tucson to-day by mounted men, as our mails are very uncertain. I want to have a troop of cavalry sent here, as in case of depredations by Apaches, pursuit by infantry is impossible. The bodies of the dead men will receive proper burial to-day. Signed by H. S. Smith, Captain Twenty-first Infantry.

Who Wouldn't be a Duke.

An American sensation experienced by the Grand Duke Alexis was the receipt in Chicago of 30 or 40 letters, all from females, asking assistance in some shape or other. One young lady, from Western New York, begged, through six closely written pages, for a sum to enable her to marry a widower whom she loved dearly. They were so poor they could not marry without money. The Duke instructed the Mayor that if he found in the letters any appeal he deemed worthy to honor it in a moderate way. Who would not be a Duke?

—Titusville bridegrooms step upon the hymenial platform, adjust the fatal noose, and swing off into that silent bourne from whence they can never return, save by the Indianapolis or connecting lines.

Camp Meeting Incident.

Our readers may remember the story of the "soaping" of the signal horn. The story runs, that when a certain revivalist celebrity took up the horn to summon the worshippers to services, after dinner, one day, he blew a strong blast of soft soap all over the astonished brethern. It is also said by the chronicler of this "item," that the brother was so wroth at this joke that he cried out aloud:

"Brethern, I have passed through many trials and tribulations, but nothing like this. I have served in the ministry for thirty years, and in that time never uttered a profane word; but I'll be cussed if I can't whip the man that soaped that horn."

Well, this is a strong story; but we have from a reliable authority, something a little stronger, in the sequel to the same story. This is given to us as follows:

Some two days after the horn soaping, a tall, swarthy, villainous-looking desperado strolled on the grounds, and leaned against a tree listening to the earnest exhortation to repent. After a while he became interested, finally affected, and then took a position on the anxious seat, commenced groaning "in the very bitterness of his sorrow." The clergyman walked down and endeavored to console him. No consolation—he was too great a sinner, he said. Oh, no; there was pardon for the vilest. No? he was too wicked—there was no mercy for him.

"Why, what crime have you committed?" said the preacher; "have you stolen?"

"Oh! worse than that!"

"What! have you by violence robbed female innocence of its virtue?"

"Worse than that—oh! worse than that!"

"Murder is it?" gasped the horrified preacher.

"Worse than that!" groaned the smitten sinner.

The excited preacher commenced "peeling off" his outer garments.

"Here, Brother Cole!" shouted he, "hold my coat—I've the fellow that soaped that horn!"

Anecdote of Ethan Allen.

Ethan Allen once passed up through the Hoosac Valley and spent the Sabbath with a friend in Williamstown, attending church with him and his family. The first and second presidents of William College were square-toed in their orthodoxy, having far more faith in Divine wrath and justice than in his love and mercy—and their sermons gave evidence of their obedience to belief. On this Sabbath the text of the worthy President Fitch was "And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and sinner appear?"

Firstly—He laid it down as a fact beyond question that not more than one in one thousand would be saved.

Secondly, thirdly to twelfthly—He said that not one in fifty thousand could be saved.

Ethan Allen took his hat and cane and prepared to leave. His friend said "Don't leave now."

Seventeenthly now dropped from the President's lips, who said he had come to the conclusion that of the countless millions of men not more than one in a hundred thousand would be saved.

The old soldier had been growing uneasy under this rapidly sliding scale, in which the blanks so multiplied and the prizes faded from view. He grasped his hat and cane, when his friend said to him, "Don't go out. He will be through shortly. He's up to seventeenthly." "Oh, no matter," said Ethan Allen, "any of you are welcome to my chance if 'tis slim as he tells of!" and left the church.

The Death Valley Country.

A gentleman who is now engaged in prospecting to the west and north-west of Death Valley speaks of the region he is engaged in exploring as very promising. He is quite confident that the country is rich in the precious metals, and expects to make some grand discoveries before Spring. The writer makes Silver Peak the base of his supplies, and thinks the mines in that neighborhood will be valuable in case the Silver Peak company start up their mill in the Spring, which there is a strong probability of their doing. With an Indian guide he went twenty miles nor-heast of Silver Peak and found some fine mines of base metal—principally copper. At Gold Mountain, forty miles from Silver Peak, Tom Shaw has struck some very rich mines, an interest in which he is about selling to Bob Stewart and Frank Briggs. At Alida Valley, between Silver Peak and Gold Mountain, are some very rich mines which have been purchased by Parker, Wattson & Co., of San Francisco, who design erecting a mill at once. George Hearst spent about ten days at Silver Peak and Montezuma, and is now gone to San Francisco to return in a fortnight. He is much pleased with our country, and advises our letter writer to prospect in the neighborhood of Death Valley until he returns, at least, as he thinks the "big thing" of all big things crops out some in that doleful region.—Virginia Enterprise.

Political Pledges.

There were two points in the late canvass on which both parties were agreed, viz. The adoption of a no-fence law, and the repeal of the five per cent. act. There is not a shadow of doubt but such was the wish and expectation of a very large majority of both parties, and in many instances candidates owed their election solely to the weight given their pledges to do their best to accomplish these things. As shown by their votes so many members of the Legislature have gone back on their pledges on these two points as to justify Senator Fowler's assertion "that platforms were only made to fool the people." We will venture the assertion that scarcely a man will be returned to the next Legislature from any of the agricultural counties at least, who is not unequivocally favorable to the passage of a general no-fence law. His position in this respect must date further back, and be so understood, than the day of the nominating convention. His past acts must prove his soundness, for pledges made at the last moment amount to nothing, as is proved by the fate of that bill in the present session The best interests of the country demand the adoption of a no-fence law, and it will be adopted by the next Legislature without a doubt. The repeal of the five per cent. act is of but little less importance, but its evil results are less obvious to them who have had no realizing experience, and having an all powerful money system to contend against, the chances are that it will never be wholly accomplished until every section of the State has had a taste of the workings of the present law.

Mistaken.

We fear our honorable Board of Supervisors, whose actions generally are above reproach, estimated their rights and powers a little too highly when they declined to accept Sheriff Elder's resignation. An act concerning offices and officers, passed April 22, 1866. (Hittell's Digest, page 625) provides, in substance, that any person holding an office by virtue of an election, the same may be declared vacant if the incumbent dies, gets crazy, moves out of his district where his official duties are to be performed, or steals anything worth notice (and gets caught at it.) For causes of this character it is within the province of the Board of Supervisors in the case of a county official, to declare his office vacant, but in no case to compel him to retain it after he has formally tendered his resignation, which tender, whether accepted or not, according to the act mentioned, releases him and his bondsmen of all responsibilities attached to the office. Mr. Elder was a good officer and citizen and we are sorry to loose him, but it is clear that he had a right to resign his office and go where his interests demand.

Mrs. Fair.

Mrs. Laura D. Fair will have another chance for her life. The Supreme Court on the 5th ordered a new trial, reversing the judgement rendered by Judge Dwinelle. The new trial is granted on two points, viz., that evidence as to her character for chastity should not have been admitted, and, further, that defendant's counsel should have had the closing speech. We have but little doubt but she will be acquitted on the next trial, the time for which has not yet been set, we believe.

"The West."

We have received No. 3 of the publication bearing the above title, and as a complete reflex of the Pacific slope it has no superior. Any one desiring to acquant friends in the east, or elsewhere, with the nature of the soil, productions, climate, and similar matters pertaining to this coast, cannot do it as cheap or as well as by sending them "The West." It is all there. Published by The Dial Publishing Company, 409 Washington street, San Francisco. Price $1 per annum.

Hoodlums.

Virginia City, Nevada, being threatened with an invasion of Hoodlums from San Francisco, The Enterprise remarks sententiously: "They will find it a fine healthy place; though, as the air is very light here, some difficulty in breathing may be experienced by a few of them upon their arrival at the altititude at which they will find themselves."

RESOURCES OF CALIFORNIA.

We are indebted to Mr. Wm. B. Martin, general agent of the California Immigrant Union, for a copy of "The Resources of California," and also a circular asking definite information, concerning this section, relative to the cost of building, building materials and other similar matters of interest to immigrants in search of homes. Before answering these direct and implied inquiries, we will remark that the Immigrant Union has certainly adopted the best possible method of inducing immigration—that is by presenting in newspaper and pamphlet form statements in detail of the inducements offered by each and every locality, nearly, in the State. These are gratuitously circulated throughout the Eastern States and Europe, and cannot fail to make a favorable impression upon the most intelligent and desirable class—those who are able to appreciate, and, without pecuniary aid from the State, to avail themselves of the incomparable advantages offerred by our favored land. One of the publications referred to—"The Resources of California"—is in size and appearance much like The San Francisco Alta, and filled with elaborately gotten up articles and extracts from local papers referring to soil, productions, climate, etc. of almost every part of the State, the whole constituting a mass of very valuable information, both to citizens and strangers who may desire a change of locality with a view of selecting a permanent home.

It is quite out of the question, in a necessarily brief newspaper article, to convey a detail of information sufficient to satisfy every reasonable enquiry, but the following may partially answer the desired end.

By far the larger portion of the arable lands of Inyo county lies in the valley of Owens river. The valley is over 100 miles in length, with an average width of, perhaps, 15 miles. Much of the land is barren and covered with sage brush, although throughout the whole length bodies of grass and fine agricultural lands are found, varying in witdh from a few rods to a dozen miles or more. The best lands lie on the numerous lateral streams of soft, clear and cold water, coming down from the everlasting snow deposits of the rugged and lofty Sierras on the west. These streams afford an abundance of water to irrigate, with the greatest facility, all the ground now under cultivation, and in some localities, considerably more. The amount of arable land in the valley is placed at 200,000 arces, about 20,000 of which is taken up; about 5,000 acres are in cultivation; all remaining above the amount mentioned as taken up, is Government land and subject to pre-emption; in fertility much of it is as good as any yet taken. With partial exceptions, however, but little of it can be made available for farming without additional facilities for irrigation, which can be easily effected by means of a company canal from the river, or artesian wells. The river affords a very large volume of water, and either or both schemes are perfectly practicable, and once done, will open up hundreds of firstrate farms. There is room for many more settlers as things now are, the only drawback being the want of a no-fence law.

Our soil and climate are suited for any production of the temperate zone. Wheat and corn are the principal crops, either yielding about a ton to the acre. In quality the wheat cannot be excelled. Corn, otherwise good, is some times damaged by the ravages of worms on the ears. The market price for these articles is rarely less than four cents per pound; the demand for these and all other articles of farm produce, far exceeds the supply, and probably ever will. Our surrounding mines, among which are those of Cerro Gordo, the best developed and most generally known, are of the richest, most extensive and inexhaustable character, and will always afford a good market for everything that can be raised here. Peaches, grapes and some other fruits yield remarkably well, the first mentioned, particularly, being of very superior size and flavor. The country is but new, and these enterprises are yet in their infancy.

The cost of building material is very near as follows: Lumber at Bishop Creek, per M, $30; Independence, $50; Lone Pine, $55; Cerro Gordo, $75. Shingles and plastering lath at the mills, each $10 per thousand, the prices at points of delivery holding the same proportion as those of lumber, being governed by the cost of hauling. Lime comes at about $100 per ton; nails, 15 cents per pound; imported medium sized doors and windows, each $6; mechanics charge $5 per day; day laborers, $4; farm laborers, $40 per month; Indians are extensively employed on farms at certain seasons, receiving each about 50 cents per day.

From the foregoing figures the cost of a given sized building can be deduced, approximately. Without going into details we will state that an adobe building can be built for less money than one of wood of similar size. A fine article of soft, light stone is found on the river at certain points, and will probably soon be extensively used for building purposes. Inferior bricks cost about $18 per thousand, and but few are used.

The inducements offerred for the investments of capital in mining and certain manufactures are unequalled. No other inland county in the State has the natural advantages for a brighter future, or a more suberb climate. Its agricultural interests are affected by neither flood or drought. It offers good homes for hundreds of poor men, farmers, mechanics and miners.

The stock excitement in San Francisco still continues. H. H. Flagg, of Gold Hill, who for many years has been a heavy operator in stocks, has failed for about $250,000. The Alabama Claims.

The most important item of Eastern news received lately relates to the Alabama claims. England virtually gives us the choice of abandoning these claims or war. The London press savagely scouts the idea of paying them, and demands at once the withdrawal of Chief Justice Cockburn, the English representative, from the Geneva conference, and also the repudiation of the Washington Treaty. The whole position of affairs has a sulphurous smell about it, but it will probably blow over. At Washington the whole thing is considered as a movement on the part of Gladstone for political effect.

The Japs in Sunday School.

Several of the Japanese in Amherst, Massachusetts, go to the First Church Sunday School, but their teacher finds it difficult to interest them in sacred history without pictures representing the lesson, and then sometimes they fail to get the exact meaning. For example, they consider the destruction of Pharaoh and the Egyptians in the Red Sea, as shown in the picture, to be a huge joke on the Egyptians.

EAST OF THE RANGE.

[Correspondence of The Inyo Independent.]

LIDA VALLEY, Nye Co., Nev. / February 10, 1872.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—By your permission I will say a few words about "Lida Valley." It is situated south of Silver Peak 23 miles, and easterly of Palmetto 12 miles. Some time in December last parties from San Francisco, represented by Messrs. Hiskey & Walker, bought a mine from Scott, Black & Co., the first one discovered in the district, and propose moving their Deep Spring mill over here in the Spring. This encourages prospecting, and at present writing there are not less than twenty good mines within an area of twenty miles. Among the lucky ones, we will have Geo. Ayres & partner, Scott & Black, Brown & Henry, Len. Martin, I. Spiker and Pablo, a Mexican.

The formation is varied; being slate, limestone and granite. The ledges are well defined, with true fissure walls; vary from one foot to twelve feet in thickness. The ores are principally carbonates slightly stained with copper, and never since the early days of Washoe has there been as fine specimens of native silver seen as we have in this camp. It is that kind known as wire silver; also, fine specimens of chlorides have been found. Much of this ore assays up in the thousands, some showing free gold in abundance, but in general silver predominates.

The latest discovery made by Geo. Ayres (not the pill man Ayres) defies White Pine, or any camp, for quantity or quality of ore. The ledge found by Dutch Henry is a blind one, (and would not have been found by anyone except a Dutchman, and after 4 o'clock), is three feet wide (he having stepped it a distance of 150 feet), at a depth of five feet, and will average $300 per ton; 20 per cent. of this ledge or ore will pay $500 to $800 per ton. He is taking out large quantities of ore for shipment to Deep Spring. Many others are at work taking out ore for reduction. Messrs. Hiskey & Walker have a train of 22 mules now packing ore from their mine. They will also pack ore for others to their mill at Deep Spring, a distance of 35 miles, thus giving the miners a chance to ascertain to a certainty the value of their mines; and before long they will be shipping bullion from this camp, proving the merits of this place. We have plenty of timber and water, and a beautiful valley, with a town site already surveyed.

Tom. Shaw and others, of Gold Mountain district, are also extracting high grade ore for shipment. Many important and valuable discoveries having recently been made in that district, proves that all the good mines have not as yet been discovered. VER.

On His High Horse.

The Santa Barbara Times man, in speaking of his locality in a late number of his paper, reaches this altitude:

Our valley, at present, appears a Paradise on earth, it is so sweetly beautiful and radiant with loveliness. It is surrounded with lofty hills, whose summits tower towards the clouds [what other way could they tower?] in their imposing grandner. Upon their sides numerous herds of cattle browse, [that's a bad indication for a grass country] indicating the wealth of those that dwell in the homesteads below. The picturesque farm-houses are almost hidden from view by the majestic shade trees of every variety and description, [?] with which they are surrounded. Each residence is environed with a blooming garden, and they seem to vie with each other in loveliness and beauty; all the varied flowers [mustard and jimpson included] of Spring blossom there, even in Winter months, and perfume the breezes that roam through the [treeses] Elysian scenes. Through the valley are several silvery rivulets that pour [in wet, nasty weather] their ceaseless ripplings as they meander on their way and are merged in the [thirsty soil?] boundless ocean. On either side [of the ocean] lofty trees spread forth their branches, forming a leafy canopy, among whose boughs the song birds [magpies] carol their lays, and make the smiling valley ring with their melody. The sunbeams brightly glance through the quivering leaves and play upon the sparkling rivulets, whose banks will soon [see Winter months above] be covered with wild flowers. Let travelers, romancers, and poets sing no more of England's sea-girt isle, of Alpine hights, of warm [Inyo can discount you for warm] Italian skies, of the luxuriant scenery of torrid zones, for this is the Elysian fields of which the ancients dreamt, the Hesperian gardens of which they sang [not a stave], the fount of [no vile fancy drink] rejuvenesence for which the world [Oh, my!] has longed!

We have added a few words in brackets to the foregoing in order to bring out the weaker points, for which, doubtless, we will receive the writer's thanks as soon as he recovers from his late effort.

No Eastern Mails.

The prospects for an Eastern mail seem to grow smaller by degrees and beautifully less, the snow blockade having apparently become a permanent institution. The Japanese Embassy are snowed in at Salt Lake, and prospects for going ahead are gloomy in the extreme. The trouble is all upon the Union Pacific road. It is quite probable that no such troubles will occur again for years to come, but it is liable to happen every Winter, and some other road below the snow line is an acknowledged necessity and will soon be built, we do not doubt.

The children of John Slidell have brought a suit to recover their father's estate, confiscated there during the war.

A Washington dispatch, dated February 2, says:

The situation here, notwithstanding the excitement in the public mind regarding the intelligence from England, is one of profound quiet. The President has not yet conferred with a single member of his Cabinet on the matter. He entertains the opinion that the present flurry in England is for political purposes, and is very confident that whatever request the English Government may make, it will not be presented with the ultimatum of war. It can be said with almost absolute positiveness, that whatever the demand of the British Government, it must be declined.

The morning press continue the discussion of the situation with England. The Times believes Parliament to-day will furnish an opportunity for a more intelligent discussion of the subject, and is more than ever of the opinion that a pacific settlement will be the result of the point of difference. The Herald demands that the American people look the English question squarely in the face.

How to Ride a Colt.

The following story of John Smith (we will suppose his name is Smith) and his son Virgil is said to be a "true bill." Smith has a very promising young horse, now for the first time in training for the track, and we suppose is intended to take part in the races at Lone Pine on the 22d. The other day Virgil, a bright little chap some ten years of age, was speeding the colt around the track, and was making the run in gallant style, when the colt suddenly shied and threw the boy off. The cause of this was a young porker that had stowed himself away in some brush close by the track, a quiet spectator of the colt's performance, until the latter got almost opposite to him, when, hog like, he made a violent rush, with the result mentioned. By the time his anxious father reached the ground the boy was on his feet unhurt. Said his father, "Virgil you don't know how to ride a colt, to let a little pig like that make him throw you off. I don't want the colt spoiled, I want him to go around the track and I'll show you that a pig can't prevent him." "I'll bet you," said Virgil, "he'll throw you, too, if a pig makes him jump like he did with me." "No he wont, Virgil, you can get in the brush there, and when I ride him around you grunt like a pig, I'll show you now it's done," said the elder Smith. Accordingly the colt was caught and mounted by Smith the elder, the boy in the meantime having taken his position in the brush to play the role of pig, in which he succeeded to perfection, for when his sire, after a rattling run, had reached the proper place, he snorted like a young grizzly, and tearing out of the brush, caused the panic struck colt to pile his rider ingloriously in the dust. Gathering himself up he said savagely "What the ——— did you do that for?" "Why, you told me to, father." "No, I didn't; I told you to grunt like a little pig, not like a d——d old hog."

House Robbed.

Some unknown scoundrel broke into Mr. A. Copeland's house, eight miles north of this place, Tuesday last, and stole blankets, watch, double-barreled shot gun, $20 in coin and some other articles. This is quite a severe loss to Mr. Copeland, who is in ill health, being at this place at the time for the purpose of obtaining medical assistance. He returned home early the following morning on the stage and found things as stated. Having no horse at hand, and being unwell besides, he could make no pursuit. The probabilities are that the scoundrel will get off with his booty unmolested.

Fire Insurance.

As no one in the county possesses any immunity against loss by fire, which is liable to occur at any moment, we feel it a sort of a duty to call attention to the only means of preventing utter loss in that event—the Fire Insurance Companies. The Commercial Union has just appointed Rothschild & Co. agents for this section, and as that company does a limited and safe business all policies issued by them are as good as the gold. Call on J. P. M. Perham, of Rothschild & Co., and he will explain the matter; also, see their card in this issue.

Now, What's Up.

Passing down the street the other day, we stepped into a lawyer's office, and sitting there in mysterious conclave was Sher. Stevens, Coroner Lank and P. Reddy, Esq. Now, we leave it to an unbiased people if when lawyers, coroners and sich, get together that way if it isn't portentious? It should be borne in mind that Coroner Lank hasn't sat on any body for some time. A fat job, A. Lank Coroner and a lawyer Reddy to Sher! Git out! We caution people not to cut their throats. "Where the vultures, etc."

Way Papers.

A few of our subscribers on the Bishop Creek road failed to get their papers last week, either through our own or Dow's oversight, but they can console themselves with the reflection that there was "nothing in the paper" anyhow, and further, that if it should occur again it will hardly be Dow's fault, for he is one of the most careful and popular drivers; always ready to accommodate. His old friends are all pleased to see him on their route again.

Fare Reduced.

Billy Wilson has reduced the fare between Aurora and Carson to $15, so that a through ticket from this place to Carson amounts to but $35. See Ullrick & Wrights' advertisement. These gentlemen design soon to change the time of arrivals and departures at this place to more seasonable hours; also to run through to the railroad, and in short to do everything they possibly can to make the northern route the route.

Surprise Party.

A party of ladies and gentlemen of Lone Pine having been much surprised at the sudden and unexpected way in which A. H. Johnson got married returned the compliment in a measure, one night last week by surprising him and his lady with a call in force. They danced and had a gay time generally.

Not a Boarder.

Our county has lost its last boarder and lodger; didn't make a success o the business, and had better sell out. J. E. Boyce, who was sentenced to a term of thirty days in jail, as a punishment for a fraudulent use of a pass book, after serving a few days concluded to cut out, which he accomplished last Sunday night by sawing the jail door in two. He borrowed two pairs of county blankets, and has made himself remarkably scarce ever since—a fact that will not create much heartfelt regret, for, as he is a first-rate thief, the chances are that he will go elsewhere and soon get corraled in a jail that will hold him. Any prisoner, with an outside friend to assist him a very little, that wouldn't break out of our pig-pen of a jail has not energy enough to make it any object to keep him in it, and had better be turned loose at once, so as to save expense and—blankets.

Horse Race

The citizens of this place generally, including a number of ladies, turned out yesterday to witness a half-mile race between Gregg's horse and Eph. Harrington's colt. The horses got off well together, but without the word, and made the run in 58 seconds, Gregg's horse leading about 30 feet. It was decided no race, and after a time the horses were again brought up and made another start and, it is said, had crossed the pole when they were recalled. The colt was brought back, but the other galloped through, and claimed the race. We do not know what was done in reference to the main bet, which was $100 a side, but all side bets were withdrawn. Scott Broder was backing the Gregg horse in very large amounts, but without takers.

Twenty-second of February Ball.

A fine ball is on the tapis for the Twenty-second of Febuary, to come off at the Lone Pine hotel, Mrs. M. A. Barry, proprietoress, Lone Pine. Debeney's large hall has been secured for the occasion. There is a general invitation extended to the people of Independence and elsewhere, and parties accepting it may confidently anticipate a good time. This is the only ball to come off that day in the county we believe.

A New Sheriff

Mr. Elder having resigned the office of Sheriff, its duties by due descent now devolve upon Coroner Lank, who qualified last Monday. Mr. Lank very sensibly retains Under Sheriff Talcott in his old position. Mr. Talcott is au fait in the requirements of the office, and it would scarcely justify a new appointment for the short period that intervenes before the 4th of March, when the Sheriff elect, Mr. Mulkey, takes the office.

An Apology.

We owe a sort of an apology to that young Mexican Guy Fawkes we mentioned last week as having intentionally tried to blow Mr. Elder up. It was simply a case of cussed carelessness instead of careless cussedness, he having left the charge of powder in the log through unintentional neglect. No changes to note in regard to the $300 offer.

Lead Poisoning from Snow.

We are credibly informed that the use of water melted from the snow lying in the vicinity of the smelting furnaces in Cerro Gordo, develops clear cases of lead poisoning in all who use it. Animals—dogs, cats, chickens and burros—either die or suffer greatly from the effects of eating the snow.

Farming Prospects.

Farmers generally throughout the valley have completed sowing small grain, and the prospects for good crops were never more flattering. The late wet weather has been of great benefit and the immense snow banks in the mountains insure an abundance of water for irrigating through the the Summer.

The Parsonage.

A very good building for a parsonage is fast approaching completion. This work has been somewhat delayed for want of material, but there is enough now on hand to complete it. A very gratifying feature connected with this undertaking is the very liberal spirit in which it has been aided by all creeds and denominations.

Partzwick Drug Store.

We call the attention of residents on the Aurora stage road to Mr. Piessnecker's advertisement of drugs, etc., at Partzwick. He will fill out and forward orders or prescriptions by stage, on the shortest notice. We are told that Mr. Piessnecker understands his business thoroughly.

Religious.

Rev. J. Tamblyn has an appointment to preach every third Sunday in the month at Camp Independence, and a regular Sunday-school for every Sunday is established at the same point. See "Church Directory."

A Prospecting Scout.

Lieutenant Haskell, U. S. A., of Camp Independence, has just returned from an extended trip in the Death Valley country. He was accompanied by Jimmy Sharpe, the Prospector, and a command of five or six men. We can give no further particulars in this issue.

Pay Day.

Col. Wingard, U. S. Paymaster, is now at Camp Independence paying off the "sojer boys." His pleasant countenance, to say nothing of the duties of his office, cannot fail to make him a welcome visitor at the Post.

The Board of Supervisors.

The Board adjourned Friday evening of last week, after finishing the drawing for jurors. The Board have transacted some important business this session, which in the main must meet the approbation of all, when fully understood. We refer especially to their endorsement of the bill authorizing the issue of county bonds, the particulars of which will be laid before the people in due time, and also in reference to county roads.

Good Copy.

We are in receipt of some valuable copy from Mr. B., of Cerro Gordo, which will receive prompt attention.

FOREIGN NEWS.

London dispatches to February 7, contain the following in reference to the Alabama claims:

On the re-assembling of Parliament to-day the speech of Her Majesty the Queen was presented and read in the presence of all the members of both Houses. The address opens by returning thanks to Divine Providence for the recovery of the Prince of Wales and thanks to the British people for the sympathy manifested during his illness. The speech also congratulates the Government and the country upon the peaceable relations which exist with the other powers. Negotiations for securing a continuance of the commercial treaty with France are now in progress, though, so far, they have been unattended with success. Touching the whole subject of the Alabama claims, the address states that the first meeting of the arbitrators had been held at Geneva, and the respective cases of both parties have been submitted. After reviewing the preliminary proceedings in the matter the address proceeds as follows: "In the case so submitted by America large claims were included which were understood on my part not to be within the province of the arbitrators. On this subject I have caused a friendly communication to be made to the Government of the United States." The present aspect of affairs in Ireland is considered both promising and improving. The decrease of crime and pauperism in Great Britain is also alluded to with great satisfaction. The remainder of the speech is devoted principally to the discussion of home affairs, embracing a number of reform measures upon which Parliament is expected to take action during the present session. The most prominent of these measures are, for establishing the system of voting by ballot, preventing election frauds and for establishing a proper educational system in Scotland.

In the House of Lords to night the arbitration claims was the subject of a prolonged debate. Numerous speeches were made tending toward the repudiation of the indirect claims attached to the Washington Treaty by the United States. The speakers were interrupted by loud cheers, and immense enthusiasm was manifested during the entire sitting.

The Captain-General of Cuba writes to his Government that the insurrection will be brought to an end in March or April next.

A Mexican dispatch says the Juarists have hung all the officers, including the leader of the revolutionary gang captured at San Ferere, about thirty miles from Matamoras.

Smelting Works at Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles News is very sensibly urging the citizens of Los Angeles to at once set about erecting smelting works and the establishment of other manufactures in that city. Without something of that kind we consider it a foregone conclusion that that city will soon degenerate into a second rate country town; just as soon as railroads intervene between her and the great wealth of mineral by which she is surrounded. One or two energetic business men can save all this, not only to their own and their city's advantage but to that of the surrounding country. A fair start is everything.

SQUIBLETS.

—How to get along—walk.

—The end of a candle—to give light.

—"Not at home"—an out-and-out lie.

—Born to blush unseen—Negro women.

—The woman's club—the broom-stick.

—A strapping fellow—the school-master.

—What is the best stimulant for the hare?—The grey-hound.

—In order to be a ripe scholar must a man get mellow?

—When is a young lady like a whale?—When she's pouting.

—The favorite bird with a baby—its little crow.

—In old times men hunted boars, now bores hunt men.

—The only man in the world that don't deserve a loaf—the loafer.

—When may a man be said to breakfast before he gets up?—When he takes a roll in bed.

—Why is the road of the transgressor so hard?—Because it is traveled so much.

—Why does the sculptor die the most horrible deaths?—Because he makes faces and busts.

—"Who's that gentleman coming up stairs, Nellie?" "Dat no gen'leman, mar; dat's par."

—A precious boy in Ohio, having exploded a torpedo in his mouth, is not so regular at his meals as he once was.

—The man whose hair turned white in a single night, is surpassed by the New York girl who lost hers completely off in one dance.

—Renan, who has been lecturing in Paris on the "Book of Job," is advised by The Patriot to come to Washington and lecture on the "book of jobs."

—A black Nashwillian, who wouldn't reply when asked "wher you gwine wid dem cabbages ob mine," was promptly shot dead by a man and brother.

—A Newhampshire man recently refused to subscribe for a paper, "because it helped to build up the business of the place, and the wealthier the town was the higher the taxes would be."

—Mrs. Partington being asked by her minister what she thought of the doctrine of "total depravity," replied that she thought it a very good doctrine if men would only live up to it.

—What was there to prevent Californians from going to Heaven during the four years preceding the late election? —Because they were governed by hate (Haight.)

—The Hon. Joseph Coburn, P. F., announces that he has permanently retired from the prize ring. There is, perhaps, no true Christian in all this broad land to whose eyes this sad announcement will not bring a tear.

—Hon. S. S. Cox received the nickname of "Sunset" not from his initials, or because he was from the regions of sunset in the great West, but from a brilliant piece of writing descriptive of a Western sunset which he contributed to The Ohio Statesman in May, 1858.

—One dull, rainy rainy day a man stepped into Mr. Stewart,s store in New York, and desired a new clerk to show him some muslins. He was hard to suit, and at last the young man called out as he was taking a piece of goods to the door to look at it: "Hold on, old man, none of that; you can buy goods here at the counter, if you want them." He did not like the trouble of folding and putting up so many pieces for his customer. "I guess you had better step down to the cashier's desk and get what is owing you," quietly remarked the supposed buyer, who was no other than Mr. Stewart himself, "you are too careful of yourself to do business for me."

A New Flying Machine.

A recent monthly meeting of the Franklin Institute was enlivened by a description and exhibition of a model of an aerial ship, the invention of Mr. Judson, a Philadelphia machinist. The new flying machine consisted of a cigar-shaped balloon float made of oiled silk and intended to be inflated with hydrogen gas. Beneath the float and running its entire length is a beam, beneath which runs a pipe conveying compressed air from a large copper receiver, made sufficiently strong to withstand a pressure of one hundred pounds to the square inch, to a pair of cylinders in front, the piston of which gives motion to a large cog wheel which furnishes the motive power of the machine. Crossing the cylinders is a frame work supporting shafting and spar wheels which drive the fans, four on each side, thus propelling the machine through the air. Beneath the float is suspended an enclosed car for the operator and passenger. The float when inflated, is calculated to last for twenty-four hours. The model works well, and the plan seems practical, and was generally received as the most feasible method yet advanced for navigating the air.

Sentenced for Six Years.

Robert Hamilton, who was convicted for grand larceny in the District Court last Friday, was this morning sentenced by his Honor Judge McKenny to imprisonment in the State Prison for a term of six years. Mr. Hamilton received his sentence with the calmness that characterized his demeanor during the trial.—Reese River Reveille.

A REMARKABLE PROPHECY.

[The following, which is known as "Mother Shipton's Prophecy," was first published in 1488, and republished in 1641. It will be noticed that all the events predicted in it, except that mentioned in the last two lines—which is still in the future—have already come to pass]:

Carriages without horses shall go,
And accidents fill the world with woe,
Around the world thoughts shall fly
In the twinkling of an eye.
Waters shall yet more wonders do;
Now strange, yet shall be true.
The world upside down shall be,
And gold be found at root of tree.
Through hill men shall ride,
And no horse or ass be at his side.
Under water men shall walk;
Shall ride shall sleep, shall talk.
In the air men shall be seen,
In white, in black, in green.
Iron in the water shall float
As easy as a wooden boat.
Gold shall be found and found
In a land that's not now known.
Fire and water shall wonders do,
England shall at last admit a Jew.
The world to an end shall come
In eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

BIRTH OF AN ICEBERG

How These Monsters of the Sea Originate—Description of the Disintegration of a Glacier.

Dr. Isaac J. Hayes has lately published in book form his experiences in Greenland, where he observed various phenomena which have never been so picturesquely and truthfully described hitherto. One of the most interesting scenes which Dr. Hayes delineates, and which has all the charms of novelty and originality, relates to the process by which an iceberg is born:

During the absence of the captain and myself, the artists had not been idle. They landed near the glacier, and with brush and camera began their work. The day was warm, the mercury rising to sixty-eight degrees in the shade, and the sun, coming round to the south, blazed upon the cold wall of ice. This must have produced some difference of temperature between the ice touched by the warm rays and that of the interior, which was in all probability several degrees below the freezing point, for towards noon there was along almost the entire front. Small pieces were continually splitting off with explosive violence, and falling into the sea, produced a fine effect as the spray spouted up from the spot where they struck. Scarcely a minute passed without a disturbance of this kind. It was like a fusilade of artillery. Now and then a mass of considerable size would break loose, producing the impression on the minds of the most courageous that our situation was one of great danger.

By one o'clock everybody had come aboard for dinner; and for awhile we all stood on deck.

WATCHING THE SPECTACLE,

and noting the changes that took place with intense eagerness. It was uniformly observed, among other curious phenomena, that when the ice broke off the fractured surface was a deep blue, and that any ice, as sometimes happened, came up from beneath the water, it bore the same hue, but after a short exposure to the sun the surface changed, becoming almost a pure white with a satin lustre. Our situation for observation could not have been better chosen, and it is not likely that such an opportunity was ever enjoyed before—since it is not likely that a vessel ever rode at her anchor within a cable's length of a glacier.

After dinner the work was to have been resumed. The photographers hastened ashore, hoping to catch an instantaneous view of some of the falling fragments. Preparations were making for weighing anchor, steam was already up and we were about to move over to the north side of the fiord, when than any we had heard pealed forth one after another in quick succession. A number of larger pieces had broken off, the falling of which disturbed the sea to such an extent that the vessel rolled perceptibly, and waves broke with considerable force upon the shore. Then, without any warning, there came a report louder than all combined. It was evident that some extraordinary event was about to happen, and a feeling of alarm spread through the ship. The boat had landed the photograph party upon the rocks, within thirty yards of the glacier, and had shoved off. The captain shouted to the coxswain to hurry up, and had given the order to "up anchor," but it was too late.

The glacier was in a state of violent commotion; it seemed to be

LITERALLY GOING TO PIECES.

Its extreme point, at the center, was undergoing disintegration. The form of the glacier was then particularly picturesque, and we had never ceased to admire it, sketch it and photograph it. It exhibited a perfect forest of gothic spires, which originally ragged, had, by the action of the weather, been converted to something like regular shape, until it bore the appearance of a vast edifice constructed by the hands of man. At the base of these spires were numerous arches, more or less perfect, which still further strengthened the illusion that it might be of human and not of natural formation.

At the extreme point there was one spire that stood out alone, towering above the others. It could not have been much less than two hundred feet high. The loud report to which I referred came from this spire, which was going to pieces. It did not topple over, but went down as though the foundations of the earth were giving away, and the spire was disappearing in the depths below. The effect was

MAGNIFICENT BEYOND DESCRIPTION.

It did not sink instantaneously, but lasted for at least a quarter of a minute. The crumbling spire was quickly enveloped in a great cloud of spray, in the midst of which the summit vanished, and was seen no more.

Meanwhile other portions of the glacier were undergoing a similar transformation, no doubt by the shock which had been communicated by this first disruption. Other spires, less perfect in their form, went down in the same manner, and great scales from all parts of the front where there were no spires, split off and fell.

WITH A PROLONGED CRASH AND HISS.

Out from the midst of this din, and at length drowning it completely, came a peal compared to which the thunders of the heavens would be but a feeble sound. The whole glacier was enveloped in a cloud, which streamed up and along an icy wall, as one sees the mist rising from the the abyss below Niagara, and, receiving the rays of the sun, held a rainbow hovering over this vortex. Out of this cloud at first slowly, then with a bound—and from out of the foam and mist a wave of vast proportions rolled away in a widening semi-circle.

Until this moment I had watched every motion of the glacier with close attention, but now the impulse of curiosity was divided with that of safety. The wave came down upon us with the speed of the wind, and the instinct of self-preservation drove me to seize the first firm object I could lay my hands upon, and grasp it with all my strength. The wave occasioned by an earthquake can only compare with it in magnitude and force.

IT ROLLED BENEATH OUR SHIP, lifted her upon its crest, tore her from her anchorage, and hurled her, as if she had been the veriest toy, toward the rocks. I had not a doubt, so far as there was time to think at all, but that she would be stove to pieces or landed high and dry.

But there was little time for reflection. While the vessel was almost on her beam ends, and we were all clinging to something for safety, a deluge of water fell thundering upon the deck, and the ship was half buried.

We escaped, seemingly by a miracle. The anchor had brought us up within two fathoms of the abrupt shore, against which the huge wave broke, and rolled back upon us with a blow that caused some injury, but did not seriously hurt anybody. Through the mercy of Providence we had been saved; but who had just landed on the shore, and those in the boat? This was our first thought. The boat proved to be all right. She had got head on to the waves, and far enough from the rocks to ride easily; but the people on shore could not escape the whole fury of the waters. Seeing the wave they had clambered up the hillside as far as they could; but finding they would be caught, they flung themselves flat upon the ground, and, clinging to each other and the rocks, had prevented themselves from being carried off or seriously hurt. One had been, however, lifted and

WHERE WERE OUR COMRADES

HURLED WITH MUCH VIOLENCE AGAINST A ROCK;

but, with the exception of a few bruises, he was not injured, and with great fervor he thanked Heaven that it was no worse. He had, indeed, abundant cause. Had not the party been favored by the rocks—which were of such formation that they could easily spring from ledge to ledge—they must have inevitably all perished. The wave, before it reached them, had expended much of its force. Had they been upon the beach and received the full force of the blow, they MUST HAVE BEEN STRUCK TO DEATH.

Their implements—bottles, baths, plates, everything they had purposed using in their art except the camera, which had been fortunately perched upon a hill and left there in the morning—were either carried away or made a wreck of.

Waves of considerable though not dangerous magnitude followed, and it was quite half an hour before the waters were at rest. And there before us, floating in the sea, above which its crest rose a hundred and forty feet, was a glittering mass of blue—a lapis lazuli, a quarter of a mile in diameter, set in chased silver for the sea was but a mass of foam. And this was the monster that had made the mischief.

AN ICEBERG HAD BEEN BORN.

Thus had we not only seen an iceberg born, but had felt its terrible power when set in motion from the parent glacier to tread the blue waters of the deep, and through many years to come to cast into the sea, little by little, the crystal drops of hardened snow, which have for ages lain upon the Greenland hills.

Upon measuring this iceberg afterward I found its crest to be 140 feet above the water; and since fresh ice floating freely in the sea has seven parts of its total depth beneath the water its total depth must have been upward of 1,000 feet.

LITIGANT PAPER FOR INYO COUNTY,

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY

CHALFANT & PARKER.

JAS. E. PARKER | P. A. CHALFANT

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.;

Saturday,.....February 24, 1872.

The New Election Districts.

The committee appointed to redistrict the State have reported a bill, which is likely to become a law, constituting the First Senatorial District of the counties of San Diego, San Bernardino, Inyo and Mono. San Diego is to have one member of the Assembly, and the other three one between them.

This arrangement so far as this county is concerned, is far from being satisfactory, but it is perhaps the best that can be made at this time. Our member (for San Bernardino, Inyo and Mono) will represent a larger area of territory than any other person in the Lower House of any Legislature in the United States, and, also, a greater amount of undeveloped wealth.

There is this much to be said in favor of making one district of the three counties: The general interests of the inhabitants of these counties are very nearly identical, and to that extent a representative from any one of them can understandingly legislate for all; but in some other respects it will be mainly a question of chance.

The Lost Guides.

The Reese River Reveille, after publishing Lieut. Lyle's statement in full, as it originally appeared in this paper, considers Lieutenants Wheeler and Lyle completely exonerated from all blame for the loss of the guides. That is our own opinion also, although we do not accept as correct The Reveille's solution offerred in this extract:

"Our opinion is that both men were killed by the same race of Indians which killed Sears and McBroom."

Had the Indians killed Hahn his effects (some bread, papers, saddle and accoutrements), would not have been left by them in the manner and place in which they were afterwards found. Several parties have been out in search of the remains of the unfortunate men but with the exception above named no traces whatever have been discovered, and in that wide expanse of desert, perhaps never will be, though the search does not yet rest entirely.

Overdone It.

A Rev. Mr. Harrison, of Visalia, some time since wrote a letter to The Christian Advocate in which he characterized the people, male and female, of Visalia as lamentably deficient in virtue in every respect. His religious zeal overcame his good sense when he wrote such a letter, better suited to the columns of "The Varieties" than a prominent religious journal. The people of Visalia are hugely and rightfully indignant, and have intimated to Mr. Harrison that his sphere of usefulness in that locality is altogether too much circumscribed; that they would be much gratified if he would enlarge it by going elsewhere. He publishes a card of apology, but it will scarcely be accepted as satisfactory in any quarter.

The Snow Blockade.

It is now said the Union Pacific Railroad Company are making arrangements to put on stages over that portion of the route blockaded by snow. Unless the chances should be very favorable for opening the railroad the stages will be kept on for sixty days or more. It is quite probable that if it has to be transported several hundred miles by stages, that much mail matter now en route will never reach its destination. There must be a fearful pile of it on hands. It does not appear that passengers, snow bound in the Rocky Mountains, are suffering for necessaries.

We will probably know more about this when Mr. Earl, who is there with the rest, reaches home.

Stokes' Defence.

We remember that the defense in the case of the People vs. Laura Fair endeavored to prove that the pistol shot did not materially injure Mr. Crittenden, but that it was a bowel complaint he died of. Upon a less serious occasion this plea would have provoked more laughter than it did. But the hilarity that was decently smothered in this grave tragedy may now find honest expression in the solemn farce of the Fisk assassination. Mr. Stokes' counsel will strive to prove that the fat speculator was not killed by the bullet but by the doctors; indeed, they seem to regard it as extremely liberal to concede that he is dead. They stand ready to produce a man that got a similar hurt and recovered. There are various ways of putting a case, and this is at least humorous.

THE PETITION.

Several of our prominent citizens, seeing the necessity for some decided action in order to obtain a tresspass law for this county, are circulating a petition throughout the county for signatures. This is a very proper course, for if we expect any member of the Legislature to assume the responsibility of passing such a bill, he must have tangible evidence that he is acting in accordance with the desires of the majority; that is unless he is personally interested, like Senator Fowler, who considers his personal interests paramount to those of a large majority of the "thieving settlers" (as he designated them) of three counties, each larger than some of our States, which are unfortunately represented by him. Petitions are useless in such cases, but not so in circumstances similar to ours. Therefore all who take a proper interest in this matter will demonstrate it by signing the petition.

The law asked for in this petition is very liberal in its provisions. It differs from that for Los Angeles county, a synopsis of which will be found on this page, only in regard to the time in each year when stock are to be excluded. Under it stock are only subject to action for tresspass during a period of seven months, viz., from the middle of March to the middle of November in each year. There are some probably that will object to this clause, preterring to have the time extended the year through, or in other words, a complete no-fence law. It should be borne in mind that our stock interest is a very important and essential one as well, and should have every consistent advantage. But a limited number can find winter pasturage outside the valley. Their presence during the winter months is not incompatible with the farming interest, and allowing it, much valuable range upon farms and in close proximity, will be utilized that otherwise will be of no account to anyone; not even to the owner, without it is enclosed so that stock may not encroach upon neighboring property, laying their owners liable for damages. Resident stock owners need every acre of winter range our valley affords, and if that is shut off from them during the winter, much of our stock, all of which is required to supply home demands, will have to be moved clear out of the country. The amount of damage that stock may occasion to trees, gardens and fences during the winter, amounts to nothing that may not be fully and easily provided against, regarding the two first mentioned, and as for the third, the object of this law is not to protect fences. It is to render their use unnecessary around staple crops, and at a season when there is an abundance of outside range, the use of which involves no material expense to stockmen. This is practically, if not in fact, the law now in force on Bishop Creek and Round Valley, and is eminently satisfactory in its working. It is a matter of some doubt, however, whether that local law would stand a legal test or not, and the people there will do well to place the question above doubt by supporting the present movement.

Death of Mr. Lynch.

Mr. Philip Lynch, of The Gold Hill News, died yesterday about 1 o'clock P. M. Mr. Lynch was one of the old residents of Gold Hill, coming from California soon after the settlement of the place, and has been uninterruptedly engaged in the newspapers business since that period. At one time Mr. Lynch published a paper in Placer county, California, and served one term in the Legislature of that State. He has suffered much for several months from the disease that finally proved fatal. Those who knew him intimately regarded him as "a square man," honest and fair, possessing many virtues that the public at large scarcely gave him credit for. Thus one by one, the old pioneers of Nevada, the men who figured so largely in the early and exciting period of its history, are passing away, to make room for another generation, in turn to briefly play their part on the stage of human life, to disappear and be forgotten.—Carson Register, February 14.

Land Slide.

A few days ago at Canyon City, Grant county, Oregon, the house of John McCullough was carried by a land slide a distance of two hundred and forty yards and landed in Canyon Creek. The house, fencing and garden are unchanged and uninjured, and the creek has been forced into another channel. Many persons were in the house at the time, but no one was injured. Such an occurrence is indeed a phenomenon. The area of land moved was about ten acres.

Irrigation.

Among the new irrigation enterprises is one to supply Ventura, in Santa Barbara county, by a ditch ten feet wide, three feet deep and four miles long, from the Santa Clara river at Santa Paula. The area of arable land, now dry, that may be irrigated from the ditch is 10,000 acres.

SYNOPSIS OF THE LOS ANGELES COUNTY NO-FENCE LAW.

As many of our readers at this time are interested in the matter, we append a synopsis of the tresspass law that has passed the Legislature for Los Angeles county:

Any owner or occupant of a piece of land, fenced or not fenced, finding any stock thereon, doing or having done damage, such stock may be taken up and kept at the expense of the owner for the space of ten days.

The charges against such stock are: Horses, cattle, etc., 20 cents per day; hogs, 10 cents; sheep and goats, 5 cents.

If the owner resides in the township, if known, he must be notified forthwith; if at a great distance, by written communication, postage pre-paid, properly addressed, through the postoffice, to the owner of the tresspassing stock. When the owner is unknown, three notices describing the stock satisfactorily must be conspicuously posted up in public places in the township, and a copy delivered to the Justice of the Peace of said township.

At the expiration of the ten days, if the stock has not been applied for, and sooner if it has, and the parties cannot agree on the amount of damages and compensation by three disinterested persons selected by the parties, the taker-up, when the damage is less than $100, shall on oath file a written complaint with the Justice of the Peace of the township.

When the owner is known, the action shall be against the owner; when not known, against the property, including all animals thus found doing damage. No judgment shall be entered up in damages except upon the testimony of not less than two credible witnesses.

When the action is against the property, the summons may be served by posting notices, returnable in not less than ten days; if the judgment is against the property the same may be sold as other property seized on execution; if against the plaintiff he shall pay costs of suit and damages occasioned thereby.

The officer selling shall give a proper bill of sale, and any overplus of such sale, after satisfying the judgment, shall be paid over to the owner, if demanded within twelve months of date of sale; otherwise, at the expiration of that time, it shall be turned over to the county school fund.

The owner of the stock is entitled to the possession of the stock seized, previous to sale, by paying his proportion of the damages, and any time within three months after sale may redeem his stock by paying the amount of the purchase money with three per cent. per month added.

Nothing in the act shall be so construed as to prohibit persons from driving stock through uncultivated lands not fenced, and who may be required to pass from one county to another, or from watering stock at natural watering places on said lands.

Any person driving stock on or off lands for the purpose of taking advantage of any part of this law, shall upon conviction thereof be adjudged guilty of misdemeanor and be punished accordingly.

Damages must be estimated, after a review of the ground by competent witnesses, within ten days of their occurrance, and an action to recover must be commenced within a month of the same date.

Is This the Reason Why Preachers Have Long Faces?

The senior editor of The New York Observer some weeks ago offered fifty dollars reward to any one who could furnish a well-authenticated case of meaness, meaner than the one he gave, in which a minister's wife was invited to visit a week among his people, and the amount of her board was afterward deducted from his salary. The responses have been numerous, and some of them certainly detail cases mean enough, whether they earn the reward or not. One hard-working missionary of a salary of four hundred dollars just managed to keep his family alive. He had a little garden before his house. When the Secretary of the Society by which he was employed called on him he asked what was the value of the garden patch. "Twenty-five dollars?" "No." "Twenty?" "Hardly." "About eighteen?" "Yes." When the next quarter's salary came it had been diminished by the amount of $18. At a certain donation party, the gifts were marked with such a price as the giver choose to put on them, and the sum total was deducted from the minister's salary. One of these gifts was a package of black pepper marked two cents! These cases are fair samples of a number more that are given.

MEXICAN ANNEXATION.

The Mexican people are reported to be unanimously in favor of immediate annexation to the United States. It is only a few years ago that the two nations were engaged in a fierce war, and our armies triumphing over theirs in many a bloody and well-fought battle, marched triumphantly through the country, from the sea coast to the capital, and dictated terms of peace in the Halls of the Montezumas. Yet it is not strange that now the Mexican people should desire to join in a national co-partnership with their conquerers and become a part of the great American Republic. The Mexican Republic has never been a decided success, being continually disturbed by internal strife, civil war and revolutions, induced by the various ambitious and aspiring chiefs. No President from Santa Anna to Juarez has been able to rule in peace except for a limited period of time, and even then had to be constantly in fear of the next revolution. Even now civil war and revolution stalks abroad throughout the land, and President Juarez sits uneasily and insecure in his chair. All rule in the various sections of the country is merely temporary, for no State knows what politically aspiring chief may pronounce himself, raise an army of disaffected men as adherents, take command of local affairs and start in to overthrow the Government. Heartily tired of such an unsettled state of things, they naturally look to the grand example set them by their powerful sister Republic adjoining them on their northern border, and rightly believe that annexation would be a perfect panacea for all their political woes. They know very well from past experience that, as a part of the great Republic, short work would be made of any future revolution stirred up by local aspiring chiefs, and they would be rendered more permanently secure in their personal rights and property than ever before. That such annexation would be mutually advantageous there can be no doubt, whether it be ever consummated or not.

A Terrible Death.

The death of Charles Young, engineer of the locomotive "Bloomingdale," which occurred at the time of the collision between the freight trains on the Michigan Central Railroad, near Three Oaks, on Friday, the 23d ultimo was a terrible affair. At the moment of the collision he jumped from the engine, and as soon as he struck the ground a car filled with corn fell upon him and covered him completely up with the exception of his head and shoulders. Being thus firmly wedged in under the wreck, he was unable to extricate himself, and when the car burned his head and neck were completely consumed. On Saturday morning, after the corn had been shoveled from the track, the balance of his body was found fully preserved.

An Editor Assaulted.

A school teacher by the name of Adams attempted to "maul" E. M. Dewey, editor of The Visalia Delta, in his office a few days since, but came off second best. He made the assault with a heavy cane, although armed with a pistol at the time. He owes his life to Dewey's forbearance. The difficulty originated from Adams' management of the paper while in charge, during the absence of Dewey in San Francisco.

Killing a Tiger Single-handed.

Another instance of the pitcher going once too often to the well has occurred in India. Captain Doig, an infantry officer, had become renowned as a tiger hunter, and the fame of his exploits had even reached Europe. He was supposed to be invincible, had performed almost fabulous feats, and was held by the natives to bear a charmed life. The poor gentleman was, notwithstanding, killed by a tiger early in September. He went out one day and had a brilliant success, slaying a fine tiger single-handed. Four or five days after, the news came that another tiger was barking in the same place, and about six miles from the cantonment. The new arrival at once began to distinguish himself by slaughtering bullocks, and Captain Doig resolved to bring his sport to an end. Unaccompanied, save by his own "Shikaries," the hunter repaired to the spot. The savage beast was soon found, and Captain Doig got rather a long shot at him, and felt sure he had hit him in the head. His impression, however, was that the tiger had got into the jungle not much hurt, and that he must beat again for him in a fresh quarter. While preparing to do this, Captain Doig being at that moment alone, the enraged animal suddenly leaped from cover, and in an instant seized his foe and bore him to earth. Captain Doig afterward said that the onset was so swift that he never even saw the tiger until he was on the ground, and being, as he expressed it, "calmly eaten." A horrible struggle ensued; the "Shikaries" sprang to the rescue, and the intrepid hunter actually fought himself out of the tiger's clutches, and not only that, but managed to destroy him. The encounter was, nevertheless fatal. Captain Doig had the pluck to ride back to the cantonment, being lifted to the saddle for that purpose. But he never recovered from the shock and frightful laceration he received, and five days after breathed his last. For men who get celebrated for this kind of achievement, its pursuit seem to have irresistable fascination, and the sad case of Captain Doig has many precedents.

If we may believe the stories, the medical recipes of the "British Housewife" were not disregarded in the Prince of Wales' illness. The "hop pillow" is said to be the only thing that gave him sleep; and when death seemed imminent, a butcher stood in an adjoining room with a lamb, ready at a moment's notice to flay it, that the warm and reeking skin might swathe the Prince's extremities, should they have shown signs of death-coldness.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Gold Mountain, etc.

The scouting party, of which we made mention last week, visited Gold Mountain and neighboring districts, and fully endorse the high opinion expressed by our Alida Valley correspondent and others. The extraordinary richness and size of the mines of that region do not begin to be appreciated by our people, nor the probable importance of its trade, for which this valley is the natural base of supply. The Gold Mountain Mining Company have more than one well developed ledge that yields large quantities of ore that will work above $2,000 per ton. Mines of this class are not limited to one or two localities but are found throughout a vast expanse of that desert region, which ere long, will make a big noise in the mining world. A Mr. Higgs is actively engaged in sinking a well at Gold Mountain. The prospects were very favorable for obtaining an ample supply of water at about eighty feet in depth. Mr. Higgs then intends to erect a custom quartz mill for the accommodation of the miners, whose ores will be purchased or reduced on shares, miners option. Lieutenant Haskell, on his return, endeavored to find a practicable route for a road between that district and this valley, but was only partially successful. He erected monuments as guides to strangers traversing the region, but we cannot give their locations with sufficient accuracy to be of any value to such persons. The Lieutenant's party, on one stretch, rode twenty hours without water, but thinks it can be found near his line of travel. They brought in specimens, now being tested, from a ledge discovered by Jimmy Sharpe, which is full seventy five feet wide. This mass may prove of very great value yet. The supplies of the party became totally exhausted long before they got in, a fact of grave importance to four of the Post greyhounds that were along, if not to the rest of the party. After due deliberation it was resolved to make mutton out of one of those lank dogs, two of which were required to make a respectable shadow. Soon there was a feast of dog meat, but only for the remaining dogs, for whose benefit their companion had to be sacrificed. Subsequently the party safely reached Jimmy Sharpe's cabin in Waucoba district where they found supplies sufficient to last home. Their route thence up the Inyo mountain was tedious in the extreme, owing to the snow. These expeditions are frequently undertaken by the officers at Camp Independence for the purpose of obtaining topographical notes for the use of the War Department. Lieut. Haskell designs a trip in a few weeks in the direction of Gold Mountain and further eastward. He has extended a kindly invitation to us to accompany him which we are fully resolved to accept with a view of obtaining a better knowledge of a country that is likely soon to occupy a large share of public attention.

Direct Mail Route to Los Angeles.

For many months past H. W. Robinson & Co. have maintained a line of stages on the route between Lone Pine and Los Angeles under somewhat discouraging circumstances, mainly for the want of a mail contract, which is very essential in keeping up expenses on such an extensive route. The best interest of this section have long demanded the establishment of a mail between these two points, and we are much pleased to announce that Robinson & Co. have finally been awarded a contract for a weekly mail, and that hereafter parties desiring to go to Los Angeles can depend on being taken through on time and in a comfortable manner. Many will now prefer this route in going to and returning from San Francisco. For particulars see Robinson & Co.'s advertisement "Mail to Los Angeles."

Gardner & Schiffer.

A number of new signs have recently been painted and put up for different business houses in this place by the above named gentlemen, whose work will compare favorably in point of taste and execution with anything in the same line to be found in the cities. Among those worthy of notice may be mentioned that for Rothschilds & Co. and one for this office, also, a number of very artistically executed bar signs. The latter will doubtless be noticed often enough, however, without special mention. Messrs. Gardner & Schiffer have located temporarily in Lone Pine, but will answer calls anywhere in the county and guarantee satisfaction. See their new "ad."

The Biggest Yet.

Chris. Engle brought down from Smith & Engle's saw mill, this week, the biggest pile of lumber and timbers we have yet seen on one wagon in this valley. Some of the heavy timbers are 43 feet in length; in all over 5,000 feet of green timber, which he hauls with only five yokes of oxen. The timber is to be used in the construction of the steamboat for Owens Lake.

Mr. Wood, of the firm of Wood & Cohen, recently purchased I. Davisson's neat residence on Market street.—P. Reddy, Esq., has gone to Bishop Creek: law matters.—P. W. Bennett, Esq. and lady, S. Gregg and some ladies, P. Harrington, Pete Bennett, Al. Briggs, B. L. Brown and lots of others from this place, without ladies, and also a number from Bishop Creek, among whom were Jesse Spray and some ladies, gone to Lone Pine: ball and races.—James Brady, of the O. L. S. L. Co., Judge Hanson and Joe Harris to San Francisco: to see about the overland mails.—Many "interesting notes of travel, by Jr.," not received in time for this issue; cause why: he didn't write any.—At no time since this town was first invented has it been any duller or more quiet than during the present week; even the dogs have got no fight in 'em.

To Let.

Mr. P. Reddy, Esq, gives notice that he will rent that snug dwelling, with water right and outhouses attached, now occupied by Mr. Wood and family. It is a good opportunity for a small family to obtain a very comfortable and well located residence. Apply at Mr. Reddy's office.

The Races at Lone Pine.

Mulkey's horse, Billy Buffum, won the half-mile race run on the 22d. No later reports.

AN EASTERN MAIL.

It appears that the snow blockade has been raised at last, and that through trains with mails were expected in Sacramento Monday last. In that case we confidently look for a portion of the Eastern mail due this place by to-morrow night. Special dispatches to The Alta have much to say about the advance western bound train in charge of "Superintendent Earl," whom we are inclined to think is J. Earl, of Camp Independence. He had charge of a gang of snow shovelers, and was doing everything possible to get through, and whether the Superintendent mentioned is Josiah Earl or not, it ought to be, for the latter is not the man to sit wrapped up in blankets quietly waiting for others to get him out of trouble. He would not only shovel snow himself, but make every one else do it, if possible, under the circumstances.

The Railroad.

The Visalia division of the Central Pacific Railroad is advancing rapidly southward, being now completed to a point near the Chowchilla creek, the southern boundary of our county. The company has a large force of track layers, bridge builders and graders upon the line, and are finishing upon an average about one mile per day, a rate of speed that will complete the road to Visalia about the last of May next. The completion of the road through the valley will cause the country to become thickly settled by farmers, and even now those living along the line are exerting themselves to the utmost of their ability to get large fields of grain sown where grain never grew before. Farmers are being greatly benefited also by the road, as they are enabled to obtain lumber, grain, hay, farming machinery and other necessaries at greatly reduced prices; they being delivered at points along the line at rates of freight that are merely nominal when compared with former prices. A side track has been built about three miles southeast of the crossing of Mariposa creek which, we suppose, will soon be provided with a depot building. Already business men are talking of locating there, and it is probable that it will become quite a business point, as it is a central point in the rich and flourishing Mariposa Creek settlement.—Snelling Argus, February 10.

A Problem.

The Boston Times has had 1,300 answers to its $1,000 prize problem published recently, requiring to know how long it will take a locomotive to run 100 miles, provided it goes fifty miles the first hour, twenty-five the next, twelve and a half the next, and so on. Of course the offer was eminently safe, as the problem involves an infinite progression, forever leaving a remainder to be divided; or, as one of the mathemeticians puts it, "we have the startling proposition that a body may move towards a stationary point, always keeping in motion, yet never reach it." Yet most of the replies purported to give the exact time the locomotive would reach the end of its journey.

SQUIBLETS.

—The nick of time—wrinkles.

—Why is a pig like a miser? Because he is no good until he is dead.

—Uncle Sam issued last year almost 500,000,000 postage stamps.

—All things are soon prepared in a well-ordered house.

—A Wisconsin church voted a girl a gold ring for being so pretty.

—A Kentucky farmer refused to buy a sewing machine—"he sewed his wheat out of a bucket."

—The Stockton woolen mills have commenced manufacturing flannel at the rate of 5,000 yards per month.

—What is the funniest burglary on record? When the man "bust into a laugh."

—When a woman tries to catch a rich man, it is evident that she cares less about husbanding him than his cash.

—The inhabitants of Council Bluff, Iowa, are agitated by the birth of an animal which is half horse and half cow.

—A Pennsylvania jury found two men "not guilty" in spite of their plea of "guilty." The jury couldn't believe their word.

—Prentice thinks if a young lady has a thousand acres of land, the young men are apt to think there is sufficient grounds for attachment.

—Oranges and lemons are worth only six and eight cents a bushel in the Brazilian markets this year, and no one uses them except for pickling.

Afflictions are blessings to us when we can bless God for afflictions. Suffering has kept many from sinning. Fiery trials make golden Christians.

—Men laugh and pretend to be pleased when women descend to vulgar jokes, but in seeking wives, they look elsewhere.

—He who takes the best care of today has the least to fear to-morrow.

—Truth sometimes tastes like medicine; but that is because you are sick.

—"Who's there?" cried a patrol to a passing figure one dark night. "It's I, patrol; you needn't be afraid," kindly replied an old woman.

—Two men fought a duel in Kansas recently, and both received the amplest satisfaction, as each killed his antagonist at the first fire.

—Over the door of a cobbler's shop in Providence, Rhode Island, appears this legend: "Boots and shoes is made hear—ladies and shentlemans repaired."

—"Misfortunes never come single,
And so like birds of a feather,
The marriages and the deaths
Are always printed together."

—In A. D. 12,871 the Falls of Niagra will be worn away—so Agassiz says. People that have not yet visited them will take comfort in knowing there is time enough yet.

—John C. Bell has sunk an artesian well on his premise in San Francisco, which yields about 50,000 gallons of the purest water daily, a subterranean stream having been tapped.

—Josh Billings says the farmer is the noblest work of God. He rises at 2 o'clock in the morning, and burns out half a pound of wood and kords ov kandles, and then goes out to worry the geese and stir up the hogs.

—A veteran colored man of Mobile was married lately, at the age of 83, and took occasion to remark, during the ceremony, that he had been married thirteen times already, but never got out a license before.

—Henry Ward Beecher, during a temporary absence, left his business in charge of a nephew, who received an application for Mr. Beecher's autograph. The locum tenens returned a response of graceful acquiesence, and signed his letter "H. W. Beecher, per F. B. Perkins."

Edwin Booth

Was traveling on the cars. The passengers, hearing he was aboard, naturally evinced curiosity to see the great actor. Among the passengers was a genuine Vermonter, who occupied a seat some four benches in the rear of the great object. By slipping from one seat to another, he soon occupied the one immediately "aft" of Booth. His anxiety was great. Reaching over and touching Edwin on the shoulder, he said: "Ah! eh! excuse me, sir, but is your name Beuth?" In his well-modulated voice Booth replied: "Yes, sir, my name is Edwin Booth." "Really, eh! ah! sir; but you must really excuse me, sir, but ah! eh! sir, are you not the brother to the gentleman who had the little difficulty with Mr. Lincoln at the theatre?"

—Oswego colored conversation: "I say, Baz, where do dat comet rise at?" "It rise in de forty-six meridian of the frigid zadiac, and laid down in de comic almanac." "Well, where does it set, Baz?" "Set, you black fool! It doesn't set nowhere. When it gets tired of shining it goes into its hole."

—A sour-faced wife is the liquor dealer's friend.

Petroleum at San Fernando.

It is said that the extraction of petroleum is soon to be commenced, on an extensive scale, at San Fernando. Thirty five miles northwest from the city of Los Angeles, on the road to Fort Tejon, and thirteen miles from the Mission of San Fernando, tunnels have been cut from 70 to 100 feet deep, and all produce good petroleum. The boring is according to the principle of artesian wells, and the same as practiced in Pennsylvania. The petroleum is led through iron pipes to large tanks, and is dipped with buckets from the springs. The cost of transportation to Los Angeles is about two cents per gallon. The cost of refining is about two cents per gallon, upon a small scale, and one and a half cents upon a large scale. The quantity of refined petroleum from 100 gallons of crude is from 60 to 65 gallons. The residium is valuable for gas purposes, fuel, etc.

The formation lies in a range of mountains extending in a course nearly east and west. The central stratum is shale, which seems to contain the most oil and inclines north and south at an acute angle, the top being from one hundred and fifty to two hundred feet wide, slightly depressed and covered by a stratum of sandstone of variable thickness. This stratum is bounded by similar sandstone, alternating with thin seams of limestone and hard conglomerate. At the base of the mountain the formation is hard sand and limestone, containing marine fossils of a recent era. The mountains reach a height of about 700 feet above the level of the local rivers, and about 4,000 or 5,000 above the sea level. The oil stratum varies in width, being in some places a mile or more, as in Rice Canyon, in others only a few hundred feet, but it continues for many miles. In the gulches and canyons, where the water has eroded the formation and exposed the shale to the action of the atmosphere, the oil is found oozing out. The mountains which are crested with shale, show oil, it being carried through the shale by capillary attraction. In some places tunnels are run into the mountains. The oil drips through the shale when it is cut through.

The Coming Railroad.

In an article on the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad, commonly known as the thirty-fifth parallel route, The News Letter says the route selected runs directly west from the Colorado river to the headwaters of the Santa Clara river of Santa Barbara county. Through Solidad Pass down the Santa Clara Valley to Ventura; thence through Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo to the head of Salinas Valley, and down the same to Watsonville; thence up the coast via Santa Cruz, Pescadero, Spanishtown and Point San Pedro, entering San Francisco at North Beach.

There are several reasons for believing that this road will be pushed forward and be the first competitor of the Union and Central in the travel and traffic overland.

First—The long continued blockade of the present route this winter, the like of which can never occur on the Atlantic & Pacific, will cause the latter to be looked upon as an immediate paying road.

Second—It is already built about half way from the Mississippi to the Pacific, and has a comparatively level country the balance of the way.

Third—St. Louis is moving energetically in the matter, and as this is the only through road which will enter San Francisco direct, that city will be likely to aid in pushing the enterprise.

Fourth—The now recognized greatest railroad manager in America, Thos. A. Scott, is the moving spirit in this road, and as he has large landed estates in and about the country where it will first strike the Pacific, it is but natural to conclude that he will favor its early completion.

When this road is completed, it needs not a prophetic vision to see that it must be the great overland route for travel at all seasons of the year.

David Crocket.

David once visited the menagerie at Washington, and pausing a moment before a particularly hideous monkey exclaimed, "What a resemblance, to the Hon. Mr. ——!" The words were scarcely spoken, when he turned, and to his utter astonishment, he saw standing at his side the very man that he complimented. "I beg your pardon," said the gallant Colonel, "I would not have made the remark had I known you were near me; and I am ready to make the most humble apology for my unpardonable rudeness, but," looking first at the insulted member of Congress, whose face was anything but lovely, and then at the animal he had compared him to—"hang me if I can tell whether I ought to apologize to you or the monkey."

—One day the surgeon came to the side of an ague patient in a military hospital, and anxiously inquired how he felt. In the midst of a shivering fit the reply was "No—no—t a—bit bet-t er." "I am serry; but your case is a very peculiar one and hard to get hold of," said the doctor sympathetically. "Ye—yes," said the shivering soldier, "that's so; th—th—th—n ca—case shakes so—yo—you can—t gi—get a hold d of it—tah." He recovered.

The Saviour Described.

At the period when the fame of Jesus Christ began to spread to Judea, Publis Lentus, who was then its Governor, wrote to the Roman Senate: "There is here, at the present time, a man of singular virtue, who is called Jesus Christ; the barbarians esteem him as a prophet, but his sect adore him as a descendant of the immortal Gods. He restores the dead to life, and heals disease by a word and his touch. He is of a tall and graceful stature, his aspect is mild and venerable. His hair is of a color that cannot be described, falling in ringlets below his ears, and spreading over his shoulders with infinite grace. He wears it parted on the top of his head, after the manner of the Nazerenes. His forehead is broad and smooth, his cheeks are tinged with a lovely bloom. His nose and mouth are admirably regular; his beard bushy, and of the same color as his hair, descends an inch below his chin, and separated in the middle, assumes the form of a fork. His eyes are beautiful, sparkling and vivid. He reproves with majesty; and his exhortations are full of sweetness; whether he speaks or acts he does all with eloquence and gravity. He has never been seen to laugh, but has often been known to weep. He is very temperate, very modest and very wise. In a word, he is a man who by his great beauty and his divine perfections surpasses the children of men."

Silver in San Bernardino County.

The Los Angeles News chronicles the discovery of rich and extensive silver-bearing ledges in the Blue Mountains, San Bernardino county. The range is 25 miles east of Lane's Crossing, Mojave Valley. One of the ledges has been traced for five miles in length, and varies from ten to sixty feet, cropping out in many places fifteen feet above the ground. The casings are slate, lime and trap rock. The same formation extends for a mile west of the main ledge, and contains a number of smaller ledges. Some old and experienced miners who have seen them, according to The News, declare them to be the most massive ledges they have ever known. A piece of the rock is said to have assayed $87 per ton.

Personal.

James Parker, one of the editors and proprietors of THE INYO INDEPENDENT, dropped into our sanctum yesterday. He looks healthy and reports all things lovely in his southern section. It seems natural to see Jim around on his old stamping ground once more, among his brother typos and old friends. He is a good man, and THE INDEPENDENT is a good paper. He is in on a short visit, and is enjoying himself considerably. His old friends and fellow firemen of the Virginia Department especially are all glad to see him.—Gold Hill News, February 17.

Slurs on Women.

At a dinner, at which no ladies were present, a man, in responding to the toast "Woman," dwelt almost solely on the frailty of the sex, claiming that the best among them were but little better than the worst, the chief difference being in their surroundings.

At the conclusion of the speech, a gentleman present rose to his feet and said:

"I trust the gentleman, in the application of his remarks, refers to his own mother and sisters, not to ours."

The effect of this most just and timely rebuke was overwhelming with confusion and shame.

Personal.

J. D. Thorn, Esq., having bought into a trading business over in Owens River Valley, will make that his future residence. He still retains his interest in the firm of Douglass & Co. We wish him success in the new undertaking, and commend him to the kind consideration of our neighbor of THE INDEPENDENT.—Visalia Delta, February 22.

The Rural Press.

We commend this excellent agricultural paper to our farmer friends in this valley. We have furnished sample copies to a number, who express themselves highly pleased with it, and will continue to do so when anyone applies By ordering through us our regular cash paying subscribers can obtain The Press for $3 per annum, the usual subscription price being $4.

Commissioned.

Governor Bradley has issued the proper official credentials to the following gentlemen as Commissioners of Deeds: Patrick Reddy, to reside at Independence, Inyo county, California; J. C. Maynard, to reside in San Francisco, California; also Augustus Williams, as Notary Public, to reside in Storey county.

Los Angeles Rioters.

In the trial of A. L. Crenshaw, one of the Los Angeles rioters of October 24, resulted in a verdict of manslaughter There are 20 more to be tried on the same indictment. Crenshaw is about 22 years of age, and formerly resided on Bishop Creek, in this county.

THE NO-FENCE PETITION.

Notwithstanding the seeming unanimity among farmers in this vicinity for a no-fence law, there are a number who decline to sign the petition now in circulation urging the passage of such a law, limited. It occurs to us that these parties take rather a contracted view of this matter, as affecting their own interests. They seem to forget that there is scarcely a securely fenced farm in the county, and, in most cases, it is hardly possible to make them so. Neither the means or materials are attainable, except only to a limited extent. It is objected by these parties, that with the no-fence law in force, a man may proceed to cultivate a few acres in certain places, and thereby exclude stock from an extensive range. Even admitting this extreme probability verified, he can only do so for a portion of the year, and at a time when there is range on the outside sufficient for the time being. The exclusion of stock from parts of the valley range by such means during the Summer season will inure to to their benefit, by garnering up the feed, as it were, for the time of greatest need. Instead of lessening the amount of available feed-range it will actually increase it.

Under the present law, on the other hand, the owner of a single cow or mustang can compel a whole neighborhood to spend thousands of dollars to protect crops against their inroads In effect the owner of a few head of stock may, and often does, virtually monopolize lands sufficient for homes for dozens of poor families. Admitting that much of this out-lying land is only fit for cultivation in spots, one or two men in the midst of such have no right to an exclusive monopoly. There are poor men in abundance who would be proud to own these "spots" as homesteads. Their actual productiveness, when the forbidding expense of fencing is not involved, need not be more than half as great as fenced lands to be equally as profitablble. But without the proposed law they will continue to lie in idleness for years to come, yielding nothing in revenue to county or State, and eventually be gobbled up in large tracts by speculators, by which further influx of immigrants—population, the great need of the country—will be effectually barred.

As to a decrease of taxable property by reason of stock having to be driven out of the county, there is no good reason to anticipate anything of the sort; at least of material consequence. There will be no diminution of available range when most needed, but an actual increase. Any probable loss of taxes from this cause will be more than compensated in saving capital that otherwise would have to be sunk in yearly repairs of fences, to say nothing of their first cost. This expense upon a few farmers for building and maintaining fences necessitates the withdrawal of more capital from general circulation than the total tax upon all the stock in the county.

Men who came here at an early day have, in many instances, succeeded by hard knocks and privations in getting tolerable fences around their farms, and some stock about them. To accomplish the required fencing, such as it is, has about used up the actual profits of cultivating the ground enclosed, the live stock remaining as the surplus gain. Now there are some of these pioneers who think it the right thing to compel all new comers to undergo a similar experience before attaining a similar advancement—in effect to work three years out of five in building fences in order that these few stock may run at large. We do not mean to say that these men are selfish enough to actually wish to subject neighbors to unnecessary expense, but such is the result of their opposition to the this law, nevertheless, not only to their neighbors but to themselves. Their own fences have to be maintained and renewed at an expense more than equal to the profits upon the limited amount of stock they can keep in connection with farming. Right here we will remark as pertinent to the matter in question that an acre of alfalfa, properly set and thrifty, is worth more for pasturage than twenty five or more of such wild feed as this valley affords, and it is certainly cheaper to fence in a little tame pasturage required for what stock that is necessarily kept on the place than to have to fence them out or off of an entire farm.

The "Gunsight Lode."

A party in search of the Gunsight lode, one of the famous lost ledges of Death Valley, left San Bernardino a few days since, under Captain Frank, of the Vulture mine, Arizona. It was abandoned by the discoverers on account of losing their stock, and nearly starving in that inhospitable region.

Mono County.

Some interesting notes on Mono ounty will appear next week.

SNOWBOUND ON THE PLAINS.

[Correspondence of The Inyo Independent.]

ROCK CREEK, Feb. 4, 1872.

MESSRS. EDITORS: This morning, while lying here snowbound 624 miles from the Missouri river, I shall endeavor to give you a sketch of my travels since leaving Washington city. Left that city on the 2d of January. At Baltimore we had to wait four hours, and, as usual, with some traveling companions got a carriage and took which is a great place, and improving rapidly. From Baltimore we passed over part of the route on which we traveled going east through West Virginia; we switch off in the night, and next morning find ourselves in the GREAT STATE OF OHIO.

A LOOK AT THE CITY,

This country (Ohio) has the appearance of prosperity, but I feel somewhat disappointed as to the general appearance of the country; had expected to find a high state of cultivation and beautiful buildings. I find Indiana in advance of Ohio, Illinois in advance of Indiana, and the western part of Iowa, near Burlington, in advance of Illinois, and California, for taste and beauty, in advance of all. Our West is far in advance of the East; the effect of climate, it seems to me, invigorates the brain and system to that extent that it is visible on our improvements, as well as entire business. Our children, even those far in the interior, are superior to those of the East. On arriving at Sandusky, Ohio, I find myself in the country where

MY DAYS OF BOYHOOD WERE SPENT.

I ride about the country and find relatives in all directions, and all seeming to be doing well. Visited the farm on which still stands the same old hewn log house in which I first saw the light. It, with its time-worn outbuildings, were in use until quite recently. There was the identical hill down which we used to coast, and in fancy the same sandheaps we played in, almost the same playmates of those days of thirty-five years ago! In the old burying ground, which I had not seen in all that time, rest many relatives and associates of my youth, among them the once tall and muscular form of my venerable father. There seems to be a sad want of care and attention to these grounds. As making money seems to be the order of the day, I suppose the relatives have forgotten to look to them.

OFF FOR HOME.

Reaching Kansas City, after making short calls among friends and relatives living there, we lay in an ample stock of commissary stores, and, with a large snow-bank in fancy view, start, January 23, for Denver, where we stop two days. Before reaching this place, however, we were snowbound four days, during which time the railroad company boarded us, and done everything in their power to make us comfortable. We left Cheyenne at dark on the 31st.

ON THE U. P. R.

We are now making 25 and 30 miles a day. Well, this is full as fast as we traveled to Califtornia in '49, therefore we must be content. We have now in view within two miles no less than nine trains, all of which left the Missouri river before we did. We have a party of 100 men shoveling snow, and as they clear a cut we pass through, and wait again at the next until it is cleared in the same way. Your correspondent started out in the full expectation of finding a snow-bank, and having a store of patience, shall make the best of it. My commissary is well supplied so no fears of want flash over me. In fact, almost all the passengers have supplies; reading and games are going on for pastime. Some are fretful and over anxious to get on, which is not to be wondered at when you reflect that we have been out since the 23d, shoveling snow all the time, and now snowing rapidly and wind blowing so the men refuse to work.

FEBRUARY 5th.

Clear and cold; it is frightful to see the men when shoveling snow. They are covered, face and body, completely with ice and frozen snow. At noon we stop at Como and take in water and coal for car and engine uses. My large blanket coat, over two others, is just the thing. I can go out and view operations. Think for a moment! Nine trains, when close together, cover at least a mile of track. They make one moving village of, perhaps, 700 people. At 3 P. M. wind blowing and snow drifting. I am at a loss to describe it. The first fall of snow covers the sagebrush, and settling between, leaves the surface in waves as it were. When the wind is blowing the snow and in passing over this rough, packed snow, looks like the white waves of the sea. It is a beautiful, but terrible sight to behold, and sad, too, for no human power can prevent open cuts from filling almost instantly. We make Carbon station, 23 miles, to-day.

THE WHOLE SURFACE SEEMS TO BE MOVING,

This morning, February 6, there are

ELEVEN TRAINS IN SIGHT,

the wind blowing fearfully, giving the snow, as it passes over the uneven ground, much the appearance of a huge snake rolling and winding along. February 7 and wind still blowing, trains lying still. At 6 A. M. wind falling and working party start out; many passengers go, also, making about 200 men in all. Feb. 8. Come about 6 miles last ninght, and 15 miles to-day, arriving at Percy. Feb. 9. Got to Fort Steele to-day, 25 miles, and before night reach Rawlings. Start out on the 10th, and have a squad of Chinamen to shovel. The wind blew almost a hurricane last night, filling all the cuts again, I suppose. Sunday, the 11th, arrive, and remain till morning, at Separation, wind blowing hard. Start at 4 A. M. Monday, and cannot pass the deep cut, there being a heavy up-grade; send for another engine to assist, but before it could be brought, we done some shoveling and clearing off the track in the rear, the train backs, and getting up a full head of steam, dashes through. In about five miles, halt again; about five inches new snow last night, wind blowing hard, moving the light snow like waves of the sea. Towards evening the wind falls, and the shovelers start again. Almost every day the wind blows, but goes down towards evening. We are nearly moving Heaven and earth to press forward during the night, that being our only hope. Feb. 13. The wind raised last night, and is blowing hard; we move about two miles, still an up-grade; soon we will cross the MAIN CHAIN OF THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS.

Wednesday, 14th. During the night we came about five miles, and now we are over the divide, the waters flowing westward. The railroad company furnish passengers, who are out of provisions, bread, a few sardines, a little cheese and dried beef. To-day four wagons came with rations, the most of which, I think, came from the military posts along the road. Gen. Ord is on the car in front of ours, and has telegraphed the company to get supplies from the military posts if they are short.

There is many amusing sayings and doings among the passengers; many things that show up character, good and bad. Anything mean is sure to crop out, reminding me of crossing the plains in '49. This is St. Valentine's Day, a fact not forgotten by the ladies, as they are busy running a postoffice.

CRESTON, February 16.

We have been at this station two days, this 9 A. M. Our conductor tells us there is a train coming from the west, bringing a large working force. A passenger comes in at this moment, and says the train from the west is in sight, so there is great rejoicing. Start on for Washakie at 1 P. M., and hope to find the road open through to Nevada. For fear you may be misled as to the depth of the snow on these mountains, I will say that the trouble arises from its drifting and filling the cuts, which are usually from one to four feet deep. The snow being shoveled out so many times, snow-banks are formed from 6 to 20 feet high. Places some 8 feet from the bottom are leveled off on to which the snow is first shoveled, then thrown over the top. Were it not for the canyons and brush there would hardly be enough snow to cover the ground. The wind blows so hard as to move masses of it bodily, lifting it up so as to darken the heavens at times. There seems to be but little calm weather on these hights, though now and then there is a still day. Upon the whole the passengers have stood the trip well. To be cooped up a whole month under such circumstances is trying, however, upon the best nerves. I shall long remember the many pleasant acquaintances made on this eventful trip.

OGDEN, February 16, 3 P. M.

Since starting yesterday we have come about 300 miles; found but little snow, the cuts being covered with snow sheds or houses. Some of our passengers leave us here for Salt Lake. We bid them good-bye and good luck. A warm friendship exists among the passengers, all of whom will long remember our trip over the Rocky Mountains in January and February, 1872.

ELKO, February 18.

We left Ogden yesterday at 6 in the morning, traveling 300 miles, arriving at this place at 8 this morning. I shall leave you for the present; you may hear from me at Sacramento, as I propose to see something of our Legislature. Always had a passion to see the "master minds" of every place, and particularly of California.

CALIFORNIA.

EASTERN NEWS.

Tweed has been elected President of the Americus Club, New York.

A bill repealing the duty on tea and coffee has passed the Lower House of Congress.

Thos. A. Scott is about to retire from the Presidency of the Union Pacific Railroad, when it will fall into the hands of the Vanderbilt party.

A Washington special says the foreign mails which left London Saturday, February 3, arrived here to-day, but did not bring the text of Earl Granville's note, in the shape of "the friendly message," to which the Queen alluded in her address to Parliament. The mail, however, brought unofficial letters which indicate that the surface sentiment in Great Britain over the American case is not shared to any such degree by officials of the English Government. While some fear is expressed by these writers that the treaty will fail, there is no one that gives the opinion that a war will grow out of the present situation. The feeling among officials is said to be quite general that the claim for indirect damages was put in by the United States to make a complete case, but with no hope that the Geneva arbitration would allow it.

Alexis joins the Russian fleet at Mobile, Alabama, and from thence goes to Havana.

Epidemic small-pox is increasing at a frightful rate in the city of Baltimore.

Rumor says Col. J. W. Forney is to be appointed Postmaster-General in place of Cresswell.

The St. Louis Republicans have endorsed Grant as their candidate for the Presidency.

PACIFIC COAST READAGRAMS.

There were seventeen cases of small-pox in Eureka, Nevada, on the 20th of February.

It is said that 50,000 signers will be obtained in San Francisco to a remonstrance against the bill agreed upon by the Pacific Railway Committee of the Lower House of Congress, to allow the Central Pacific Railway Company to possess and occupy for "depot purposes" the one-half of Goat Island.

Governor Booth vetoed the bill allowing the railroad company to construct a bridge at Tehama without a draw. The veto will meet almost universal approbation.

Petitions are being circulated in San Francisco urging a vigorous prosecution of the work on the Southern Pacific Railroad.

W. S. Godbe makes a clean breast of his knowledge of Mormon doings, among them a charge against Jetter Clinton for receiving bribes and being a defaulter. A great stir has been created by his expose in The Tribune.

The Apaches have all withdrawn from the reservations, and a bloody war will probably soon ensue.

A shocking murder was committed in Gold Hill February 21st, the result of a drunken spree. It was committed by a miner named Prentice upon another named Patrick O'Rourke, the latter receiving the contents of a double-barreled shot gun, literally blowing him to pieces.

FOREIGN NEWS.

A leading Paris journal asserts that a conspiracy has been detected by the Thiers government, in which leading Bonarpartist Generals were the chiefs. Their plan was to do to the Assembly what Napoleon I did to the Directory and the Council of Five Hundred; break it up by force and reinstate the late Emperor. The Government has set armies to guard the northern frontier against these conspirators, who have their headquarters in Belgium.

General Sherman is to be honored by the Americans in Italy by a fete among the ruins of Pompeii.

The Pope has issued a decree calling another Ecumenical Council. It is to meet either in Malta, Ireland or in the Tyrol.

General Trevino (rebel) is marching on San Luis Potosi with 12,000 men and intends to march from thence direct to the city of Mexico.

In the British House of Commons, on a motion to censure the Ministry for an obnoxious appointment, the Ministers only escaped censure by 27 majority out of 509 votes.

The following is a London dispatch of February 19:

"In reply to a letter of inquiry addressed to him by me, Gladstone has written a long letter explaining in an extremely amicable manner the present position of her Majesty's Government concerning the Treaty of Washington, and denying the utterance of the offensive passages in his recent speeches in the House of Commons, as they have been erroneously reported. In order to allay public excitement in England, I have furnished copies of Gladstone's letter to the press of London, and it is now published in every journal of the kingdom, causing a profound sensation. In the House of Commons this evening, Bouverie asked Gladstone if the letter addressed to the correspondent of The World was genuine, when Gladstone replied 'Yes; it is a reply to those asking explanations regarding my speech.'"

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

 All advertisements, to insure insertion in these columns, must be handed in on or before 2 o'clock P. M., Friday.

Change of Time.

Messrs. Ullrick & Wrights, of the Northern Stage Line, have changed the time of departures and arrivals at this place, so that until further notice Tuesdays at 3, A. M., instead of Wednesdays, is the time of leaving. Passengers going on that stage (Tuesdays) will go through to Carson in three days, as there is then no detention in Aurora. The time of departures on Saturdays remains the same as before. The time of arrivals here are changed, being now in the forenoon on Mondays and Thursdays, instead of late at night on Sundays and Thursdays, as formerly. This is a decided improvement, and moreover these gentlemen are determined to do all they can for the convenience and comfort of passengers, as well as the public generally. They have now put on some new coaches and stock. They find it necessary to cross the Esmeralda mountains very early in the morning so as to take advantage of the frozen snow, which in the afternoon is so soft as to be impassable.

The Kearsarge.

As there are a large number of persons more or less interested in the proceedings in bankruptcy of the Kearsarge Company's property, we call their attention to their advertisement ordering another sale, to take place this time in San Francisco. Mr. Holden, the assignee, expresses a strong desire to realize as high a price as possible for the property, and is pleased that the sale set for January 20, last, did not take place. So are we; for more reasons than one, not the least of which is that we dislike to see such really valuable property sacrificed for a mere song (operatic), and another is we dislike to see a sacrifice of honest creditors especially when there is no absolute necessity for it. The sale takes place at 327 Montgomery street, San Francisco, the 25th of the present month.

The Races.

The result of the half mile race run on the 22d resulted, as stated by us last week, in favor of Mulkey's horse Billy Buffum over Horton's Ned, his only competitor. The mile race, the following day, between Bennett's gelding, Sheep Driver, and Hitchcock's sorrel filly, Jane, was won easily by the former. The first half mile was made in 52 seconds, the last half mile was only cantered through, as the filly could not stand the work. Numerous "scrub" races followed, and everything passed off pleasantly, but with less interest than was anticipated, the contest in the main races not being close enoug to excite much betting. The attendance was quite large.

Plant Trees.

Mr. Earl has been appointed agent for one of the finest nurseries in the Northwest, so that parties here can obtain trees and plants, by ordering through him, on reasonable terms. There is no question but that the true policy of transplanting trees and such things, is to take them from a colder climate to a warmer one. The growing season in Iowa, where this nursery is situated, is somewhat shorter than that of this section, so that any tree fruitful in that country cannot fail to do well here. This is a matter worthy the attention of every land holder, large or small, in the valley.

In Sacramento.

Mr. Earl, after his month's experience in a snow blockade, went on over to Sacramento, we suppose, to get thawed out, before returning home. Mr. Earl is certainly entitled to a good deal of credit for the zeal and perserverance he has, and is displaying in the interests of this county generally. He has accomplished much more in that direction than is apparent at a mere glance. Our Junior is also in Sacramento, from which he will probably forward us a few notes for publication soon.

The Bend City Bridge.

This structure has canted over so much that it is no longer safe to cross it with teams. The Board of Supervisors are anxious to replace it with a new one, but do not feel authorized to advertise for bids until they know whether it is to be on a cash or county scrip basis—a question to be settled in accordance with the action of the Legislature in reference to the bill allowing the county to issue bonds. It is confidently expected, and much to be hoped, that the bill will soon pass.

Commenced Operations.

Jimmy Sharpe and Chastine have gone to work on the Blue Belle ledge, in the Inyo range, opposite this place, to take out ore for shipment. The Blue Belle is a large, and supposed to be, a very valuable mine, and we certainly hope it may fully reward Jimmy's indomnitable perseverance. He thinks it will, and that is pretty good evidence of its value.

"My dear boy, does your father design that you should tread the thorny and intricate path of the professions, the straight and narrow way of the ministry, or revel amid the flowery fields of literature?" "No, marm," said the juvenile, "dad says he's going to set me to work in the tater patch."

KISSING THE "DEVIL."

A printer's devil was pierced in the heart
With charms of a little Miss;
Quoth he to the lass, "My dear ere we part,
Let us seal our love with a kiss."
The maiden replied, as the imp she eyed,
"Don't think that I'll let you revel
Where others before have vainly tried!
No, no! I'll not kiss the devil."

Years rolled along, and the sweet little lass
Became an old sorrowful maid;
She lived like a Queen—was rich, but alas!
Her beauty had all decayed.
Once again they met, and the old maid tried
To recall the former issue;
But he gaily smiled, and only replied,
"The devil wouldn't kiss you."

How the Apache War Commenced.

The Arizona Miner gives a different account of the origin of the present war in that Territory, from that in circulation through the newspapers, based on the romantic loss of a son by Cochise. The Miner's account is as follows:

It is, we believe, a fact, that the first Americans who came here, and settled along the overland mail route, were, for a short time, feared by the Apaches, which race of demons then courted the favor of Americans, while they still kept on at their old work of robbing and butchering Mexicans and the half civilized Indians scattered in villages throughout the Gadsden Purchase. This state of affairs lasted in the Gadsden Purchase until the year 1861, when the savages turned their weapons upon Americans as well as Mexicans and Indians. Up to that year the Apaches visited the mail stations and were treated in the most cordial manner, until one day one of Cochise's braves committed some spiteful act in a corral, for which he received a kick from one John Wilson, an employe of the Mail Company. This awoke the slumbering devil in the Apache; he reported the affair to Cochise, who went to Mr. Robert Swoop, the head man of the station, and told him that his man Wilson had insulted one of his Indians, which Indian, Cochise said, desired satisfaction; in fact wished to fight a duel with Wilson. To this Wilson assented; preliminaries were arranged, and one day, in the presence of all the whites and nearly all of the Indians, the combatants—each armed with a loaded six shooter—met in deadly conflict, and the Indian went down to rise no more. Cochise and his Indians, though disappointed, appeared satisfied; but soon after this occurrence a train was attacked, plundered, and all the white people with it either murdered or carried into captivity; then stations were attacked, and cruel, relentless, savage warfare has ever since been waged upon Americans by Apaches. And such a war as has never darkened the pages of history! A war wherein white captives have been tortured to death in various devilish modes, the most fearful of which was, to our mind, the hanging of men by the heels to the limbs of trees, while underneath their heads slow-burning fires were kept up until long after the last spark of life had been fried out of the poor victims.

Business and Duty.

A disconsolate editor thus bemoans his departed spouse:

"Thus my wife died. No more will those loving hands pull off my boots and part my back hair as only a true wife can. Nor will ever those willing feet replenish the coal hod or water pail. No more will she arise amid the tempestuous storms of winter, and hie herself away to build the fire without disturbing the slumbers of the man who doted on her so artlessly. Her memory is embalmed in my heart of hearts. I wanted to embalm her body, but I found that I could embalm her memory cheaper.

"I procured of Eli Mudget, a neighbor of mine, a very pretty gravestone. His wife was consumptive, and he kept it on hand several years in anticipation of her death. But she rallied last spring, and his hopes were blasted. Never shall I forget the poor man's grief when I asked him to part with it. 'Take it, Skinner, and may you never know what it is to have your soul racked with disappointment as mine has been!' and he burst into a flood of tears. His spirit, was indeed, utterly broken.

"I had the following epistle engraved upon her tombstone: 'To the memory of Tabitha, wife of Moses Skinner, Esq.' gentlemanly editor of The Trombone. Terms, $3 a year, invariably in advance. A kind mother and exemplary wife. Office, over Coleman's grocery, up two flights of stairs. Knock hard. We shall miss thee, mother, we shall miss thee. Job printing solicited.' Thus did my lacerated spirit cry out in agony, even as Rachel weeping for her children. But one ray of light penetrated the despair of my soul. The undertaker took his pay in job printing, and the sexton owed me a little account I should not have gotten any other way."

Daily Mail.

On and after the 1st of May next, Bakersfield is to have a daily mail from the northward. A contract for the performance of the service has been let by the Postoffice Department. The want of mail facilities equal to the requirements of our population and the demands of business has long been felt as a considerable inconvenience. This news will diffuse great and general satisfaction.—Courier.

Elephants at Sea

[From The Calcutta Englishman.]

A few facts about the elephants now going to Chittagong in the Scotia, under the command of Capt. W. B. Matthews, may be interesting to our readers. The hoisting up into the air and lowering down into the hold of a ship such huge animals is not only an unusual sight to most men, but also a strange experience to most elephants; indeed, notwithstanding the great age of the beasts, it seldom occurs to them once in a lifetime. We are sorry to see it stated by a contemporary that the animals were goaded and ill-used into submission. So far as we saw, no ill-usage was practised; they were simply secured, lashed with strong ropes, slung as far as practicable in slings, hoisted up with cranes with three-fold tackles, and lowered into the hold like bales of cotton. When in the hold they were placed in pens built of strong teak timber baulks, bolted to the ships side, to prevent them from breaking loose. The fear the animals suffered was the only pain they underwent, and by watching the eyes of the poor beasts, their terror was very manifest; the tears trickled down their mild countenances, and they roared with dread, more especially when being lowered into the hold, the bottom of which was sanded for them to stand upon. We are told that one timid female elephant actually fainted, and was "brought to" with a fan and many gallons of water. At sea it appears that the elephants got into a curious habit of occasionally—evidently with a preconcerted signal—setting to work rocking the ship from side to side by giving to themselves simultaneously a swaying motion as they stood athwart the ship, the vessel rolling heavily, as if in a seaway. This they would do for a spell of an hour or more, and then desist for several hours until the strange freak took them again. At Chittagong, we hear that they were hoisted out of the hold, and swam on shore, thirty-five being thus safely landed without any accident whatever. Our informant says that when they were released from the slings, it was a supreme moment for the mahout, who was always on the elephant's neck from the time of its touching the water to letting go. As the word was given to "let go," each of the elephants, either from the lightness of his heart at being freed from his floating prison, or from his own weight, we are not sure which—lightness of heart like lightness of head, causes elephants and men to play pranks—plunged down deep into the water, the mahout on his neck. The anxiety on the face of the mahout, just one second before the plunge, was a study; so, too, was it when elephant and man rose to the surface again, the former blowing water from his trunk, and the latter from his nose. Forty-four more elephants go down by the same steamer to Chittagong.

Good Advice.

Look most to your spending. No matter what comes in, if more goes out you will always be poor. The art is not in making money, but in keeping it; little expenses, like mice in a barn, when they are many, make great waste. Hair by hair, heads get bald; straw by straw the thatch goes off the cottage; and drop by drop the rain comes in the chamber. The barrel is soon empty if the tap leaks but a drop a minute. When you mean to save, begin with your mouth; there are many thieves down the red lane. The ale jug is a great waste. In all other things keep within compass. Never stretch your legs further than the blankets will reach, or you will soon be cold. In clothes, choose suitable and lasting stuff, and not tawdry fineries. To be warm is the main thing; never mind the looks. A fool may make money, but it needs a wise man to spend it. Remember that it is easier to build two chimneys than to keep one going. If you give all to back and board, and there is nothing left for the savings-bank. Fare hard and work hard while you are young, and you will have a chance to rest when you are old.

Problems for Debating Societies.

Debating Societies are excellent institutions for "teaching the young ideas how to shoot," consequently we are glad to hear they are becoming very popular throughout the United States. To prevent any of them from being "hard up" for a subject, we subjoin a few highly scientific and interesting questions, regular hair splitters, and dedicate them to polemical friends:

Can a soldier with tender toes and tight boots literally stand at ease?

Is it possible for a baker to make a batch of bread from a stock of floury (flowery) speeches?

How can a spouting politician with "wooden legs" avoid being a "stump orator?"

LITIGANT PAPER FOR INYO COUNTY,

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY

CHALFANT & PARKER.

JAS. E. PARKER | P. A. CHALFANT

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

Saturday,.....March 9, 1872.

OF SOME IMPORTANCE.

The following, from our correspondent "California," dated Sacramento, February 29, has rather an encouraging aspect. As there are some who may not fully understand it, we will state that it is in reference to the bill authorizing our Supervisors to issue bonds for bridge and building purposes, and further, to authorize the Treasurer of Mono county to pay over certain school moneys belonging to Bishop Creek. We shall probably be able to lay a copy of the first mentioned bill before our readers next week:

"In my last I spoke of there being buildings and bridges turned out here all ready for putting together. Architects from your country are preparing some to send to you. I expected them to be ready to ship ere this, but it takes time to get up such structures. The architects, too, are over careful, and inspect the work well before it leaves their hands; all the work passes through one head man's hands, who scrutinizes it closely. From this you may infer, reasonably enough, that we will have a good job. And it is cheap, too; the whole thing won't cost over $40,000. We had thought it would take nearly twice that amount, but the architects say not.

Mono county is rushing in to help her old friends of Bishop Creek, in the way of aiding them to sustain their schools, which is the correct thing for Mono to do. I am off for San Francisco, this evening; will write again on my return."

NOTES ON MONO COUNTY.

[COMMUNICATED.]

MILLS IN MONO COUNTY.

Mono county contains five mills, as follows: The "Pioneer," at Montgomery; an arastra, barrel and lavadero. Roasting furnace now being added. Formerly owned by Aaron & Mack; now by C. H. Aaron. Process used heretofore a modification of the Mexican "fondo." Run by water power. Worked last Summer 125 tons of ore assaying from $100 to $700 per ton average, $247 per ton. Extracted about 85 per cent. of assay, and paid well. Also worked over about 100 tons of tailings. Frozen up in Winter.

RILEY'S MILL,

also in Montgomery; now owned by J. G. Jones; small stamps and pans; run by water power; formerly quite profitable, but idle and dilapidated now.

A SMALL MILL AT HOT SPRINGS,

now owned by J. Partz; formerly by A. B. Williams, who used it to work the ore of the Diana mine; four small stamps, barrel, and separators; water power; process same as Pioneer mill; working about a ton a day and fairly profitable.

JENNINGS' MILL,

near Whisky Flat; a very small affair; abandoned several years.

W. J. WILLIAMS & CO.'S MILL;

built last year; steam power; 10 stamps, 2 pans, 2 separators and a White's furnace; was running a couple of months, off and on, last year; worked about 20 tons of ore; has now been idle about two months; cause unknown. With proper management would supply the want of the district and be profitable.

ALSO A NUMBER OF JAWBONE MILLS;

owned by everybody in general; mostly run by whisky; have not crushed any rock yet, but are going to; will be supplied by the rich mines recently discovered in Horn and worked by wind power. These mines yield 100 tons of "black ore" per day, and the mills will work it within 105 per cent of the blowpipe assay for $15 per ton. The boys are bound to devil up the country. AMEN.

The Independence Mail.

Under the above caption The Los Angeles News, of the 24th ultimo, (which number, by the way, we received in six days by mail from date of publication), after copying our remarks in reference to the Los Angeles mails and Postmaster, concludes as follows:

We find that there was no mail communication between this city and Independence prior to the 30th of October last, when a contract was made to have them conveyed by Havilah. On the first of February, a contract was made with the stage company to have the mails conveyed direct to Independence. This was done by the Postmaster at this place upon his own responsibility and on the strength of a telegram to the effect that a contract for conveying mails to Independence had been awarded to the present contractor. No written instructions from the Department at Washington have yet been received, and will not until the snow blockade is raised. Counter complaints are made in this office against the Postmaster at Independence for sending all registered mail matter destined to this city via Sacramento, causing great inconvenience and delay.

Our Postmaster here says he only only obeyed official instructions in sending registered matter via Sacramento.

OF INTEREST TO BUSINESS MEN.

We feel it our duty to call the attention of our business men—merchants, lumbermen, farmers and all—to the importance of taking some steps towards securing the trade of the rich mining region lying on the eastern slope of the Inyo range. It may surprise some if we assert there is out there a mining region fully equal, if not vastly superior, to that of White Pine in rich, available mineral wealth, but we have good reason to believe the statement to be strictly true, nevertheless. There is an abundance, already, of actual, well sustained developments to prove it, and we would not be in the least surprised if, in a very few months from this date, the trade of that section should equal that of White Pine now, with all its renown. Whether it does or not it is certain to be worth looking after. We cannot now go into statements in detail in support of this belief, but will merely, as stated above; refer to the matter of trade—of opening a direct practicable route between that region and this valley. When that is done we have an extensive and valuable market for merchandise, lumber and farm produce, besides the advantage of the passing travel. Unless something is done to prevent it, all this will fall to Austin, whose people are already stirring in the matter. A petition to furnish them a weekly mail received a thousand signatures at Austin and on the route, and soon a regular stage will be running on the route which is now being opened up between those points. The business once established on that route, there it will stay in spite of any advantages we may then have to offer.

The only obstacle to a good wagon road from here to Lida valley, and Gold Mountain, is that presented by the Inyo range, and since there is already something of a wagon road over that mountain, this obstacle is not at all serious. At present this road is, and has been for some weeks past, impassable for either wagons or pack animals, on account of the snow, which is not cleared out for the reason, we suppose, that the amount of travel will not justify the expense, and it is perfectly safe to conclude it never will be sufficient to justify it, so long as the present policy of charging toll on a road which, except about four miles from the river out can not be traveled, is pursued. That is a good way to kill the goose that lays the golden egg, or in other words to drive trade and travel in another direction.

The distance from this place to Lida valley is 90 miles; from Lida valley to Austin it is 200 miles, and thence 100 more to the railroad. It costs but little the if any more to deliver freight at this point from San Francisco than at Austin. This would give 110 miles in our favor—quite sufficient to determine freights and travel in the same way, if we use a little energy to bring it about. Now, we urge some one two of our business men to take grub and blankets and spend a few days in investigating this question for themselves. The effort will cost but little, either in time or money, and like everything else, is better done by principals than agents, though better the latter than no one at all. This is a matter that especially interests Big Pine and this place, but not them alone.

If the effort should prove too much then let us divide the last four shillings earned, and take another rest, while we wait for the mountain to come to us. Mountains and business will both meet us half-way, perhaps, if we wait long enough. Otherwise, they won't.

LETTER FROM THE CAPITAL.

[Correspondence of The Inyo Independent.]

SACRAMENTO CITY, Feb. 20, 1872.

MESSRS. EDITORS: I left you at Elko, Nevada, Sunday, 18th, on rather short notice. Monday we left that place, and to-day, 2 P. M., arrived here. Among our first acts was to make straight to the LEGISLATIVE HALLS,

and take a good look at the members of both Houses. They are a fine looking body of men, and I must say the delegation from your district looms up I was going to say, above all, but I will say about as high as any.

IN THE SNOW, AGAIN.

Well, I suppose you think your correspondent looks rough and rugged after being so long out in "Greenland's Icy Mountains;" not so; we, of our, mess look fine. We lived well and cheap, had the best of cooks and fine servants, a fine lot of kitchen ware, such as coffee boilers of oyster cans, boilers for melting snow to obtain water, of the same some old telegraph wire twisted around them forming the handles; we made No. 1 frying pans out of tin plates with holes punched in the rims through which we put fine wire from a broom for handles, and wire toasting forks for bread and meat. We started from the Missouri river with a good supply of provisions of our own, and the railroad company furnish some. Our "servants" always took good care to lay in a large stock of coal when a car load came near, so we had good fires, plenty of antelope and elk meat, now you can imagine our bill of fare, and no rents to pay either! never lived better or cheaper; the Occidental, at San Francisco can afford no comparison.

HOW THEY WERE TREATED BY THE RAILROAD COMPANY.

The railroad men done all in their power to assist passengers with the scanty means at hand. The wrongs suffered are chargable to the agents in not saying to the traveling public, "It is a bad show for you to get through, but if you want to take the chances, prepare supplies and we'll try and get you through." Instead, they told us we would not be over six days, at most, to Ogden. The managers of the U. P. road will not do. The road is destitute of snow plows, engines, shovels and men. They are "pound foolish and penny wise." They have not the brains to manage such a long road; they might do to run a railroad in an old settled place, but our mountains are too much for them. I am satisfied, if our Central Pacific had the management of that road, they would clear it with their masterly snow plows and engines in seven or eight days, and keep it clear. There is not a decent snow plow on the road, and if there was, their engines are out of order and could not handle them. My advice to the U. P. Co. is to "sell out and go home; also, remember your mother's apron strings."

CONCERNING INYO AFFAIRS.

Now, is there anything I can say or do for you, or your county, while I am in this city? The Legislature is in session here. I suppose your paper is increasing its circulation, and, of course, there will be a rush into your section. I am told your county buildings are very poor. Have you a high school? [None, either high or low, in this town, the more shame to it.—EDS.] A high school in your country, being so far in the interior, it seems to me, would do more to enhance the value of property, and to induce settlers, than anything else. Issue bonds payable, say in 10 or 12 years, and put up all such buildings. When your country settles up thickly, as it would do, these bonds can be redeemed without being felt. I am also told your river needs some new bridges badly. These should be put up, by all means. To do all this you should have at least $75,000 in bonds. Your people ought to move in this at once.

A BEAUTIFUL COUNTRY.

This city and country is looking nicely now. The grass is about six inches high, shrubbery and flowers in full bloom, houses hidden from view by the dark green foliage of running vines, orange trees loaded with fruit, together with tasteful and elegant buildings and surroundings, make it beautiful beyond description. The State House would do honor to any State, and would be creditable as the capitol building of the United States. It is built much on the same style as that at Washington. The streets are muddy at present, and the crossings being in bad condition, rather discommodes gentlemen from the East with their finely polished boots. I meet many familiar faces and old acquaintances in the Legislature; also, find Judge Reed and Mr. Brady, from your country, sojourning here. This, with the fascinating country, causes me to think of locating in this city, but I am advised that San Francisco is the great center, and, in fact, second only to New York now, in commercial interest and wealth. I shall endeavor to visit it soon, before making up my mind to locate permanently. The ladies of this city display considerable taste in matters of dress, barring their immense chignons—these strain decency.

CALIFORNIA.

Presidential Tickets.

Thus far we have two Presidential tickets in the field. The National Labor party, through its convention at Columbus, Ohio, has made these nominations:

For President—Judge Davis, of Illinois.

For Vice President—Governor Parker, of New Jersey.

The Presidential nominations of this party are said to belong to Julian, of Indiana, but for some reason he was left out in the cold.

The National Prohibition party held a convention in the same city, and, February 22, brought out this ticket:

For President—James Black, of Pennsylvania.

For Vice President—John Russell, of Michigan.

It is not likely these nominations will amount to anything. In addition to these, it is quite probable that we will have a Sumner-Trumbull candidate, besides the regular party nominees.

Hints to Millmen—That is to Gentlemen who Want to put up Mills.

[COMMUNICATED.]

It is not necessary that you should have the slightest knowledge of any branch of milling, mining or metallurgy, provided you are "smart" and "shrewd," in order to get a man, or men, to put in the whole or the greater part of the money needed.

The first thing is to find a camp in which to put a mill. Get your "backers", to advance enough to pay your traveling expenses, you contributing your time, smartness, etc., for nothing; if you can get an appointment as postal agent you can travel at the expense of Uncle Sam, or the stage companies, while attending strictly to your own business.

Go to a mining camp where there is no mill, or only a little one; put up at the hotel, which ought to board you for nothing in consideration of the great benefit you are going to confer on the community by bringing capital into the place, though some short-sighted hotel keepers fail to see the point.

Having established yourself comfortably, taking care to secure the best room, and the head of the table, proceed to gather information about mines, roads, mill sites, wood, etc This is best done by asking the miners who come to town for their regular whiskey, the storekeeper, and idlers, who always abound in such places, and have nothing else to do but to keep posted; any bummer will tell you what he will undertake to furnish wood for per cord. It is not necessary to "stand treat" in order to make people communicative, only let them know that you have twenty or thirty thousand dollars to invest, if there is a fair prospect for a mill to pay, and you will get all the information you need. Probably somebody will make you a present of a valuable mill site, and the miners will be sure to give you several hundred tons of good "mill ore," as an inducement to bring in a mill. They will also carry the ore to the mill and put it on a platform which you will kindly build for their accommodation.

Some gentlemen think it necessary to visit and inspect the mines before investing their own or other people's money, but that is worse than useless, for if you don't know anything about mines (and generally you don't) you won't be able to see them if you go (probably you won't anyway), and if you do understand the subject, and have some lingering regard for truth (which you ought not to have) the examination may prove discouraging. Any miner will tell you that his mine alone will furnish ore enough to keep your mill running.

Having informed yourself on all points in this pleasant way, you will "go below" and confer with your backers, telling them all you have learned as if it were the result of your own observation instead of mere heresay; the result will be that you will be appointed Superintendent, and sent out to erect works.

You will then proceed to buy a mill. Of course you have heard of one that can be bought very cheap. To be sure it is a second hand one, but it has never been used, and is as good as new If you knew anything about the matter it might appear that it had never been used because it never could be used, or it may be totally unsuited to the ores you propose to work, but you don't know anything about it, and a mill is a mill anyhow, a very simple affair, so many stamps, so many pans and settlers, and an engine to run them.

Some people take the trouble to find out what process is best adapted to the ores, and plan and construct their works accordingly. In order to do this it is necessary to understand something of metallurgy, but, as before observed, you don't, and those who do charge very high for their services. You are going to do the thing economically, and it would never do to pay a metallurgist $200 or $300 a month before your mill is ready to run. You are "smart" enough to manage all that yourself, all you want is to "build a mill" and then hire a metallurgist, and, hurrah for the bars! So you dispense with a plan, but while your mill is building you judiciously listen to every noodle who has something to say about it and alter your plans accordingly.

If you know anyone who is milling successfully, you pump him, and (if he's a fool) obtain a great deal of information for nothing, which your own smartness will enable you to turn to good account (perhaps). The best plan is to get the ideas of several persons and combine them all, according to your own judgment, in your operations.

All this time you will of course charge a good salary for your valuable services as Superintendent, and you will not forget to collect it every month. If your original estimate of the expense was too small, you will levy an assessment on the company, or you will put off paying bills until you get money out of the mill; this is the best way.

Having at last got a mill partly built, you will naturally become anxious to start up and see how it will run before going to further expense. Probably many things will yet be incomplete or entirely wanting, but you can "get along," and the "backers," who have been footing bills and waiting patiently for the last six months, are becoming impatient. Now is the time to employ a metollurgist. In this as in other things (except your own salary) economy is the first consideration, capability is the second. The rule is: Get a cheap one; get a good one if you can, get a cheap one anyhow. Sometimes a good one can be caught hard up, which will be so much the better, as he will not only work cheap, but will "get along" with whatever you may choose to give him to work with He will also live on bacon and beans and sleep in a corral or on the floor, and he will not object to lend a hand at any laborious work when he has nothing else to do.

All this will tend to prevent his putting on airs. Some metallurgists have an absurd idea that they are employed expressly to work ore, and that the mill and men in it are instruments placed in their hands for that purpose. This is a great mistake, the principal use of such a person is to shoulder the blame in case of a failure. A judicious superintendent will attend to things himself. He will go to the engine room and fiddle with the throttle-valve, and tell the engineer to be saving with the wood, which is very expensive, some engineers will be silly enough to get mad at this, but that will make them do their work better. He will ask the metallurgist many questions, remembering that a fool can ask what a wise man cannot answer, and will assist that functionary with suggestions dictated by his own smartness; he will also help along by telling the workman what to do, and how to do it, and will give advice on many points on which he is profoundly ignorant. If he listens to all the tattle of panmen and feeders, who know much better than the metallurgist how things should be done, and fosters a spirit of jealousy between the latter and the engineer everything will be sure to go nicely, or if not he will always be able to find a scapegoat.

In short, although it is absolutely necessary to employ a metallurgist and an engineer, neither of them should be allowed to have anything as he wants it, then if the machinery does not run well it will be the engineer's fault and if the ore is not worked up to 95 per cent. the amalgamator is a humbug Their wages may be stopped, but no superintendent who is smart will ever make any deduction from his own salary. Now, it is not usual for a ship-owner to put a barber in command of a ship to make the voyage around Cape Horn, but any lawyer, broker or doctor is competent to take charge of a quartz mill if he is only "smart" and acts upon these hints. If he does not make money by milling, he may by selling stock, and he will get his salary and have the satisfaction of knowing that he has helped to devil up "our mineral resources, sir." He will also be entitled to call himself

A. MILLMAN.

NOTE.—These hints were suggested by the brilliant success of the "Bilk Mill," in Chango county.

Notable Death,

Royal T. Sprague, Chief Justice of the State of California, died in Sacramento, February 24.

MARRIED.

At the Inyo House, Independence, Inyo county by the Hon. J. A. Hannah, S. G. GREGG, of Big Pine, to Miss CARRIE A. MOORE, of Independence.

[San Francisco Examiner please copy.]

The little incident mentioned in the above few lines was the event of the season. There was a large number of well wishers of the happy pair gathered there to witness Steven's taking off; he stood it like a Major; who wouldn't with such a universally esteemed and lovely bride? Mr. G. A. Baker and Miss Tina Moore acted as Right and Left Hand Supporters during the impressive moments occupied, after His Honor had untelescoped his tall form, in pronouncing sentence upon the handsome couple. His Honor sentenced them (the bride and bridegroom, not the others) to love and cherish each other all the days of their natural lives! Everybody was happy, save a number of lorn bachelors, and as they pretended to be pleased, their hypocritical congratulations passed as current coin. The married folks present (and their was plenty of them) welcomed the new recruits to their ranks with great heartiness, the more so as they considered this an endorsement, by sensible people, of their own previous foolishness. Then came a profusion of wine and the finest cake and etceteras and enjoyment. Our reporter, a la Jenkins, asked a number of ladies what they had on; some smiled, some didn't, and that's all they said; he could get no satisfaction, and, not knowing anything about it himself, can only say they all looked very nice indeed.

P. S. Since the above mentioned occurrence, a large package was received at this office, marked "To the poor printer and his devil" which, had it not been used in great moderation, would have effectually debared the people of Inyo county of a local paper this week. It was good, though.

DIED.

In San Francisco, February 16, of consumption, S. GREGORY, a native of Georgia, aged 35 years.

Many of our readers here will recognize in the above mentioned victim of the fell destroyer, a formerly well known citizen of this county. Our personal acquaintance with Mr. Gregory was but slight, but we were much prepossessed by his gentlemanly demeanor, and we shall long remember his hopeful expressions of returning health at times when it was only too evident to every one else that his only hope lay beyond the grave. He would go below, he said, and recruit awhile, and as soon as he got well, which would not take long, he would come back and develop his mines across the river, which he thought were very valuable. He did not anticipate, then, that his mines of inestimable value lay across the River of Death. To see men cut down in a moment, while in the possession of full health and strength, is sad enough, but far less so than to see one fade away day by day, and inch by inch, as in the full possession of his faculties and earthly hopes, he vainly struggles to stay inexorable fate by clutching at every flitting shadow. Mr. Gregory's many friends will be pleased to know that for a long time previous to his death, he lacked for nothing that kind friends and former companions in the Confederate Army could supply, at least we are so informed by a letter from a friend of his, B. B. Minot, Esq., now in San Francisco, to whom we are indebted for the notice of his death.

The New Officers.

The county officers elect entered upon their duties last Monday. We are satisfied our county affairs are in very good hands. The Board of Supervisors and County Judge have been performing their respective duties long enough to show that they take the right view of things generally, and are fully equal to the requirements of their responsible duties.

Sheriff Mulkey's well known antecedents are a sufficient guarantee that the field duties of his office will be executed to the letter—he will not only "go for" outlaws, but will bring them, if perservering determination will effect it. He has appointed W. L. Moore as Under Sheriff, on whom the office work will principally devolve, and as every one knows "Dad's" smiling countenance and abilities, no other assurance is needed that these duties will be performed "up to the handle."

In the adjoining room is to be found our quiet, dignified and gentlemanly County Clerk, Mr. Hammarstrand, accommodating and well worthy his position. We have but one objection to Mr. Hammarstrand and he is not individually responsible for that; he has a very euphonious and easily pronounced name, but the objectionable part, viewed from a printer's stand point, is that it is death on "sorts" in "job letter," and in newspaper columns its length allows no margin for "fat" in one line, while it is not quite long enough to "break over" for two. This is not a serious trouble, however.

The outgoing County Treasury, I. Harris has turned over books and funds to his popular and competent successor, Harry Isaacs. The new Assessor, Mr. Dillon, has not yet begun his duties, therefore for the present we pass Frank.

Last but not least comes District Attorney Judge Van Decar, who is going to perform the duties of his office strictly to the letter, let the immediate consequences to himself be what they may. Before his term expires the people of this county will be satisfied that they have made a good selection for Prosecuting Attorney.

Of the outgoing officers we speak a common sentiment in expressing our own, that one and all leave behind them none but the kindliest recollections and respect, and our wish is that they may all strike a better paying "lead" than that they have just quitted.

How It was Named.

As Lida Valley is likely soon to occupy a large share of public attention, the following account of how it came by its name may be of interest: Some six years ago Col. Buel and some others were prospecting in that region. As a matter of precaution, parties traversing those unknown wilds always carried as much water as they could, and accordingly the Col. started out one morning, with a five-gallon keg of water on his back, with which he tugged across the hot, sandy desert until late in the day, when, contrary to all expectation, he came upon some big springs in a small valley. Throwing down his keg, he swore he never "would carry water again to save anybody's life," and then, as an afterthought, adding "except Lida's," the worthy Col.'s wife. This circumstance gave a name to the valley and district.

Masonic Notice.

We are pleased to announce that the Masons of the county have obtained a Dispensation, and will, on the 16th instant, proceed to organize a Lodge in their beautifully furnished Hall in this place. Worshipful Master Van Decar went below early in the Winter in connection with this business, and but for some unlooked for obstacles the Lodge would have been in working order some weeks since. Masons will see "Masonic Notice" in another column.

A Good Chance For a Man of Means

The Messrs. Loomis Bros., the well known merchants of Lone Pine, offer for sale the whole of their valuable business, including store, warehouses and good will. Here is a splendid chance for some capitalist to obtain a first-rate business. See notice in new advertisements. Next week we will present their new advertisement for the store

Change of Administration.

Dan Williams has disposed of his saloon business, in Cerro Gordo, to E. A Reddy, who will hereafter engineer the institution in the popular style.

To Tailors.

Charley Begole, of Lone Pine, makes an offer worthy of consideration by any person desiring to enter into a tailoring or sewing business. The particulars are fully set forth among the new advertisements.

Public Sale.

Attention is directed to advertised sale of the estate of Bernard Demistog, deceased.

Filed His Bonds.

W. A. Fox, Justice of the Peace elect for Cerro Gordo, filed his bonds yesterday.

In Town.

Mr. Hiskey, with Hiskey & Walker, o Lida Valley, paid us a visit the past week. Mr. Hiskey is looking fine, and owing to the bright prospects of his locality, is in high spirits. He thinks they have richer and better mines in Lida Valley than any place in the Great Basin. We sincerely hope their highest hopes may be more than realized. They have spent a good deal of time and several thousand dollars in money in trying to bring out a neighboring district, in the face of difficulties and adverse circumstances that would have "froze out," long since, almost anybody else.

Grand Larceny.

Under Sheriff Talcott, as one of his last official acts, last Sunday arrested one William Bonner, who is charged with stealing some $190 in Belshaw and Beaudry orders from N. H. McCustian, Cerro Gordo. Justice Pierson, of Lone Pine, committed Bonner for trial, and he is now rusticating in jail here awaiting the action of the Grand Jury which meets on the 18th instant. Bonner is a mere boy, but, we are told, is a very good stealer.

The County Court,

Judge Hannah presiding, was in session last Monday, March 4. In the case of Welsh vs. Clark, appealed from Justice's court, which awarded plaintiff $20 damages, judgment by default was rendered in favor of Clark, defendant. A venire for Grand Jury, returnable March 18, was ordered, and after transacting some Probate business, Court adjourned to meet on said day.

For Deep Springs.

The steam engine belonging to Mr. Chaquette's steam thresher, is now being taken over to Deep Spring Valley to be used temporarily as a motive power in Hiskey & Walker's mill. This mill we believe is soon to be removed to Lida Valley, a distance of thirty-five miles from its present position. It is now running on ore from that district and yielding bullion at a most astonishing rate.

Bullion Shipment.

On the 29th of February there were shipped from Lida district ore, from the mill of Hiskey & Walker, Deep Springs, one bar of bullion, weighing 255 ounces, and valued at $265. Also, on the 4th of March, there were shipped 5 bars, weighing 1755 ounces, valued at $2,050.

A Rich Specimen.

Mr. Hiskey presented us a piece of chloride ore, from one of the mines in Lida Valley, which will yield at the rate of not less than $800 per ton. It is worthy of notice as being an average specimen of large bodies of ore in more than one mine in that district, of which more anon.

Shooting in Cerro Gordo.

A man named ——Johnson shot another whose name we have not heard, in Cerro Gordo, March 6, through the thigh. The wounded man was taken to the hospital at Camp Independence. His hurt is not serious.

Tax Suits.

Some thirty suits for delinquent taxes are now in the hands of the Sheriff, and a number more will soon be added, so look out, ye delinquents!

Doing the Right Thing.

Messrs. Welch & Stevens, tinners, advertise that they are going to do the tin and copper trade here, if fair prices, good workmanship and accommodating spirit will conduce to that end. They mean what they say.

Notice to Delinquents.

Certain persons will do well to read what Judge Van Decar has to say in an advertisement under the above caption.

Election for Mining Recorder.

The annual election for Recorder for Cerro Gordo District will be held the first Saturday of April.

Perpetual Motion.

The Scientific American has published a series of articles on perpetual motion, in which it has illustrated by a cut, "every principle tried since the search began." The object has been to show inventors the folly of pursuing the search further. There were thirty illustrations.

Youthful Eloqnence.

A youthful orator gave the following burst of frenzy from out of his confined soul, or bosom, or stomach, or wherever these things come from:

"Yes, my friends, the mind of man is so expansive that it can soar from star to star, and from satchelite to satchelite, and from seraphene to seraphene, and from cherrybeam to cherrybeam, and from thence to the centre of the dome of Heaven. To describe the mind of man would be like grasping at the stars and sticking in the mud. Could I place one foot on the sea and the other on —ahem—yet to describe the mind of man, I'll howl round this little world—and, er—I'd—." Medicinal Properties of Petroleum.

[From The Scientific Press.]

In nearly every drug store is found a celebrated remedy recommended by English physicians, originating in Asia, and pretended to be manufactured in England, known as British or Rock Oil, which is prescribed as a liniment for rheumatism, neuralgia, etc., which is nothing more or less than pure petroleum, and it is no doubt often used with very beneficial effect.

As a further example of the uses of petroleum for sanitary purposes, we may cite the following very interesting and valuable facts: Dr. Gelcich, during the recent epidemic of small-pox in Los Angeles, had many patients afflicted with that disease, and moreover had to officiate as County Coroner, in performing the duties of which he was often called upon to enter houses and have bodies removed for burial. In fumigating such places he found the most effective way was to place two or three ounces of the oil in a frying pan, set it on fire and put it in the middle of the rooms. As a precautionary measure for himself he washed his hands in petroleum when it became necessary to handle the bodies; he also recommended to every family to place a small quantity in a saucer in the corner of each room, which neutralized the miasma, purified the atmosphere and effectually prevented the spread of the infection. He believes that to this method is to be attributed the success that attended his practice during the eleven month's continuance of that terrible epidemic.

ANTISEPTIC PROPERTIES OF PETROLEUM.

The antiseptic properties of petroleum are well described by Dr. J. W. Fowler, Professor of Chemistry, etc., in Hobart College and Geneva Medical College, in his analysis of it made some time since. He first describes what putrefaction is and states, "that it is the decomposition, decay or natural destruction of dead or organic matter. That which promotes putrefaction is air, moisture, warmth, cryptogamic plants and infusory insects. Dead organic substance, deprived of air and moisture and kept in a vacuum, resists putrefaction for an indefinite time. Chemicals may act in various ways in checking and preventing putrefaction; they may in the first place exclude air and moisture mechanically, as it were, like oils, resins, paints, tars, gums, etc.

Now certain chemicals act in a two-fold manner—they may either abstract water from the organic matter and form new compounds, or they may extract the moisture by the oxygen of the air. Such antiseptics are alcohol, common salt, saltpetre, etc. Others again, act in a three-fold manner; they abstract the water, exclude the air and destroy animal and vegetable life.

The substance that will best perform all this work is petroleum. If, for instance, a log of green wood be immersed in petroleum, the water and air in the pores of the wood are displaced by the petroleum. Petroleum thus excludes air and moisture from organic substances. It also destroys living vegetables and animals. Petroleum contains no oxygen—which is a necessary element of decomposition. Out of all substances this hydrocarbon appears to be the most powerful antiseptic known; and I have no hesitation in recommending it for the purpose set forth."

AS AN ANTIDOTE FOR THE BITES OF POISONOUS INSECTS, REPTILES, ETC.

Petroleum is, also, a specific for the cure of the bite of venomous insects, such as bees, spiders, etc., and the bite of reptiles. A farmer in Illinois had a large bee-gum near his house; one day some children playing near it annoyed the bees, which suddenly attacked the intruders and stung some of them in a terrible manner; the mother of the children immediately washed with petroleum the parts stung and instant relief was obtained. The same writer asserts that petroleum is an antidote for the bite of the rattlesnake and reptiles of a kindred nature.

Phosphorus Bronze—A New Metal For Drilling Tools.

A lengthened and exhaustive series of experiments with a new alloy called phosphorous bronze, which is formed by a combination of phosphorous with different proportions of tin and copper, have proved that it is admirably adapted to resisting the concussion and strain incident to heavy ordnance, and also to the manufacture of machinery subjected to excessive strain or violent shocks. Among the numerous purposes to which it may be applied is that of drilling tools. The alloy may also be tempered to resist the action of the file. It is claimed to possess elasticity, hardness, tenacity and durability, far superior to that of the best steel. —Scientific Press.

—A whole seminary of Kalamazoo girls are traveling in the Old World, and recently one of them wrote an account of their ascent of the pyramids with the Emperor of Brazil, and remarked that the young ladies were assisted by rude natives. The letter was published in a Michigan paper and metamorphosed thus: "We were assisted in our ascent by nude natives."

—At a leap year sale of old bachelors, in Southville, Alabama, recently, quotations were low, except for widowers, who brought $1,000 each. Lawyers were knocked down at $5 a head.

The No-fence Petition.

Nearly four hundred signatures were obtained on the above petition, which has since been transmitted to Sacramento for legislative action. With it went a draft of a bill, gotten up by Mr. D. B. Curtis, in section 2 of which it is provided that no action for damages, under this act, can be maintained by any person who does not possess a legal title to the land whereon damages may have been sustained. The object of this provision is to protect stock-owners from black mail levied by parties who may pile up a little hay, or effect other temporary improvements, upon outlying lands at the risk of damage from stock in the expectation of recovering for the same, or more, from owners of the stock. This is a very sensible improvement upon the original bill, unless it goes too far, and bars out renters-in-ordinary.

Republican State Convention Called.

The Republican State Central Committee has issued a call for a Republican State Convention, to be held at Sacramento, Thursday April 25; the primaries to be called by the respective county committees, under Porter's primary election law; voting for delegates to be direct. One delegate at large to be elected for each county. The cities of Sacramento, Oakland, Stockton, Marysville, San Jose and Vallejo to be apportioned at the rate of one delegate for every 230 Republican voters at the last election, and one for every fraction above 116. The test is to be: "That he is a legal voter, having voted for Booth for Governor, and pledges support to the nominations of the Philadelphia National Convention."

The Coal and Iron Record.

This is a weekly journal or book devoted, as its name indicates, to the coal and iron trade, giving it a special value to dealers in these articles of every class, and in addition to this a large space devoted to illustrations of new machinery and improvements, and articles of special interest to mechanics. It is a valuable publication. Price $3 per volume, two volumes a year. Western & Co. publishers, 37 Park Row, New York.

Fort Independence

From W. F. Wilson and Harry Wright, who have been sojourning at this place some two weeks, we learn that it is the most beautiful farming country in the State. Both gentlemen are perfectly wild about it. Wilson and Wright describe the soil as magnificent, the climate as salubrious, and everything to make it the finest farming country in the State. Some idea can be formed of the population of Bishop Creek, from the fact that at a party given to Wilson and Wright before leaving, at least fifty couples were present.—Carson Register, March 7.

A stranger would infer from the above that The Register considered the places spoken of as in its own State. Well, they are not in the State of Nevada, nor is this section entitled to such high praise as above given, but it is hard to beat, nevertheless.

Land War at Los Angeles.

A Los Angeles dispatch of March 7 says:

A bitter quarrel has arisen between the settlers on the land of the Sanseledon ranch near this city, and other claimants to the land upon which they had located school warrants. Attempts to occupy are resisted by the settlers in a body, who tore down a house erected yesterday. This morning the house was burned. Ten arrests were made on charges of riot and arson. All parties arrested are said to be men of good repute and law abiding citizens.

Not Insane.

Young O'Connor, who attempted to assassinate Queen Victoria, and was supposed to be insane, has been declared of sound mind, except only as a Fenian zealot.

The Queen has given a gold medal and an annuity of £2,000 to John Brown, for his promptness in arresting O'Connor.

Change in Firm.

Thomas Gardiner has been added to the firm of Merrill, Larkin & Anthony, publishers of The Sacramento Union. Gardiner has been connected with The Union, most of the time as business manager, ever since the first two weeks of the paper's existence.

THE LIDA VALLEY TRADE.

We last week alluded to the importance of doing something immediately to secure the trade from the eastern slope of the Inyo range, and will now say in addition, that it is essentially necessary to provide some way of crossing the river at a point opposite Big Pine. The river is not now fordable, nor will it be for some months to come. Parties desiring to cross have to swim their animals at great risk to both life and property, and with no recourse in case of loss. It is one of the first duties of every county organization to open highways, keep them in order and of the first importance to construct bridges or provide other safe means of crossing deep streams. This is the view our Supervisors take of the matter, and will probably act upon as soon as circumstances will warrant. In the present instance it is not possible for them to do anything legally in time to secure the desired object, viz. the trade from the east side of the range, therefore it will have to be done by means of subscriptions, and if not soon done all of that trade will be lost to this valley beyond recall. This is a matter that interests every part of the valley, and also our stage companies, as there is no doubt but there will be considerable travel in that direction, the most of which will pass over these lines when it is known that a good and safe route is open. Otherwise, all that, together with freight and express matter, will go and come via. Austin and the Central Pacific railroad. As a slight indication of what may be expected, we call attention to the weekly shipments of bullion from the only mill now in that section, and this small mill working to only one third its proper capacity, by reason of a lack of sufficient motive power. This deficiency will soon be remedied, other mills be built, and bullion shipments and business increase in the same ratio. We have good grounds for these anticipations.

Now, the whole thing amounts to this: To raise money enough by subscription to build a small boat, large enough only, to cross a wagon, minus the team, also to make up any possible deficiency in tolls to pay a man for attending to the boat. That is to say, if the receipts from tolls do not amount to the ferryman's wages, which for a time they will probably not do, the deficiency must be made good without increasing the rates of toll. On the other hand, whenever the receipts from tolls amount to more than the cost of running the boat, there must be a proportionate reduction of rates. Application to the Board of Supervisors for a charter can be made at their next meeting, but the work need not be delayed on that account. The foregoing, and also a portion of what follows, is Mr. Hiskey's proposition, and a very good one it is.

The whole expense of the undertaking will probably not exceed $500. The actual probable loss, allowing for no returns whatever, need not exceed one-third of that amount, as the boat can be sold for something near first cost after being used the present season; before another, the necessity for a bridge will be sufficiently manifest to justify the county in building one, or the fact be demonstrated that nothing of the kind is needed, which will doubtless be the case if we now allow this trade to start in other channels.

To give this question a tangible shape, it is proposed to raise the funds by localities somewhat in the following proportions: Bishop Creek, $50; Big Pine, $100; Independence $ 00; the Northern and Southern stage companies, $25 each. We have not included Lone Pine in this list for the reason that she is less directly interested. As the freights and a portion of the travel must, if this route is established, pass through that place, and to that extent her citizens have a contingent interest, which they would doubtless back, if called upon, but it is much to be hoped it will not require a canvass of almost the entire county to raise funds to build a 20-foot flatboat. Lida valley will do as much towards this object as the average of the places named, and as the Deep Spring road company have a direct interest in the matter it is quite possible they will attend the boat without extra charge beyond the regular tolls, and improve their road as developments seem to warrant. The figures above are given as sufficient without reference to any of the other contingencies, and of course, are subject to a conditional reduction.

We, in common with all others here, have a contingent interest in the business of the eastern slope and will contribute our mite towards securing and retaining it. Who will take the matter in hand and put it through? It can easily be accomplished.

AWFUL TRAGEDY AT AURORA!!

ATTEMPTED MURDER FOLLOWED BY A SHOCKING SUICIDE!!

The Wife of a U. S. Official Fires at Her Sleeping Husband With A Revolver, and Shoots Herself Through the Head—Hairbreadth Escape of the Husband—Whisky And Conjugal Infelicity The Probable Cause.

AURORA, Nev., March 12, 1872.

EDS. INYO INDEPENDENT:—About 10 o'clock last evening the people of this usually quiet village were suddenly aroused by one of the most shocking tragedies ever enacted in this county. The main points of the great horror, as developed by the

TESTIMONY GIVEN BEFORE THE CORONER'S JURY, are as follows: About 8 o'clock last evening Mr. Wilson Butler, Register of the United States Land Office at Aurora, left a public store and retired to his residence, where he remained in his private office writing till 9 o'clock when he retired to bed, alone, and soon fell asleep. Mrs. Butler was intoxicated at the time, and did not retire with her husband. About 10 o'clock Mr. Butler was suddenly aroused by the FIRING OF A PISTOL CLOSE TO HIS HEAD,

and supposing himself to have been shot, he jumped from his bed and rushed from his room to the kitchen, where a lighted candle was standing on a table. While running toward the kitchen he heard a second shot fired, and on reaching the kitchen door

A MOST SHOCKING SCENE

presented itself to his gaze. Mrs Butler was just falling to the floor, with the sulphury smoke of gunpowder encircling her head, and her life blood spouting from a pistol shot wound through her brain. Mr. Butler immediately rushed to the street door, holding his head with both hands (believing himself to have been shot there), and in tones that were heard all over the town. Within a few seconds several gentlemen reached the scene of the awful tragedy, Mr. W. H. Ball, jeweler of this place, being the first to enter the chamber of death. He found Mrs Butler lying at full length on the floor apparently quite dead, with her right hand almost touching the which lay near her, while the crimson tide of life was fast ebbing from her wound and spreading over the floor. On raising her head, however, Mr. Ball found her still alive and faintly breathing, but she was beyond the reach of medical aid, and at about 5 o'clock this morning—seven hours after the fatal shot was fired—winged its flight to the great unknown world beyond the dark river. Mr. Butler, on being examined by Mr. S. G. Cobb and others, a few seconds after the shooting, was found to have narrowly escaped instant death. The shot fired at him had passed through both his over and under shirt directly over his heart, but had not touched his body. About this time the fumes of burning cotton were discovered issuing from Mr. Butler's bedroom, and on examination the bedspread was found on fire. The ball fired at Mr. Butler had passed through the bedspread, two pair of blankets, Mr. Butler's shirts, the edge of a hair mattrass, and then penetrated half an inch into the hard finished plastering on a brick wall, whence it dropped to the floor, a mere flat piece of lead about the size and shape of a ten cent coin.

SHOUTED "OH OH! OH OH!"

FATAL INSTRUMENT OF HER DEATH,

THE SPIRIT OF JULIA BUTLER

THE PISTOL USED

was a small five-shooter belonging to Mr. Butler, which he left at his house over a month ago empty and with no ammunition about the place. How Mrs. Butler got the ammunition and who, if any one, loaded the pistol for her has not yet come to light, though several witnesses were examined by the Coroner's Jury on these points. All the preliminaries of the fatal tragedy are

WRAPPED IN PROFOUND MYSTERY.

Mr. Butler and his wife have lived very unhappily together for about three years, and it is generally thought that their and Mrs. Butler's well known habit of intemperance were the primary causes of the shocking affair of last evening.

Mrs. Butler was a native of Ireland, aged about thirty-four years. She leaves two children by her former husband, Samuel Jones, and two by Mr. Butler who will doubtless faithfully provide for all the little ones so suddenly left upon his charge.

The Coroner's Jury returned a verdict substantially in accordance with the facts as above stated.

Yours etc., CITIZEN.

New Volume.

The Reese River Reveille has entered on its sixteenth volume. With the exception of The Enterprise, it is the oldest paper in Nevada, having been established in 1863. The Reveille is a most excellent little daily and one of our most welcome exchanges.

To be Hung.

LEGISLATION FOR INYO.

Several important bills relating to this county are pending in, or have passed, the Legislature. Wing's Senate bill authorizing the issue of bonds for bridge and building purposes has passed. The Legislative apportionment bill or bills are yet under consideration. Of the two, Pendegast's, which sets us off with Tulare, seems to be the favorite. We would prefer the other, which puts San Bernardino, Inyo and Mono in the same district.

A bill granting a franchise to certain parties to construct a ditch seventy miles in length in this valley, for irrigating and milling purposes, and also one granting the right of way for a narrow gauge railway from here to tide water, (Los Angeles) are pending. A private letter, dated Sacramento, March 4, states that these bills had passed, but we think the writer was in error.

We are unable to give any definite information relative to these two very important measures, for the simple reason that none has reached us. We will say here by way of explanation, that for a number of weeks past the mechanical duties of this office have necessarily occupied pretty much all our time, consequently we could devote none to the usual editorial duty of wading through the detailed legislative reports as they appeared in The Daily Union. But for this we should have carried out our original intention, and given a weekly synopsis of the doings of the Legislature, and particularly all measures affecting this county. The bills alluded to above, should they become laws, will in six months after they are begun to be executed, or even when the time is definitely fixed for a commencement, give business of every class a greater impulse than ten years of the ordinary routine. They may, however, possess some objectionable features in some of their provisions, and that for reason we should like to have published them in full.

LETTER FROM SAN FRANCISCO.

[Correspondence of The Inyo Independent.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4th, 1872.

MESSRS. EDITORS: I wrote at Sacramento, I believe, on the 29th ultimo and soon after started for this city. Have passed from Sacramento towards the San Joaquin river I could see California again, dressed in her beautiful spring suit—grass six inches high, thousands of acres of waving wheat, barley and oats, most wonderful to behold, especially to one just from the cold climate of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. We dash on to Stockton, those monstrous fields ever in view. Messrs. Davisson and Brady, of your section are with us.

SAN FRANCISCO BY GAS LIGHT.

As we stand in Oakland in the night looking across the Bay at San Francisco apparently gradually rising out of the sea and stretching away miles back on the hills, we take in at a glance its monstrous size for so young a city. Its position on the hills throws all of its thousands of gas lights, and other thousands of moving lights in view, altogether giving it the appearance of a vast, "bounding ball" of fire! One has to see it to realize the wondrous beauty of the scene. We cross the Bay and go to the Lick House, Hil Beachy, proprietor. With him there I can vouch for the Lick.

WHAT THEY HAVE TO EAT.

Can you comprehend the fact that there is plenty of new potatoes and all kinds of green vegetables here? It is a magnificent market—nothing in the East can compare with it. After breakfast start out and find many old friends—among them a family named M. V—— from Lafayette, Indiana. It is pleasant to meet friends from our old home. On Sunday in company with a friend take a to Oakland, Brooklyn and Fruitdale. These places should all be called one city. It fairly makes my head swim to look at the never-ending beauties of art and nature to be seen here. I despair of giving even a distant idea of them by any words at my command, and so I shall not even try. Thousands of all nations and styles come over here to pass their Sundays. Of the ladies, my companion remarked: "Some of these look as sweet as angels." "It seems to me," I said, "they can't be ladies; at least, those with the wonderful silken wings and that monstrous bundle on their heads, and in the center a switch or tail growing out."

RUN ACROSS THE BAY

I shall return to the Capital in a day or two, and am thinking seriously of coming out to your country soon, as there is a great deal of inquiry as to its mines and agricultural resources. You may prepare for a rush to your section

Grand Master Pratt's Addess.

Following is Grand Master Pratt's address delivered during the ceremonies of laying the corner stone of the new City Hall in San Francisco, February 22:

Mr. Chairman and Fellow Citizens—The Freemasons of to day are the heirs and representatives of the practical builders of the olden time. They were operative, we are speculative. Venerable with age and enriched by the clustering memories of their labors and achievements, their fame and their art alike have come down to us through the unbroken continuity of many centuries. From a period anterior to the erection of the grand old edifices which still survive to mark both the Orders and the progress of architecture, from the time when Masonry was an operative science purely, we have been accustomed to lay the foundation stones of public edifices; not, however, without discrimination, but such only as were to be devoted to those purposes calculated to advance the general welfare of society.

We have laid the foundation stones of your governmental buildings; and it was fit and proper that we should perform that service, not only because we are the representatives of the early architects and builders, but because Masonry inculcates loyality to the Government, obedience to the laws, and devotion to the peace and good order of society.

We have laid the foundation stones of your educational institutions. It was right and proper that we should render that service, also, for it is one of the great purposes of Freemasonry to impart knowledge and understanding. She teaches her children to be lovers of the arts and sciences, and "more light" is the constant demand and aspiration at every stage of Masonic progress.

We have laid the foundation stones of your public asylums—those edifices which spring from the heart throbs of common humanity; the homes where the afflicted wards of society, the mute the deaf, the insane, the aged, the weary and the indigent, repose in peace and comfort on the charities of the Commonwealth or on individuals. It was appropriate indeed that we should do this, for Masonry teaches with especial emphasis the great lessons of charity, benevolence and brotherly love.

But to-day, in the grand and comprehensive purposes to which this edifice is to be devoted, are combined all the reasons which conspire to render it more fitting and appropriate that we should lay this corner stone with all the ancient rites and ceremonies of our venerable Order.

On this spot shall stand an edifice devoted to Justice, Order and good Government; and within its walls and beneath its lofty dome, through ages let us trust, shall be administered the vast and complicated interests of the queenly city, where Orient and Occident, under the inspiration of a nobler and progressive civilization, and reaching out to each other over continents and across seas, clasp hands to day in fraternal grasp. This building is not for a year, a decade, or an age even, but it is for all the marshalled centuries which are coming forward to meet us from the bosom of the vast and illimitable future.

How great the magnitude of the interests to be here considered and adjusted when the developments of time shall have converted the infancy of to-day into the manhood of a century hence, human fore-sight may not essay to comprehend. For your noble State and thriving city, the future is filled and overflowing with marvelous promises. The land itself is nature's masterpiece—reserved to be the last and fairest empire of all time. If we are as faithful in its developement as nature has been in its endowment, the realities of a not distant future will surpass the wildest visions of the present. Here shall gather people of every land, clime and condition; the young, the active, the vigorous shall come in pursuit of new enterprises and new industries, in search of fortune or adventure, or for the gratification of personal ambition. Here the wealthy shall come in search of health and enjoyment, and here the tourists from every land and the disciples of all learning, shall linger to impart their rich stores of thought and knowledge. Here schools and colleges shall be multiplied and richly endowed, and philosophy and religion shall revive and flourish in unwonted splendor. Here political economy and the science of government shall attain perfection; here poesy and eloquence shall find their home; here the arts shall cluster and the sciences shall flourish.

And when the cultivated, happy and contented millions of another age shall stand where thousands only find their homes to-day, may the splendid structure whose corner-stone we lay to-day remain unshaken, to mock the ravages of time. Then, as in our day, within its walls shall be assembled the Municipal authorities, to administer the affairs of a mighty city, to frame and to mould its internal policy, to guide and direct its expansion and adornment, to control its educational interests and disburse its charities; and here in solemn judgment the Courts of the land shall sit, to do exact and equal justice unto all.

These, Mr. Chairman, in addition to a custom older than civilization itself, are the considerations which render it peculiarly fit that we should lay this corner-stone with all our ancient rites and ceremonies; and in behalf of the Grand Lodge, and in the name of Freemasons wherever dispersed, with pride and pleasure I accept your invitation.

Our Thanks

Are due Senator Wing and Assemblyman Whiting for a number of important public documents, received during the past three weeks. Also, to Messrs. Bacon and Connolly, of the Assembly, for similar favors.

CARD.

LONE PINE, March 9, 1872.

EDITORS INYO INDEPENDENT: Gentlemen:—I have never in my life experienced a greater pleasure than I now do to-day in rendering a slight tribute to merit. I beg, therefore, to tell you that for a long time I was afflicted with that dreadful enemy of mankind—the TAPE WORM—which of late made me so sick that I was unable to stand at work in the Eclipse mines; and having heard of the success of Dr. P. G. Gelcich, of Lone Pine, in treating almost any kind of disease, I concluded to come here and consult him, and I bless the moment I done so, for, with 24 hours of his treatment, the monster, thirty feet in length, was expelled, body and head, and without difficulty. It can now be seen, preserved in alcohol, at the Inyo Drug store in this place. I shall be very much obliged to you, Messrs. Editors, if you will publish this in your estimable paper, so that my friends in White Pine and other places in California and Nevada may know of my great deliverance and consequent happiness, and also, to make them acquainted with the name of Dr. P. G. Gelcich as my benefactor, and as a true friend of suffering humanity.

Respectfully your most obedient servant,

n9t3 THOMAS POLKINGHORNE.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

 All advertisements, to insure insertion in these columns, must be handed in on or before 2 o'clock P. M., Friday.

Col. Whipple as a Matadore.

One night, but a few days since, a wild Spanish cow got into Col. Whipple's garden. He did not want her there, at all, and went with his dog to try and prevail on her to leave. She wouldn't; he prevailed on; not much; and as the garden was not large enough for all three, it was the Col. and the dog that left. After duly considering the situation, it was decided in about two seconds, to give her till morning to consider before attempting positive coercion. Morning came, and she was still there, and as the Col. was anxious to compromise the matter, he took his double-barreled shot gun and opened negotiations at once by giving her one charge. She returned it with some extra snorts thrown in; both changed their positions, very suddenly, to some bushes and small trees, there being no appreciable difference in the time of reaching them, but the difference was about six inches in the Col.'s favor, not counting his coat tail. The Col. was vexed somewhat, and punched her in the head with the butt end of his gun until he could widen the distance far enough to give her the other barrel, which he did soon after reaching some other trees, but to no purpose. Things didn't have a cheerful aspect for the Col. at all about this time. The trees were small, and just far enough apart to allow the infuriated brute to get her sharp horns between them. It was the last ditch for the Col., and he used the butt of his gun vigorously for about a minute, when another party came to the rescue and shot the cow dead. The Col. is a brave man, and has been through the wars, but no hour he ever passed, he says, in running rebel batteries on the Mississippi was ever half as long as that last minute he faced that bleeding, maddened brute. We are glad to state that he received no injury of moment, although it was a very close call.

A Great Saving in the Cost of Reducing Cerro Gordo Ores.

We understand that the last thirteen hundred bars of bullion reduced at Beaudry's furnace, and the last twelve hundred bars of bullion reduced at the Swansea furnace, were smelted without using any slag. The raw ores were run through the blast furnaces with as good or better results than if they had been first reduced to slag. Mr. Darrah, the foreman at Swansea, says that he considers the day for galamadores as gone by, and that all kinds of ores can be worked raw in the blast furnaces with better results than if first run into slag in the galamadores. This will give a great impetus to mining in Cerro Gordo, as the saving in wood alone will be at least $50 per day at each furnace.

To Arrive and Departed.

Our old friend J. Earl will form part of the cargo on the next Southern stage, due to-day. Our Junior, who has been detained by sickness in Virginia City for a number of days, is invoiced for the next stage from the North. Both of these gentlemen come back with greatly enlarged views of things in general, and a stock of general knowledge that ought to last them all Summer. They are none the less welcome, however. Among the departed we may note that of one old gentlemen whose name we can't afford to furnish type and ink to print; gone to Los Angeles on a visit, or as a visitation, we don't say which. Should he conclude to remain there, we are sure the grief here will not be overpowering. In fact, he might have gone sooner so far as that is concerned.

Tape Worms.

As there are many persons throughout the country afflicted with these terrible "animals," tape worms, we take pleasure in calling attention to Mr. Polkinghorne's card published in another column, wherein he sets forth his happy deliverance of one of those monsters through the skillful treatment of the accomplished physician Dr. P. G. Gelcich, of Lone Pine. Mr. Polkinghorne's numerous friends will rejoice with him in his fortunate relief.

A Big Run.

Beaudry's works commenced running February 1, at 3 P. M., and stopped March 2, at 7 A. M., making 29½ days running time, during which 3,400 bars of bullion were run out weighing 282,200 pounds, or 141-1:2,000 tons. The last thirteen days were run on raw ores entirely; that is, without using slag. This run averages 115 bars per day. Mr. Beaudry expected to start up his works again on the 14th instant.

A Good Move.

Sheriff Mulkey gives notice that he will accompany Assessor Dillon in his rounds after the first of April, for the purpose of collecting taxes upon movable property and poll taxes, when assessed. We doubt whether this move will result much to our worthy Sheriff's pecuniary benefit, but it shows a commendable desire to do his duty. The object of the notice is to give every one a chance to be prepared, and it means business.

Chance for Bargains.

The Loomis Bros., of Lone Pine, are trying to close out their extensive stock and variety of goods, and have accordingly adopted a strictly cash system and a consequent material reduction in prices. Parties sending orders per stage can rely upon having them filled precisely according to specifications. See what they have to say in their new advertisement Carpentering.

Johnny Heckel, who has peregrinated all over the United States, and some parts of New Jersey, in the past few months, has finally settled down in Lone Pine and opened a joiner's shop. Johnny can do as much work in his line in a given time, and do it as well and cheerfully, as anybody of our acquaintance. See his "ad."

Promoted.

Our old friend Dr. P. G. Gelcich, now that he has an immediate interest in the welfare of the rising generation, has been promoted to School Trustee and Clerk in Lone Pine School District, vice A. B. Elder, resigned. Doctor, we'll go snucks with you on the honors and emoluments of those offices.

Pic-Nicking.

A party of ladies and gentlemen, marshalled by Charley Begole, the leading spirit of such enterprises, went out from Lone Pine on a grand pic-nic, horseback excursion. Can't say for certain, but there's never a doubt but that they had a gay time.

For Clark District.

A party of gentlemen from Lone Pine consisting of Messrs. Dan Williams, W. T. Grant, Dr. Marriott and Kit Johnson, representatives of the law, science, commerce and the fine arts, were to start a few days since for Clark district. These are the sort of men to build up a new country.

Road Completed.

Mr. A. Montgomery completed his contract of cutting Messrs. Darrah & Mear's new grade between Upper and Lower Cerro Gordo some two weeks ago, since which time the road, which is excellent, has been traveled by heavy teams.

Snail Oil.

Said a man the other day to Al. Johnson: "The reason Bannett's horse beat the sorrel filly, Jane, was because she was doped, sir." "Yes, certainly," said Johnson, "she was doped with snail oil."

Doing the Right Thing.

Messrs. Welch & Stevens, tinners, advertise that they are going to do the tin and copper trade here, if fair prices, good workmanship and accommodating spirit will conduce to that end. They mean what they say.

Bullion Shipment.

On the 11th of March there were shipped from Lida district ore, from the mill of Hiskey & Walker, Deep Springs four bars of bullion, weighing 1,[illegible]00 ounces, and valued at $1,800.

The Weather

Has been quite cool with frosty nights during the past week, and as many peach and other fruit trees are in full bloom the chances are some of them have been nipped.

Save Costs.

We have just printed a large number of blank Tax and License receipts, and mention the fact to give delinquents of both classes a hint to attend to these matters and save costs of suit.

The County Court

Meets Monday next, March 18. A Grand Jury meets, also, on that day.

Dramatic Assault.

The late assault upon Queen Victoria by the crazy youth O'Connor, as reported by the telegraph, partook of the dramatic, tragic and serio-comic, combined. As the Queen's carriage stopped at the gate of Buckingham Palace, this demented lad, only about 20 years of age, having climbed over an iron fence ten feet high, rushed forward with an old, rusty, broken pistol, empty at that, smote her lightly across the breast, and with its formidable muzzle pointed at her head, he struck a dramatic attitude and held before her astonished vision a broad, open document or petition, granting full amnesty to all incarcerated Fenians, exclaiming in a tragically husky voice, "Sign or die!" He was immediately, however, made to adjourn sine die, by Prince Arthur, who summarily knocked the ambitious youngster down. John Brown, her Majesty's groom, whose soul was marching on—horseback—just behind the carriage, also charged to the rescue, collared the assailant, took his old pistol away and sent him to the calaboose. When brought before the Court, O'Connor rose to explain, and said his only design in the matter was to frighten the Queen into doing justice to Ireland. All his explanations of the matter, however, simply prove that he was a lunatic on the subject, and really quite a dangerous one at that, for had his erratic fancy been a little more strongly drawn, he might have used a more formidable and effective weapon.

Small-pox in Virginia.

One case of small-pox is reported in Virginia City.

The United States Army.

The Army Register for 1872, which will soon be published, contains a list of all the officers of the United States army. The full number of officers authorized by law is 2,261, but the names of only 2,079 are now borne on the rolls, so that there are 182 vacancies. Of the vacancies the most important are a Colonel in the Adjutant General's Department, three Colonels in the Quartermaster General's Department, one Brigadier General (Paymaster General) in the Pay Department, a Colonel of Engineers, a Colonel of Ordnance and a Chief Medical Purveyor. There are now thirteen general officers of the army, to-wit: General Sherman, Lieutenant General Sheridan, Major Generals Meade, Hancock and Schofield, and Brigadier Generals McDowell, Cooke, Pope, Howard Terry, Ord, Canby and Augur. These Generals are named in their order of seniority, there being three Major Generals and eight Brigadiers. By existing laws it is provided that no promotions are to be made to the rank of Brigadier until the number of that rank is reduced below six.

Arizona News.

The Prescott Miner, of February 24, gives the following:

At Mineral Park Camp, where are congregated nearly five hundred miners, there was not, on the 11th ultimo, one day's rations of anything except wheat and corn in the berry, which was intended for horse feed. The Indians, who are also destitute of food, are stealing and running off stock, and threatening to attack the town. Six weeks have elapsed since any merchandise has reached Hardyville or Fort Mojave, and a Miner correspondent from Mineral Park says that starvation stares them in the face. Parties had left for this city, Prescott and Pioche for supplies. Several wagon loads of supplies have left here for that region this week, which, it is hoped, will reach the destitute miners by the 15th or 20th. On the other hand, from the Bradshaw mines we have the most encouraging reports. The marvelous richness of the Tiger and Lorena lodes is the subject of much comment, and it is claimed that they are the richest mines in the world. Parties in the Hualapai District feel certain of the early establishment of a daily mail to Los Angeles and Prescott has hopes that the telegraph will soon be exteeded to that city.

A Sweeping Divorce Law.

An exchange says that a section in the civil code of California is so clumsily worded by the Revision Commissioners as to constitute a very sweeping divorce law. It reads: "All marriages of white persons, and negroes or mulattoes are illegal and void." The Indians and Heathen Chinee are the only persons legally married according to the code.—Eureka Sentinel.

Softening of the Brain.

Professional men, active business men, especially those who eat a great deal and drink liquors largely, are the persons who are most likely to die of softening of the brain. It is almost impossible for any man who lives a sober, temperate life, combined with moderate exercise of the brain and body, to have this most hopeless of all maladies.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Bullion.

Austin exported bullion last month to the amount of $39,278 40.

—A countryman strolling through New London recently, hand in hand with his Phillis, impatient to visit the circus, exclaimed on seeing a bunch of bananas suspended in front of one of the fruit stores: "I'll be mowed if them ain't the biggest beans I ever seen, Sophrony."

—Thomas Scott is reported to receive $150,000 a year as the sum of his united salaries from the railroads which center in him.

—An Indianopolis paper has this singular announcement: "G. Lee, of The Commercial, has gone south for the benefit of his wife's health."

—It is said that the subject on which Horace Greeley is to lecture at Atlanta is "The proper time to set out bee trees."

—All Western trains, except George Francis, are stopped by the weather.

SQUIBLETS.

—When is a skein of thread like the root of an oak? When it is full of knots.

—A statue of the late Admiral Farragut is to be erected in Farragut Square, Washington.

—The new slang phrase is from Dundreary, "It's one of those things no fellah can find out."

—Fourteen per cent of our population above the age of ten cannot write, including Horace Greeley.

—An Indiana youngster mischievously set the family piano on fire. By playing on it vigorously the fire was extinguished.

—I caught her softly by the arm; my gentle, black-eyed Kate; she squealed, "Let go, you naughty man; you hurt my vaccinate."

—"Suicide in the second degree" is what they call it in Kansas when a woman hangs herself and the rope breaks.

—A correspondent writes to The Baltimore Sun "that he takes no stock in the 'new woman's club.' He says that the 'old woman's club is enough for him, and frequently almost too much."

—Out West the synonym for "retiring" is "Colfaxing." Parents no longer admonish their children that "it is time to go to bed," but tenderly observe, "My darlings, it is time you Colfaxed."

—A Louisiana Sheriff, who was deputed to execute a writ of seizure upon 400 acres of land, took actual possession by getting down on all fours, hog fashion, and traveling around the boundary lines of the whole tract.

—At a leap year party in Atlanta, Georgia, the young ladies showed their manliness by having the following mottoes in conspicuous places: "We mean business," "Now is your chance," "Waiting is tedious."

—Johnny's mother reached for him with her slipper, the other evening, for hooking the jelly, and after dusting the portion of his pantaloons that he sits on, was surprised to see him laugh over it, and demanded the cause, "I was thinking how I fooled you; it was Carry who hooked the jelly."

"Now I've Got Her."

Parson Welsh was the Congregational minister at Amesbury, Massachusetts, two or three generations ago. On one occasion he was called upon to marry a rustic couple. According to his custom he began with "Please join your right hands." Thereupon the groom, with his right hand takes the bride's left. "Please join your right hands." The groom, a little confused, lets go his grasp, and with his left hand takes the bride's right. "Your right hands, please join your right hands!" The groom thinks a moment, lets go his grasp again, and turning around, seizes the bride with both hands, her right with his left, her left with his right, and exclaims "Now I've got her!"

Syrup of Coffee.

This preparation is of great use to those who have long journeys to make. Take half a pound of the best ground coffee; put it into a sauce pan, containing three pints of water, and boil it down to one pint. Cool the liquor, put it into another saucepan, well scoured, and boil it again. As it boils, add white sugar enough to give it the consistency of syrup. Take it from the fire, and when it is cold put it into a bottle and seal. When traveling, if you wish for a good cup of coffee, you have only to put two teaspoonfuls of the syrup into an ordinary coffee pot, and fill it with boiling water. Add milk to taste, if you can get it.

Closing Cracks in Stoves.

It may be convenient to know a ready method of closing cracks, which are not uncommon in cast iron stoves; and we are assured the following recipe is reliable: Good wood ashes to be sifted through a fine sieve, to which is added the same quantity of clay, finely pulverized, together with a little salt. The mixture is to be moistened with water enough to make a paste, and the crack of the stove filled with it. This cement does not peel off or break away, and assumes an extreme degree of hardness after being heated. The stove must be cool when the application is made. The same substance may be used in setting the plates of a stove, or in fitting stove-pipes, serving to render all the joints perfectly tight.

THE LONGING.

FROM SCHILLER.

Heavy vapors coldly hover,
Round the vale I cannot flee;
Outlet could I but discover,
Blessed were escape to me!
Ever green in fair dominion,
Yonder hill-top I survey;
Thither, could I find the pinion,
Thither would I wing my way!

Hark! I hear the music ringing—
Harmonies of heavenly calm,
And the gentle winds are bringing,
Breathing—bringing down the balm.
Yonder, fruits are golden glowing,
Beckoning from the leafy shade
And the blooms that there are blowing,
Never doth the winter fade.

Beautiful must life be yonder,
Suns eternal there to see,
Airs that on the mountain wander,
Oh, how healing they must be!
Yet before me rolls a river—
Roaringly its waters roll;
And its waves that roll forever,
Send a horror to my soul.

On the surge a boat is tossing;
But, alas! the pilot fails
Enter—enter, dare the crossing—
Breath spiritual fills the sails!
Guarantees no grounds concede thee;
Safety in believing dwells;
Only miracle can lead thee
To the land of Miracles!

The Brooklyn Bridge.

[From The Coal and Iron Record.]

Work on the New York end of the Brooklyn bridge, at the foot of Roosevelt street, is advancing very satisfactorily, under the superintendence of Colonel Paine and his associate engineers. The masonry of the tower, which was begun about the 1st of December, has reached a height of sixteen feet, and the workmen are now laying the eighth course. At present two courses are laid every week. The superficial area of the first course is nine thousand square feet. The granite is brought from Maine by schooners and unloaded at Red Hook, where the blocks are assorted according to size.

About one hundred and forty men are employed in the work of excavating, but not more than half the number at the same time, as the work is carried forward night and day. The mud and sand are removed at the rate of about four hundred cubic yards a day. Between five thousand and six thousand cubic yards have already been removed, leaving about twenty thousand yet to be taken from the bed of the river. Two dredges are made use of, which empty their loads as fast as raised into broad cars, which are then run on iron tracks to the side of the caisson, and emptied into barges. These barges convey their freight to the Brooklyn tower, where the sand is used in making mortar.

When a stratum of fine sand is reached it is forced to the top of the caisson by atmospheric pressure through siphon pipes, of which there are about forty, each pipe having a capacity of a hundred yards a day. This sand is wheeled away in barrows as rapidly as forced up, to be used in making mortar for the masonry.

The caisson has been sinking at the rate of from six to nine inches a day, the latter being the present rate. It is now about thirty-four feet from the bottom, which it is expected to touch in about two months.

Work on the coffer dam is gradually continued to correspond with the progress of the mason work. About fifty men are now employed on the caisson. Thirteen air engines are in positions for supplying with air the workman engaged in excavating, but only a part are used at once, the pressure being regulated in a great measure by the rise and fall of the tide. There are three derricks for moving the stone, worked by two engines, two more engines for the dredges, and two small engines for running the mud cars.

Eureka and Palisade Railroad.

[From The Eureka Sentinel.]

We stated in an item the other day that active operations would probably commence on the Eureka and Palisade Railroad by the first of next month. Knowing something of pending negotiations and the plans of the officers of the company, we are sanguine that a considerable portion of the work will be completed the present season. We are not at liberty to make public all we know on the subject, but may be permitted to say, perhaps, without committing any breach of confidence, that the Directors of the Central Pacific Railroad Company are in full sympathy with the project and hold themselves in readiness at any moment to extend material and substantial aid to the enterprise. They recognize this as the most practicable and profitable route to supply the increasing trade of Southeastern Nevada, including Northern Arizona, and hence their interest in the premises. It has been satisfactorily demonstrated by reliable figures, that the enterprise will pay a handsome profit on every dollar that the road will cost. Nor this alone. Of late there is a strong tendency for the trade of Pioche and other districts further to the southward to be diverted to the East via the Utah Central and Union Pacific. Already much of the bullion, merchandise and machinery of those sections pass over this route. The Salt Lake merchants, who receive their goods direct from the East, are beginning to establish intimate trade relations with Pioche, Clark, Sacramento, Tem Pinte and other districts in the same direction. Within the last few weeks we notice that a Salt Lake forwarding house has established a freight line to Pioche and the surrounding country. These things of course have a tendency to lessen the receipts of the Central and it is this, we imagine, which has induced the directors of that company to manifest such a lively interest in the success of our road. With a railroad completed to Eureka (and projected still further south) the carrying business of all the vast and rich mineral country extending to and beyond the Colorado river, would be retained to the Central. It is therefore to the interest of that company to assist in the construction of the Eureka line. Our road will be built.

Iron Items.

[From The Coal and Iron Record.]

Illinois, as a rail-producing State, is second only to Pennsylvania.

Michigan made nearly 100,000 tons of pig metal last year against 900 tons in 1854.

Last year Missouri mined 268,800 tons of iron ore, and Michigan 910,984 tons.

The manufacture of rails in this country has just doubled in the last six years.

The Missouri ore companies are prepared to put 500,000 tons of ore in the market this year.

Nearly one-third of the pig metal produced in the United States is made from Michigan ore.

About 3,500 tons of "black ore" are mined in Clay county, Indiana, every day, part of which is sent to St. Louis.

One mill in Wisconsin places that State fifth on the list of rail producing States. It made 57,774 tons last year.

Five years ago Illinois did not produce a ton of pig metal. Last year she made 65,000 tons.

There is an extraordinary furnace at Youngstown, Pennsylvania, with a 16-foot boshstock 60 feet high, which yields an average of 60 tons per day, and sometimes reaches 80 tons, all as a result of good management.

The Pilot Knob Company mined the past twelve months 25,000 tons of iron ore, and consumed 12,000 tons at their own furnaces; and there is now on the river bank, for shipment elsewhere, over 12,000 tons.

At Hull, in Canada, there is a mine of black magnetic iron ore, from which large shipments are made to Cleveland, Ohio, where it is mixed with the harder ores from Lake Superior. The enterprise is said to be a profitable one, and is gaining in favor with each shipment of ore.

The Iron Mountain Company have mined the past year 169,796 tons of ore; shipped from the mountain 156,310 tons; there were shipped to Carondelet for reduction, for the year, 56,566 1-3 tons of ore; they shipped by the Ohio river 92,530 tons, and by rail 35,951 tons of ore. This company produced at their furnaces, for the year 1871, 6,699 tons of pig metal, the production in the month of April for that year greatly exceeding that of any other.

Causes of Death.

Methuselah died of liver complaint. Lot's wife of salt rheum. Absalom fell a wig'im to harysipelas. Goliah died of the stone. Haman of the drop-sy. Nebuchadnezzer of too much vegetable diet, leaving Mrs. N. a grass widow. John Bunyan, troubled by corns, took his pill grimly and progressed. Desdemona also took a pillow. Samson also killed by a pillar. Montgolfier was (s)pilled out of a balloon. Julius Cæsar was (s)killed in war. John Rogers died of an overdone steak. Romeo died of heart disease. Artemus Ward was joked to death.

—To lawyers—Can you make a blind man liable for his bill, if it is payable at sight?

Recaptured.

On the 20th ultimo five white men and two Chinamen escaped from the Idaho Penitentiary. They made a rush on the two guards, locked them in a cell and taking some blankets and about two day's provisions, took to the mountains. The snow being deep, however, they were soon overhauled by Sheriff McClintock, of Boise county, and all but one were recaptured. Those who escaped were John Black Al Priest, Cook, French, an Owyhee prisoner, and two Chinamen. Black had his feet so badly frozen while wandering about through the snow that amputation, it is thought, will be necessary.

Cure of Rheumatism in Horses.

The Scientific American prints the note from a correspondent: "I give you the following receipt for the cure of rheumatism in horses; and I will preface it by saying that I am indebted to an Englishman, Mr. R. Jackson, for the same; also that I have used the same on my horse, whose age is fifteen, with perfect success—driving him daily in all sorts of weather, rain or snow. The recipe is: Crude coal oil, one pint; strong vinegar, one half pint; turpentine one half pint—mixed and well shaken. To be rubbed morning and night.

Thrilling Affair on the Gila.

The Tucson, (Arizona) Citizen, states that on the 7th of March a party of Americans became involved in a shooting affray with Mexicans, in which two men, named James Bodel and Pancha Quadra, were killed, Bodel being first mortally wounded by Quadra, after which the latter was shot within twenty feet of his own house. The American party then went to Sanford, determined to kill one Manuel Reyes and a few more well known desperadoes, if found. Reyes took refuge in a house which, after all the other inmates had been allowed to escape, was blown up, and, amid general shooting, Reyes was killed. A few hours previous to this a young Mexican, named Aguilar, was shot from his horse and killed. An American named Perry, and several Mexicans were wounded. A house was destroyed, a horse killed, and other damage done. The origin of the difficulty, or the full details are not given in The Citizen, though it suggests that as the affray was between Americans and Mexicans, it may be ascribed to prejudice of race.

New Postal Regulations on Newspapers.

Postmaster General Cresswell has directed that the new regulations on newspapers sent by mail be strictly enforced. No name or memorandum can be made on a newspaper inside the wrapper on which the address is written. It is barely permissible to mark an article with pen or pencil. More than this subjects the paper to letter postage, and the violator of the law to a fine. No printed card, handbill or advertisement, no written notice, letter or slip of any kind whatever must be folded in the paper. To do any of these things is to violate the law. Printed slips pasted on the outside, or folded in papers and periodicals, soliciting notices, are also violations of the law. Senders of transient papers can send bundles of printed matter by weight on transient postage charges, but must not send any written matter in such bundles.

Another Outbreak.

Nine of the State Prison convicts confined in the county jail at Carson, Nevada, raised a heavy flagstone in the jail and dug their way out, early Monday morning, March 11. All of these prisoners were concerned in the Nevada State Prison outbreak of September last, and had just been tried, but not yet sentenced, for that outbreak. Four of them, viz. Russel, Ryan, Flynn and Carter, have since been recaptured. The others are yet at large, among whom is Burke, who had such a rough experience in this section after the September outbreak. The Governor has offered $200 reward each, and the Sheriff of Ormsby offers $100 more, cash, for the capture of Burke and Clifford. Roth, Willis and Parsons are the names of the others yet at large.

New Publisher.

Our old friend Alf. Doten, long Junior editor of The Gold Hill Daily News, has purchased that paper from the widow of the late Phillip Lynch The News is among our most valued exchanges, and we heartily congratulate the new proprietor in his good fortune.

The Black Hills.

Yesterday Mr. McAntee, alias "The Stranger," arrived in this city from the Black Hills, where report has it gold has been discovered in great quantities. He confirms all the statements heretofore made concerning the richness of the deposits, and has come here with the intention of organizing a company to prospect and work a certain canyon, which he claims to be very rich in the precious mineral. He brought down with him several pounds of quartz, which look as though they would assay very big, and which he says were knocked off from the face of the hill by a pick. If what Mr. AcAntee says is true there is no doubt but any company that may be formed will profit by the investment. Already he says expeditions are being formed in Sioux City, Whetstone and other up country towns, and the prospect is favorable for a rush there next Spring.

The Sioux City Journal of Wednesday has the following in reference to the discoveries in the Hills: "Up to this time the Government has refused protection to all parties seeking to penetrate the Black Hills, and the Indians have evinced a hostility to the inroads of the white race more persistent than is usual; but with the Union Pacific road on the one hand, and the early construction of the Northern Pacific on the other, it is thought that the time has come when the coveted section must be wrested from the grasp of the red man, and given over to the developing faculties of the white race."—Omaha Bee, March 1.

LAWS AFFECTING NEWSPAPERS.

L. Harper, publisher of The Mount Vernon (Ohio) Banner, was indicted for mailing his paper to persons without prepaying the postage. The case was tried before Judge Sherman, of the United States District Court. It appeared in proof that during the political campaign of 1871, certain parties gave defendant a list of persons, some three hundred in all, to whom he was to send his paper, the said parties paying the subscription for the papers. In accordance with this arrangement the papers were sent as per order, and the same as to regular subscribers, without prepayment of postage. Some of the persons to whom these papers were addressed declined to take them from the postoffice, or otherwise ratify the subscription that had been volunteered for them. The defendant was found guilty and fined $50 for violating Sec. 41 of the Act of March 3, 1863, which in effect declares it unlawful to mail any publication to any person other than a bona fide subscriber without prepaying the postage. For every such offence the publisher or sender is liable to a fine of fifty dollars. The Judge said in reviewing this case: "I would not wish it to be understood that the terms employed by the Act, to wit: 'bona fide and regular subscribers' were to be construed so strictly as only to embrace persons who, by their own hand, have made subscriptions; but it is quite plain that no one can be a subscriber unless he has subscribed himself, or has subsequently in some sufficient way, ratified the subscription that has been volunteered to him." He says further: "In such a case, when a party not yet authorized desires to subscribe and have the paper sent to some other party, the only way to keep within the law is to prepay the postage until the person to whom the paper is sent signifies in some unequivocal manner that he accepted the subscription made for his benefit." He also stated that "The Postoffice laws and regulations are framed with special reference in encouraging and facilitating the transmission of newspapers between publisher and subscriber."

We do not undertake to dispute the correctness of this rendering of the law, but do undertake to say that the law thus rendered is anything else than liberal or even just towards newspapers, especially taken in connection with the new order issued by Postmaster General Cresswell, which among other things prohibits publishers from inclosing any printed slip or notification whatever, though relating exclusively to matters connected with the publication of the paper. To impose an additional three cents tax upon publishers for every notice to subscribers of expiration of subscription, indebtedness and similar matters of mutual interest to publisher and subscriber, is neither liberal nor just. The subscriber has already paid the United States Government for the transmission of his paper, which ought to include any printed slip or supplement the contents of which pertain exclusively to the paper itself, just the same as though the matter formed part of the regular columns. Such enclosed slips rarely or never bring the weight up to or above the contract figure upon which postage has been paid. The Government stipulates with publishers to transmit a certain weight of printed matter to subscribers for a fixed consideration. So long as the matter offered for transmission does not exceed the stipulated weight, and includes only printed matter legitimately pertaining to the paper, whose business is it whether it is all one sheet or more? Why should newspaper publishers be put to the extra expense and unnecessary trouble of addressing written and postage paid communications when the same business can be as well done the other way and defraud no one? No class of business men contribute more in direct payments to the postal service, and indirectly more in its support than do publishers, and any law circumscribing their sphere by such unnecessary exactions is not liberal nor strictly just.

When a publisher has received his subscription price for his paper it is no part of his business to care or enquire whether the address given is that of the person ordering the paper or some one else. The address constitutes a bona fide subscriber so far as the publisher is concerned, and he should not be held for the postage unless he persists in mailing the paper after having been notified, as the law provides, that the paper has been refused.

To Letter Writers.

A circular has been issued from the Postoffice Department requiring persons to name the county, as well as town and State, in addressing their letters. This, it is said, will insure certainty of delivery and keep thousands of letters out of the Dead Letter Office.

Useful Law Points.

We clip the following "law points" from an exchange, thinking they may useful to some of our readers. The part in reference to Sunday-contracts and notes, however, does not hold good in this State according to a late decision of the Supreme Court. Or in other words, a contract made on Sunday is as good as upon any other day in the week:

A note by a minor is void.

A note on Sunday is void.

It is a fraud to conceal a fraud.

Ignorance of the law excuses no one.

Notes bear interest only when so stated.

A contract made with a lunatic is void.

The law compels no one to do impossibilities.

An agreement without any consideration is void.

Contracts made on Sunday cannot be enforced.

Principals are responsible for the acts of agents.

Signatures made with a lead pencil are good in law.

A receipt for money paid is not legally conclusive.

The acts of one partner in the firm binds all the others.

It is not legally necessary to say on a note "for value received."

If a note be lost or stolen, it does not release the maker; he must pay it.

Each individual in partnership is responsible for the whole amount of the debts of the firm.

A note obtained by fraud, or from a person in a state of intoxication, cannot be collected.

"Gen." Sutter Asks For Land.

The telegraph informs us that Gen. Sutter is asking Congress for a big land grant, and he will, no doubt, find plenty to say he should have it. If there is a man in California who has received more than his deserts, that man is Sutter. Naturally aristocratic, and naturally "soft," he fell an easy prey to the various sharpers, with high sounding titles, who came at an early day to California. He spent large sums of money getting tight with these sharpers, and the sharpers, in turn, made him and a good many others believe he was doing wonders for the early settlers of the State. It is denied by the old settlers that Sutter ever opened his door to the really needy. Because of his being swindled the State is now providing for his wants. It is a shame. But if the "sharps" must provide him with something to divide around among them, give it in coin, like the State does. Land grants should be played out by this time.—Greene's Land Paper, March 13.

LAND MATTERS.

Congressmen Kendall and Sargent on Proving Up—Commissioner Drummond's Reply.

Relative to the rule of the Land Office requiring personal attendance upon the Registers in proving up preemption claims, involving inconvenience and expense, a prominent farmer of the county wrote to Congressman Kendall, of Nevada, and the correspondence given below has resulted.

In addition to the prospective legislation referred to in the letters, a bill is now pending in Congress to further extend the time of making final proof and payment on claims, urged by the California delegation on the ground of the past impoverishing years of drought. Considered in connection with the probable abundance of this season, it is thought that the bill will become a law and another extension of time granted. However, since the causes mentioned have not affected this particular section, this law is of less import than one abrogating the obnoxious rule, with its attendant inconvenience and confusion of titles.

Following are the letters, fully explaining themselves:

FORTY-SECOND CONGRESS U. S.,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3, 1872.

JOHN A. LANK, Esq., Independence, Inyo Co., Cal.: Dear Sir—Yours of February 10, 1872, received, in which you state inconvenience attendant upon the present rule of the General Land Office, in the matter of personal attendance by pre-emption claimants at the local Land Offices in proving up their claims.

In connection with Mr. Sargent, I brought the matter to the attention of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in a letter addressed to him, and dated 28th February. His reply, dated 1st instant, is just received, and is inclosed herewith.

You will see from the Commissioner's letter that the present rule is in pursuance of law, and that he proposes to modify the same as to the future, by legislation now pending.

When said bill comes up for action it may be possible to have same amended so as to include cases where claims are already initiated; such amendment will, no doubt, be made or attempted.

I will keep the matter in mind, and do what is in my power to insure the desired relief.

Please have the Commissioner's letter published in your papers.

Very truly yours,
C. W. KENDALL.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1, 1872.

HON. C. W. KENDALL, House of Representatives: SIR—I am in receipt of a joint letter from Hon. A. A. Sargent and yourself, dated 28th ultimo, respecting the acquirements of personal attendance at the district offices in making affidavit in pre-emption and homestead cases.

I have the honor to state in reply that the thirteenth section of the Act of September 4, 1841, expressly requires the affidavit to be made before the Receiver or Register. The rule in homestead cases has been made to conform to this statute, as reference in the homestead law is specifically made to the requirements of the pre-emption law in matters of proof.

The necessity of bringing the claimant into direct communication with the officers of the government having charge of the disposal of lands, thereby lessening the chances of fraud, is the basis of the law.

It may be considered, however, that with the larger experience of the last few years the requirement may now be somewhat relaxed, and I have accordingly modified the rule in a bill prepared and submitted to Congress and now pending, for the consolidation of the pre-emption and homestead laws into a single statute "to secure homesteads on the public domain."

Should the bill become a law future cases will be thus provided for. Should a necessity arise for relaxing the present law in closing up cases pending under its operations, the remedy is with Congress.

Very respectfully,
WILLIS DRUMMOND,
Commissioner.

Back Again

Our "Lokleitems" again maketh his bow, after a rest (?) of about six weeks, during which time there was a notable improvement in his department, undoubtedly due to his absence. And then our readers may be thankful that said Lokle has not enough professional ambition to hurt, for they have been saved the outrageous inflictions generally imposed under the guise of "editorial correspondence." On the trip he was "brought to reflect" upon the departed greatness of the Aurora of old Esmeralda; he "societied" with the brilliant ladies and "spun around the block" with the gallus boys of Carson—not forgetting to pay his tribute of respect to the worthy State officials residing at that capital. On the Comstock—his old stamping ground—he circulated in argentiferous depths among the most enormous bodies of wealth ever opened to the hand of man; here, also, he "ran wid de merchine" again, sipped wine in high places and drank gin in others. Thanks to courtesies from the Superintendent, he crossed the Sierras in daylight over the big railroad, that route replete with the darkness of snow-sheds and the gorgeousness of magnificent mountain scenery; experienced an accident, too, "keers off the track," you know. He condoled with many of the "U. P. snowbirds," heard their curses for the "U. P." management and their warm praises of the "C. P." At gay Sacramento he hob-nobbed with the great "powers that be," and with some not so powerful as they might be. "Our delegation" extended him every possible consideration, while the Governor and State officers received his respects. While he profoundly compliments those gentlemen for their great executive ability, he deprecates their judgment for acting under the delusion that the said Lokle was somebody. His sage-dimmed eyes were gladdened with views of the wondrous beauties of California agriculture; (the greeney was liable to get enthusiastic on this subject). He struck San Francisco and was struck with it—with the size of the village, and with its lions and elephants and things. He thought to buy it and concluded to invest his pile, $000.15—in a pocket by the side of a borrowed watch. The fact is, San Francisco is too far from Independence to ever amount to much. But behind a two or three million dollar team he rode to the Cliff, and did other things. Nevertheless, he got back. He actually did; we are sorry for it, and doubtless his readers are in the same boat.

St. Patrick's Day.

The 17th of March was observed at Bishop Creek on the Monday evening following, by a jolly assemblage of dancers, crowding Sneden's Hall. "Calico" and fun were the order of the night, interspersed with good music and an excellent supper at Slinkard's Hotel. The appearance of a specimen or two of the gentlemen's costumes indicate that calico swallow-tails predominated.

Charged With Horse-Stealing.

Richard Opie was arrested and brought before Justice Gunnison on the 17th instant, on a charge of Grand larceny, in having "froze to" somebody else's horse. He was held to appear before the Grand Jury.

COUNTY COURT.

John A. Hannah, Judge.

Court met in regular session Monday, March 18, 1872.

Louis Munzinger was admitted to citizenship.

A Grand Jury, composed of the following citizens, was impanneled: W. G. McCrosky, J. W. Clawson, T. F. R. Connolly, L. M. Payson, A. L. McGee, W. H. Wallis, Ed. Kane, O. Hitchcock, B. Peeler, A. B. Kitchen, H. Warnerfield, A. P. Hitchcock, Watson Bowman, O. Mier and A. Montgomery, Foreman.

After the jury was sworn, his Honor delivered the following very excellent charge:

In the County Court of Inyo County, State of California. Gentlemen of the Grand Jury: The laws of our State command me to charge you as to the nature of the duties which the law requires you to perform. In pursuance of this duty I have to say to you that you must inquire into the case of every person imprisoned in the jail of this county on a criminal charge and not indicted; into the condition and management of the public prison in this county, and into the wilful and corrupt misconduct in office of public officers of every description within the county.

It is your duty to inquire into all public offenses committed or triable within this county, and present the parties guilty of such offenses to this Court, either by presentment or indictment.

The Act of the Legislature of the State of California, entitled "an Act to suppress gaming," approved April 17, 1855, and the several Acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto I now bring to your notice, and state to you that if you find that any persons within this county have violated the provisions of either of those Acts it is your duty, under the law, to present such offenders to this Court.

An Act of the Legislature of the State of California entitled "an Act to suppress houses of ill-fame," approved April 2, 1855, and the several Acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, are still in force. Your attention is called to those Acts, as many citizens complain and allege that houses of this character are kept in both the towns of Independence and Lone Pine, to the great annoyance of respectable families, as well as detrimental to the morals of the younger members of society. Now if you find, upon proper proof, that such is the case, you will spare no pains to ascertain the parties who have so shamelessly violated the provisions of those statutes, in order that you may present them to this Court.

In the investigation of charges which may be brought before you, you will receive none but legal evidence, and the best evidence in degree, to the exclusion of secondary or hearsay evidence. You are not bound to hear evidence for a person charged with having committed an offense, but it is your duty to weigh all the evidence submitted to you. Should you have reason to believe that other evidence, within your reach, will explain away the charge you should order such evidence to be produced, and for that purpose you may require the District Attorney to issue process for the witnesses.

You ought to find an indictment when all the evidence before you, taken together, is such as in your judgment would, if unexplained or uncontradicted, warrant a conviction by the trial jury.

If any juror of this honorable body has reason to believe that a public offense has been committed which is triable within this county, it is his duty to declare the same to his fellow jurors, and their duty to investigate the same.

During your session the District Attorney will assist you in procuring the attendance of witnesses, and will advise you in all matters wherein you may desire such advice. This Court will be pleased to assist you and advise you whenever called upon to do so.

You will remember that each of you shall keep secret whatever he himself, or any other Grand Juror may say, or in what manner Grand Jurors may vote, or any matter that may be brought before you. I mention this to you because I am informed that heretofore in this county Grand Jurors have been in the habit of telling outside parties what had transpired in the Jury Room, and that you may avoid a fault which tends to defeat the ends of justice, and besides, is strictly forbidden by law.

Gentlemen, you will now retire to your room, where, I feel assured, you will duly and wisely consider all matters which may be brought before you, and that you will not let the innocent suffer nor the guilty escape.

The Court then took a recess, pending the action of the Grand Jury, which immediately proceeded to busness. After a session of nearly a week, the Jury submitted the following REPORT.

To the Hon., the County Court of the County of Inyo, State of California:

We, the Grand Jurors for the March term of said County Court, having performed the duty and duly considered all matters submitted to us, respectfully report that in the discharge of our duties we have found four true bills of indictments, and have ignored seven cases.

We herewith submit the report of the county physician, Dr. C. B. White, and having visited the hospital, we find it to be well kept, in a cleanly, wholesome and creditable manner, and the patients therein to be well satisfied with their treatment and care, and rapidly convalescing.

We approve the action of the Hon. Board of Supervisors in effecting this arrangement for the care of the indigent sick, and believe it to be much more efficient and far more economical than any other means within their reach at the present time.

We have visited the county jail, and find that institution to be as cleanly and as well kept as its situation will admit, yet wholly insecure and unsafe for the detention of prisoners, one recently having escaped by means of sawing the entrance door into two parts, carrying off with him some of the county property.

We recommend the Board of Supervisors to procure for the use of the county hand-cuffs and leg-irons, the better to secure the detention of prisoners.

We further find that the county Court House is inadequate and unfit for the purpose for which it is intended, and earnestly recommend that speedy and appropriate measures be employed to furnish good and sufficient county buildings.

We have examined the books of the County Clerk and Auditor, the Treasurer and the Sheriff, as well as our time and ability would permit, yet it is not sufficient nor satisfactory. We therefore recommend that the Hon. Board of Supervisors employ some competent person to thoroughly examine and compare with each other the books and accounts of these offices.

Having now fully discharged our duty, we ask to be discharged.

A. Montgomery,
Foreman.

The Grand Jury.

This body has been in session the greater part of the week, and so far as it appears from the published report, its members have acquitted themselves very well; but there are some things not apparent in that, which show that Grand Jurors may take an oath to perform certain duties under the law and not do it either. This Jury presented a report on Thursday in which was included four presentments of public nuisances. The Court, under the original charge given, and its knowledge of the facts in these cases, refused to receive the report. They were instructed that under the law and evidence they could do no less than bring in indictments on these charges, and were ordered to reconsider. They reconsidered, and without any additional testimony whatever, concluded they were mistaken altogether about there being any nuisances or "social evils" scattered around, and in the next report ignored their former presentments and the whole thing in toto. The only thing singular about it is if the evidence in the first instance justified presentments how could it have done less in the second? If it was not sufficient to justify obeying instructions of the Court, why not have taken additional evidence, particularly when it might have been obtained without going very far outside the jury room. It would have been much better and cheaper to have brought this thing to a test of law at once, instead of dodging it even by presentment, for that plan involved another Grand Jury, and as it now is, another will soon have to be called.

Staging Northward.

The snow across the Esmeralda mountains is rapidly disappearing, notwithstanding the late cold weather. About four miles remain to be crossed upon sleighs, which of itself is somewhat of a novelty to valley folks. There is an unaccountable hitch at Reno, where passengers and mails for Virginia, Carson and all places south are delayed some ten hours, though the through time is good. About the middle of June the Steamboat (V. & T. R. R.) railroad will be completed to Reno, when the Wilson and Ullrick lines will make through connections to the Bay, on schedule time of three days and nights to San Francisco. Too much praise cannot be accorded Johnny Ullrick; he is, without question, a trump and a thorough stage man, as well as a most indefatigable worker. Among other important changes is the building of a new road to Benton, cutting off the rough "Rocky Point" in Blind Springs Valley, and passing near the old Yellow Jacket trail, with a saving of eight miles in distance.

Kearsarge Affairs.

Mr. Crocket, the Commissioner appointed for the purpose by Judge Hoffman, has been in town for a few days taking testimony in regard to the attempted farcical sale of the property some time since, on a petition for the removal of the assignee. The mine and mill will be sold in San Francisco March 25.

Mine Sold.

From Mr. W. J. Brown, of Lida Valley, we learn that Messrs. Hiskey & Walker have just purchased of him the Brown's Hope ledge, in that district, paying therefor $5,000; it is said there is $20,000 worth of ore in sight. There are now some 70 men in the district, mostly from the northward. We hope to be able to give fuller reports from there shortly.

A Galvanized Yankee.

Louis Munzinger having last Monday, in the County Court, sworn that he no longer owed any allegiance to the Kingdom of Bavaria, and being otherwise qualified, was admitted to citizenship, and is now, as he says "a galvanized Yankee," which process gives him all the rights of an American citizen.

The Lake Steamer.

We hear that the work on the steamboat which is to ply on Owens Lake is progressing at a satisfactory rate. The machinery is at Haiwai Meadows, and the boat will be afloat, it is expected, in six weeks. Her dimensions are: length, 90 feet; beam, 20 feet.

Whittekind Ore.

The assay value of the first class ore now being extracted from the Whittekind mine, Cerro Gordo, is 406½ ounces silver per ton, the second class running 180 ounces. The ledge has just been tapped, also, in the new tunnel, but we are not apprised of the value or extent of the ore.

Mixed.

In Judge Hannah's charge to the Grand Jury, a day or two since, he instructed them to "retire to their room," etc., but to his astonishment learned that the "retiring" had to be done by himself. The Court immediately adjourned, leaving the Jury in possession of the only room.

Change of Base.

The military outpost which has for nearly a year held possession of the Palmetto country, has been transferred to Waucoba district, across the Inyo mountains. It now consists of six men under charge of Sargent Mattoon.

Wanted.

Tim. Lewis calls for a number of sheep-shearers, to work on Bishop Creek. See advertisement.

SQUIBLETS.

—A Western bachelor editor inserts marriages under "Melancholy Accidents."

—Don't all speak at once. An Indiana female will give $80,000 to any man that will marry her.

—When a man has "no mind of his own" his wife generally gives him a piece of hers.

—It is said that the number of American books in the British Museum is greater than in any library in the United States.

—The French language has about 32,000 words, the Spanish 30,000, the Italians 35,000, and the English 40,000.

—A prominent citizen of Maine has died insolvent in whose name a hundred thousand acres of timber land stood recorded.

—The present wife of a Buffalonian objects to his keeping the memories of her five predecessors green by wearing five bands of crape on his hat.

—Advice to husbands—Settle as much money on your wife as you can, her second husband—poor fellow!—may not have a sixpence.—Judy.

—Naomi, the daughter of Enoch, was 580 years old when she was married. There's hope for some of you old ladies after all.

—The only place in the world where a young lady is not "missed" is at home. There it is always plain Susan or Bet.

—"Our children will have immense tax on their hands," said a gentleman. "Oh, horrible!" exclaimed an elderly lady, "what a blessing we have nails on ours."

—Footprints on the sands of time—The fires of the last day will melt and congeal those sands, and foot-prints will be seen forever."

—The latest dodge of young ladies who don't want to "obey" in the marriage ceremony, is to repeat in indistinct tones and manner, "love honor and be gay."

—"How many unfortunates have fallen in war!" said a spinster lady to a veteran general, who was a veteran bachelor. "Not half so many, Madam, as have fallen in love," was his testy reply.

—"John," exclaimed Mary, throwing her arms around her brother's neck, "what substitute can there be for the endearments of a sister?" "Well," said John "you see, Sis, that depends on whose sister it is."

—A man with one eye laid a wager with another man that he (the one-eyed person) saw more than the other. The wager was accepted. "You have lost," said the first; "I can see the two eyes in your face, and you can see only one in mine."

—"My hearers," said a hard-shell preacher at a funeral, "I never did kno' enny good of this man. The Lord giv' him hosses, and he run 'em; the Lord giv' him cocks, and he fit 'em; and he'd flip the jack from the bottom kerds."

—Bloggs says he thinks he would make a good Congressman. He received two bills, the other day, with request for immediate payment. One bill he ordered laid on the table, and the other to be read that day six months.

—While a rather affected young lady was confiding to her admirer how ethereal her appetite was, and the sensative delicateness of her organization, the too matter of fact help bawled out, "Say, will ye have yer biled pork and beans now or wait till yer feller's gone?" The "feller" has been gone ever since.

LONE PINE, March 9, 1872.

EDITORS INYO INDEPENDENT: Gentlemen:—I have never in my life experienced a greater pleasure than I now do to-day in rendering a slight tribute to merit. I beg, therefore, to tell you that for a long time I was afflicted with that dreadful enemy of mankind—the TAPE WORM—which of late made me so sick that I was unable to stand at work in the Eclipse mines; and having heard of the success of Dr. P. G. Gelcich, of Lone Pine, in treating almost any kind of disease, I concluded to come here and consult him, and I bless the moment I done so, for, with 24 hours of his treatment, the monster, thirty feet in length, was expelled, body and head, and without difficulty. It can now be seen, preserved in alcohol, at the Inyo Drug Store in this place. I shall be very much obliged to you, Messrs. Editors, if you will publish this in your estimable paper, so that my friends in White Pine and other places in California and Nevada may know of my great deliverance and consequent happiness, and also, to make them acquainted with the name of Dr. P. G. Gelcich as my benefactor, and as a true friend of suffering humanity.

Respectfully your most obedient servant,

A Demoralized Printing Office.

Between 2 and 3 o'clock Tuesday morning last (March 26), the inhabitants of this region experienced one of the most terror striking, awe inspiring sensations that ever falls to the lot of mortal man—an earthquake—an earthquake in all its mighty power! The solid earth was loosened from its very foundations, and heaved and tossed as if in the throes of a terrible agony. The Mighty Power beneath threw it up and down, hither and yon as a strong man might toss a helpless babe. No words of ours can begin to portray the terrors of that dread moment, nor the great horror that fell upon every living thing! It was a terrible scene when all were so rudely awakened from deep slumber to face death in its most terrifying form. Men whose cheeks would never blanche in ordinary dangers cried out in a very agony of terror, women screamed as they clasped their crying little ones, cattle lowed, horses broke from their fastenings and huddled together, dogs howled, chickens left their roosts and staggered about in the darkness in their wild efforts to escape a danger that came they knew not whence. Strong wooden houses bounded up and down and rolled to and fro like ships in a heavy seaway, crockery smashed and furniture danced about the floors, chimneys dropped instantly to the ground, stone and adobe houses crumbled and went to earth like piles of sand, burying the miserable occupants in the ruins, and the whole world was in its last convulsions! It would fill volumes to detail all the wonders of those few seconds of time—the wondrous phenomena of nature, the dire calamities, the personal experiences, miraculous escapes and interesting incidents, but for the present we are forced to forego the greater part of these things, and give some main facts, the most of which at the time or subsequently came under our own observation.

All who were not caught in the falling ruins were soon in the streets, and immediately began to hunt out the Extent of the Damage.

The quakings and rumblings were almost incessant, but as a rule they amounted to nothing more than mere tremors, though every few moments a sharp, crackling shock would come, startling everybody as only an earthquake can—but the first, so far, was the only one entailing loss of life or destruction to property, which, Heaven knows, was sufficient. In this place it was soon ascertained that every adobe, brick or stone building in town was wholly or partially destroyed. The upper story of the Court House—a two story brick—received a send-away to the south, the lower walls left standing but crushed and cracked to the foundation. County Clerk Hammarstrand and Under Sheriff Moore were sleeping in their offices on the first floor, but could not get out until after the crash. This was most fortunate for them, for the upper walls fell outward, under which they would have been buried; an instant later they had these to climb. Mr. Hammarstrand received from the debris a severe cutting about the head, and Mr. Moore escaped with a few scratches. The store of Harris & Rhine, constructed of brick and concrete, dissolved into a mass of ruins, burying up a vast amount of goods. County Treasurer Isaacs and Mr. Brown, clerk at the store, who occupied a wooden addition in the rear of the main building, escaped through the top of a window just at the instant when the store wall crashed into and buried up the room. Both escaped with slight bruises. The walls of the adobe building containing the dining room of the Exchange Hotel were thrown down, though timbers remained standing to sustain the roof; no one hurt. All the shelving and adobe lining against the north wall of the store of Rothschild & Co. fell in across the counter and show cases, smashing all that could be broken. From the adobe house of John and Scott Broder, they, with their neice, Miss S. J. Nichols, made a very narrow and most fortunate escape, Miss Nichols receiving only a slight cut across the forehead, although their beds were literally hedged in by ceiling boards, timbers and adobes. But only a portion of this house fell in, though all is cracked and ruined. A large brick smoke-house, close by, was leveled to the ground. Judge Hanson's house, a strong one-story frame, adobe lined and hard finished, was badly cracked up and pretty nearly ruined; it was moved on its foundations and spread from the partitions both north and south, while the standing portion of one chimney was sunk vertically two inches. Mr. Rhine and family were among the occupants, all escaping without injury. A portion only of the adobe walls of Mr. Bennett's house fell in, just as himself and wife had got out. Mr Bennett's first, expressive ejaculation is worth recording—"Get up, B.; hell's broke loose!" All other adobe-lined buildings in the place were wrenched and rendered unsafe to inhabit, including P. Reddy's handsome house north of town. All the stock in the respective drug stores of John Lentell and J. D. Blair (both in wooden buildings) were thrown down and almost totally destroyed. In Rowley's new store the shelves and contents were displaced, the plastering cracked, etc., but his loss is not serious. The east and west ends of the new Masonic Hall building are badly racked and shattered, and the entire building is thrown out of perpendicular. We come now to speak of THE INDEPENDENT building and its condition, and will give also an account of the

of the proprietors, as affording one of the best methods of conveying an idea of the awful terror of the fateful time. Monday night was calm, clear and frosty, the moon just past the full, lighting mountain and valley with perfect distinctness as far as the eye could reach; there was nothing unnatural or remarkable in the night or weather. At about 25 minutes past 2 o'clock A. M the great unknown and unmeasurable power beneath began to rumble and roar, to heave and toss. It had probably continued some time before the senior of this paper was awakened from a deep sleep to a consciousness of the cries of his terrified wife, or to even a partial conception of the terrible convulsions of the earth. With a feeling of indescribable terror he reached the floor. Reeling and staggering like a drunken man for a time—measured by the sensations it were an age—he vainly sought to grasp from his crib a sleeping child. It was an impossible task, for as he staggered forward the crib rolled away, and then returned with a shock that sent him back against the bed. By some means to him unknown he finally got the child in his arms and started for the kitchen adjoining, a light frame. At the moment a crash was heard in the office, directly overhead, where stood a couple of presses weighing over 2,000 pounds, which seemed to be breaking through the floor above. Unlocking the outside door he threw the child to the heaving ground, and returned to meet his wife, as she staggered out with her sleeping babe. Amid the falling plastering and crashing crockery all escaped without a scratch. The whole time thus occupied probably did not exceed 50 seconds, and then the worst was over. The junior editor, who sleeps upon the same floor, was awakened by the first movement, and opened and passed through two locked doors with the utmost difficulty, reaching the street in safety, just as occurred the crash of the falling buildings. In an effort to assist the others he ran to a back door but to find it locked, and then sought an entrance through the same one by which he had escaped. By this time the others were safely out, and he then consulted his watch, which marked 24 minutes past 2 o'clock.

The building, which is (or was) a very strong two-story frame, was greatly damaged in the adobe lining in the office, and plastering in the rooms on the first floor. Racks full of type-cases were thrown over, and material of all sorts and sizes mixed in a heterogeneous mass. The forms upon the imposing stones were violently twisted about, leaving more or less "pi" in every column, the whole requiring months of labor to straighten, while great quantities are rendered worthless.

The nearest point to this place, where complete destruction ruled rampant, is the Eclipse Mill, where the Superintendent, in the ruins of his house. When found by the terrified employees his arms were locked around the almost inanimate form of his wife, both buried in the debris, she badly injured, nearly suffocated and he quite dead. Every building on the ground, save the frame mill, is razeed to the earth, and it is it is absolutely wonderful that none but Mr. Tregellas fell victims. At the mine no one suffered injury.

Henry Tregellas, Was Killed

The Remains

of the deceased were soon taken in charge by the members of the Masonic Lodge at this place, and on Thursday the last, sad, impressive rites which the Order pays to its departed brothers were administered over the final resting place of this lamented, unfortunate man. Would that the people's unbounded sympathy could console his sorrow stricken widow!

The Destruction of Lone Pine.

The greatest loss of life and destruction of buildings occurred in the town of Lone Pine, 18 miles south of this place. Every stone and adobe building, comprising about three-fourths of that unfortunate place, was leveled to the earth. Owing, probably, to the soft, springy nature of the ground upon which it stands, the destruction of even the class of buildings above mentioned, was more complete than elsewhere. Many of the dwellings and with but one or two exceptions, every business house in the town was built of adobes, and hence the great loss of life. There were over

Sixty Persons Killed and Wounded

in that place alone. The large store of Loomis Bros., crowded with goods, fell and buried up Rockwell Loomis. The debris caught fire close by where he was lying and near to a large quantity of powder in kegs. He owes his life, as do many others, to who, in the midst of the quakings and terrors of the scene, and at the imminent risk of his life, refused to abandon his helpless friend, and never ceased his efforts until he extinguished the fire, then lapping the powder kegs, and got the wounded man out. It was a noble act. The worst hurt, though not the only one, sustained by Mr. Loomis was in having one ear and a large portion of his scalp torn away.

A Deed of Heroism Performed by Wm. Covington,

Mrs. C. M. Joslyn

and her three children were buried under masses of adobes and broken timbers. She and her only son, the pride of her heart, little George, occupied a bed on the opposite side of a heavy partition from the bed where her two little daughters were sleeping. This partition fell across Mrs. Joslyn and little George, killing the latter instantly, and severely injuring her, while the two girls remained unhurt. When finally rescued the wounded and almost insane mother, forgetful of self and all else save her darling, clung to his dead body until made to relinquish it by almost sheer force. The large and strongly built brewery belonging to Munzinger & Lubken crushed in partially, but all escaped witnout injury, save one, Munzinger's was crushed out by the fell blow. A Mexican women, her two daughters and one son all died together, the sole survivor of this family being a boy about ten years of age, who escaped with his nose and one foot badly crushed. Two well known women of the town, Lucy and Antonia, occupying different houses, were crushed to death in their beds.

Innocent Babe Whose Little Life

Juan Ybeseta,

a native of Chili, and a prominent man had his skull split wide open when his house fell in. Others were mangled most fearfully, and many placidly slept the sleep of death, with nothing visible to show the cause. We saw many other dead bodies laid out in a blacksmith shop and other places when we arrived on the ground a few hours after the great visitation, but we now must take note of

The Wounded,

and a few remarkable escapes. Col. Whipple was asleep in the second story of his residence when the crash came. Feeling that escape was impossible, and with a thought of his absent family, he exclaimed,

"This is Death!"

The building went down, carrying him with it. He extricated himself, though nearly suffocated, and found to his astonishment that he had received but a few slight scratches. Not so fortunate, however, was Mr. Austin who was in the same building. His arm and three ribs were broken, we are pained to relate. One end of the building occupied by Dr. Gelcich as a drug store and dwelling fell out, and through this opening the Dr., his wife and babe escaped just as the side walls and roof fell in, the Dr. only being somewhat injured by the falling debris. Hearing Mrs. Joslyn's piteous cries for help from under the ruins on the opposite side of the street he, however, started to her assistance, but before he could do anything, he was prostrated by another shock and hurt so much as afterwards to cause him to spit blood, and render it a difficult matter to answer the numerous calls to attend the wounded. He never ceased in his endeavors to alleviate their distress, though. His stock of drugs and his all is a total loss.

C. D. Begole and some other parties whose names we do not recall, made a most miraculous escape out of their sleeping room, which was buried under the ruins of his saloon.

T. A. Gardner and John Heckel were sleeping together. Heckel got out without a hurt, while Gardner was caught when nearly out of danger and severely, though not dangerously, injured.

When the large building occupied by C. & M. Cohn's opposition store, fell in, the elder Cohn was in a place apparently of little danger, but was considerably hurt, while the younger got out unscathed and did good work in assisting others then and afterwards.

Mr. Deneri, with Deneri & Stewart, had a very close call when their large store fell in, and so did Mr. Zaun when his store went down but both were too busy in looking after the dead for us to bother them with questions as to particulars at such a time.

It is quite out of the question for us to note the circumstances of the wondrous escapes and deaths of so many, or even to give all the names of the sufferers, though many of them will be found in another part of this issue. Soon after daylight

Committees Were Organized

to look after wounded and dead, and to care for the exposed property in the ruins. This last was a wise precaution on the part of Deputy Sheriff Begole, as was subsequently proved, for amid all those terrible surroundings and continued quakings, there were men so inexpressibly mean as to rob the dead, one being caught in the act. A day and night police was put on duty, and will be continued until the wrecks are cleared away.

Messrs. Deneri, Zaun and others whose names we cannot give, never ceased work until the dead were all collected and prepared for the grave, to which all of foreign birth were consigned the following day. Fifteen coffins, each properly inscribed and numbered, containing sixteen bodies were deposited in one grave. The Protestant rites were administered by the Rev. Mr. Orne, and afterwards the Catholic service was read in Spanish. Other bodies were buried singly or taken elsewhere by relatives.

Drs. Gelcich, Columber, Lesesne and Messrs. Grannice, Begole and everybody that was able to, were assidious in their attentions to the wounded, many of whom were laid on the bar-room floor at the Orleans hotel, which being a frame building, was not destroyed. The same remark applies to the Lone Pine hotel. Others of the wounded were in brush shanties and small frame houses or walking about, blood and dust covered, among the ruins.

The Dead at Lone Pine.

George Joslyn, 5 years.
L. Munzinger's infant, 4 months.
Alice Maron, 15 years.
Francisco Losez, Mexico, 35 years.
Jose Revilla, Mexico, 50 years.
Lucy ——, Ireland, and two Frenchmen, names unknown, all dead in the same room.
Lorenzo Mesa, Mexico, 64 years.
Juan Ybeseta, Chili, 42 years.
Antonia Montoyo, Mexico, 26 years.
Maria Cordova, Mexico, 23 years and her three children.
Loretto Rias' two children.
Polenardo Tapia, Chili, 60 years.
—— Craig, American, 40 years.

There are two or three more yet to be added to this list.

The Wounded at Lone Pine.

D. B. McCarter, scalped, severe.
T. A. Gardner, badly hurt.
F. Austin, arm and three ribs broke.
R. A. Loomis, ear and scalp torn loose.
Mrs. Burt, leg broken, badly hurt.
Mrs. E. A. Reddy, severely hurt.
Mrs. C. M. Joslyn, badly hurt.
Geo. Burkhardt and wife, slightly.
Dr. Gelcich, slightly.
Mr. McCali and wife, badly, and daughter slightly hurt.

We are compelled to omit the names of some twenty-five other wounded persons, and other matters relating to Lone Pine, and can only add that nearly every one there is homeless and destitute AND NEED HELP.

At Camp Independence

all the buildings (adobe) are partially destroyed, though but few were thrown down, but among the latter was Jacob Vagt's, which buried up himself wife and only child. The latter, we grieve to add, suffocated before it could be rescued, a fate the parents barely escaped. Mrs. Vagt and a few others about the Post were somewhat injured, but none seriously. With the pitiable loss of this babe our death list closes, though we are apprehensive of bad news from Deep Spring valley, where most of the miners lived in rickety stone houses which could not withstand the shock a moment.

At Big Pine the shock was very severe, at Bishop Creek somewhat less so; some buildings down in both localities, but no one hurt. At Aurora brick buildings were cracked, and at Benton, this side, the same things occurred, but except the fright, no damage done. We heard nothing from any point north of Aurora.

South, at the lower end of the Lake, the shock was light. From Coso, 70 miles south-east, a report comes that 30 Mexicans were killed, but this needs confirmation.

Below Lone Pine

the general class of buildings are of adobe construction, all destroyed and doubtless there will yet be many cases of death to report from that region. The bridge across the river is a total wreck, being heaved up, down, sideways and endways until the planking is torn from the timbers and the timbers from the bents. It lies flat to the ground, side-wise, though in such a shape as to be passable to footmen.

From Swansea

we have received a very comple report of the terrific effects of the quake, which we can not give at this time. Although buildings were leveled, no lives were lost. The main smoke-stack and the galmadores of Brady's furnace were shaken down, while the earth opened and sunk and the lake receded. Of these effects we shall endeavor to speak in another place.

Cerro Gordo.

Strange to say, Cerro Gordo sustained no loss of life or injury, other than the crumbling of a few dry stone walls. Belshaw's furnace stopped for a few hours, but resumed oberations in the morning. The grade down the mountain was in places so filled with rock and earth as to be impassable for vehicles. At Belmont a few stone cabins were thrown down, but without injury to the occupants.

Fissures in the Earth

are numerous and extend all over the valley; no hurried description can possibly do justice to the wonderful physical effects everywhere visible. Vast crevasses have been opened, new lakes formed, sinks of from ten inches to twenty feet and covering acre after acre, cracks extending miles, the river partially dammed and turned, and the foot-hills are in places rent with wide cracks!

Conclusion.

We are compelled to hurry to a close this sadly imperfect account, foregoing reference to a hundred other matters of the greatest interest. Had our office been only ordinarily supplied with material even this much would have been impossible.

OBSERVATIONS.

As there are many persons who have never had an opportunity of observing the phenomena of earthquakes, either in their light or heavy character, we will endeavor to record our own, as deduced from the constant manifestations of the past three days and nights.

We have already attempted to convey an idea of our impressions of the first terrific shake, which was accompanied with a truly appalling roar, louder and stronger than any which has since occurred, according to the descriptions of those who were awake at its beginning. For ourself we heard nothing of this, the uproar created within the building being quite sufficient to drown any other noise, however great. Of those following we are prepared to speak by the card.

The most frequent form of earthshocks are those where the rumbling may be compared to deep, distant thunder, or a very heavy train of cars running over a bridge. It has a peculiar, metalic sound, its volume increasing to a full crescendo and then as suddenly dying to perfect silence; but often it will swell out and repeat, the duration of time scarcely exceeding five seconds. The next manifestation will often occur after about ten seconds of perfect silence, and then be simply a loud explosion, like the discharge of a broadside of heavy artillery, five or ten miles distant. Rumblings or thunderings will sometimes be heard without being accompanied with any perceptible tremor of the earth, but generally this soon follows. It is impossible to definitely locate the sound, except that it appears to be off in the Sierras, to the west or southerly, but never seeming to come from any great depth. At intervals, varying from a few moments to two or three hours, a violent crackling quaking occurs, occasionally without any premonition whatever. A person lying with his head to the west will have time to note the course of the movement commencing under his head during the instant before it reaches his feet. Sometimes the building acts as though it was set on stiff springs, slightly moving. Again as if struck underneath by a monster, cushioned sledge-hammer, and at other times the sensation is the same as if one was aboard of a vessel in mid ocean being dragged quickly over a rock. There is also a peculiar throbbing motion in some of these manifestations, all varieties of which may take place one after the other within an hour. Whenever any of these are preceded by the rumbling most persons, after the movement has commenced, await developments with perfect equanimity, but if they continue longer than usual there is a movement looking to a change of position.

The Earthquake.

[Republished from Last Week.]

Between 2 and 3 o'clock Tuesday morning last (March 26), the inhabitants of this region experienced one of the most terror striking, awe inspiring sensations that ever falls to the lot of mortal man—an earthquake—an earthquake in all its mighty power! The solid earth was loosened from its very foundations, and heaved and tossed as if in the throes of a terrible agony. The Mighty Power beneath threw it up and down, hither and yon as a strong man might toss a helpless babe. No words of ours can begin to portray the terrors of that dread moment, nor the great horror that fell upon every living thing! It was a terrible scene when all were so rudely awakened from deep slumber to face death in its most terrifying form. Men whose cheeks would never blanche in ordinary dangers cried out in a very agony of terror, women screamed as they clasped their crying little ones, cattle lowed, horses broke from their fastenings and huddled together, dogs howled, chickens left their roosts and staggered about in the darkness in their wild efforts to escape a danger that came they knew not whence. Strong wooden houses bounded up and down and rolled to and fro like ships in a heavy seaway, crockery smashed and furniture danced about the floors, chimneys dropped instantly to the ground, stone and adobe houses crumbled and went to earth like piles of sand, burying the miserable occupants in the ruins, and the whole world was in its last convulsions! It would fill volumes to detail all the wonders of those few seconds of time—the wondrous phenomena of nature, the dire calamities, the personal experiences, miraculous escapes and interesting incidents, but for the present we are forced to forego the geater part of these things, and give some main facts, the most of which at the time or subsequently came under our own observation.

All who were not caught in the falling ruins were soon in the streets, and immediately began to hunt out the Extent of the Damage.

The quakings and rumblings were almost incessant, but as a rule they amounted to nothing more than mere tremors, though every few moments a sharp, crackling shock would come, startling everybody as only an earthquake can—but the first, so far, was the only one entailing loss of life or destruction to property, which, Heaven knows, was sufficient. In this place it was soon ascertained that every adobe, brick or stone building in town was wholly or partially destroyed. The upper story of the Court House—a two-story brick—received a send-away to the south, the lower walls left standing but crushed and cracked to the foundation. County Clerk Hammarstrand and Under Sheriff Moore were sleeping in their offices on the first floor, but could not get out until after the crash. This was most fortunate for them, for the upper walls fell outward, under which they would have been buried; an instant later they had these to climb. Mr. Hammarstrand received from the debris a severe cutting about the head, and Mr. Moore escaped with a few scratches. The store of Harris & Rhine, constructed of brick and concrete, dissolved into a mass of ruins, burying up a vast amount of goods. County Treasurer Isaacs and Mr. Brown, clerk at the store, who occupied a wooden addition in the rear of the main building, escaped through the top of a window just at the instant when the store wall crashed into and buried up the room. Both escaped with slight bruises. The walls of the adobe building containing the dining room of the Exchange Hotel were thrown down, though timbers remained standing to sustain the roof; no one hurt. All the shelving and adobe lining against the north wall of the store of Rothschild & Co. fell in across the counter and show cases, smashing all that could be broken. From the adobe house of John and Scott Broder, they, with their neice, Miss S. J. Nichols, made a very narrow and most fortunate escape, Miss Nichols receiving only a slight cut across the forehead, although their beds were literally hedged in by ceiling boards, timbers and 'dobes. But only a portion of this house fell in, though all is cracked and ruined. A large brick smoke-house, close by, was leveled to the ground. Judge Hanson's house, a strong one-story frame, adobe lined and hard finished, was badly cracked up and pretty nearly ruined; it was moved on its foundations and spread from the partitions both north and south, while the standing portion of one chimney was sunk vertically two inches. Mr. Rhine and family were among the occupants, all escaping without injury. A portion only of the adobe walls of Mr. Bennett's house fell in, just as himself and wife had got out. Mr. Bennett's first, expressive ejaculation is worth recording—"Get up, B.; hell's broke loose!" All other adobe-lined buildings in the place were wrencked and rendered unsafe to inhabit, including P. Reddy's handsome house north of town. All the stock in the respective drug stores of John Lentell and J. D. Blair (both in wooden buildings) were thrown down and almost totally destroyed. In Rowley's new store the shelves and contents were displaced, the plastering cracked, etc., but his loss is not serious. The east and west ends of the new Masonic Hall building are badly racked and shattered, and the entire building is thrown out of perpendicular. We come now to speak of THE INDEPENDENT building and its condition, and will give also an account of the

of the proprietors, as affording one of the best methods of conveying an idea of the awful terror of the fateful time. Monday night was calm, clear and frosty, the moon just past the full, lighting mountain and valley with perfect distinctness as far as the eye could reach; there was nothing unnatural or remarkable in the night or weather. At about 25 minutes past 2 o'clock A. M. the great unknown and unmeasurable power beneath began to rumble and roar, to heave and toss. It had probably continued some time before the senior of this paper was awakened from a deep sleep to a consciousness of the cries of his terrified wife, or to even a partial conception of the terrible convulsions of the earth. With a feeling of indescribable terror he reached the floor. Reeling and staggering like a drunken man for a time—measured by the sensations it were an age—he vainly sought to grasp from his crib a sleeping child. It was an impossible task, for as he staggered forward the crib rolled away, and then returned with a shock that sent him back against the bed. By some means to him unknown he finally got the child in his arms and started for the kitchen adjoining, a light frame. At the moment a crash was heard in the office, directly overhead, where stood a couple of presses weighing over 2,000 pounds, which seemed to be breaking through the floor above. Unlocking the outside door he threw the child to the heaving ground, and returned to meet his wife, as she staggered out with her sleeping babe. Amid the falling plastering and crashing crockery all escaped without a scratch. The whole time thus occupied probably did not exceed 50 seconds, and then the worst was over. The junior editor, who sleeps upon the same floor, was awakened by the first movement, and opened and passed through two locked doors with the utmost difficulty, reaching the street in safety, just as occurred the crash of the falling buildings. In an effort to assist the others he ran to a back door but to find it locked, and then sought an entrance through the same one by which he had escaped. By this time the others were safely out, and he then consulted his watch, which marked 24 minutes past 2 o'clock.

The building, which is (or was) a very strong two-story frame, was greatly damaged in the adobe lining in the office, and plastering in the rooms on the first floor. Racks full of type-cases were thrown over, and material of all sorts and sizes mixed in a heterogeneous mass. The forms upon the imposing stones were violently twisted about, leaving more or less "pi" in every column, the whole requiring months of labor to straighten, while great quantities are rendered worthless.

The nearest point to this place, where complete destruction ruled rampant, is the Eclipse Mill, where the Superintendent, in the ruins of his house. When found by the terrified employees his arms were locked around the almost inanimate form of his wife, both buried in the debris, she badly injured, nearly suffocated and he quite dead. Every building on the ground, save the frame mill, is razeed to the earth, and it is it is absolutely wonderful that none but Mr. Tregellas fell victims. At the mine no one suffered injury.

Henry Tregellas, Was Killed

The Remains

of the deceased were soon taken in charge by the members of the Masonic Lodge at this place, and on Thursday the last, sad, impressive rites which the Order pays to its departed brothers were administered over the final resting place of this lamented, unfortunate man. Would that the people's unbounded sympathy could console his sorrow stricken widow!

The Destruction of Lone Pine.

The greatest loss of life and destruction of buildings occurred in the town of Lone Pine, 18 miles south of this place. Every stone and adobe building, comprising about three-fourths of that unfortunate place, was leveled to the earth. Owing, probably, to the soft, springy nature of the ground upon which it stands, the destruction of even the class of buildings above mentioned, was more complete than elsewhere. Many of the dwellings and with but one or two exc ptions, every business house in the town was built of adobes, and hence the great loss of life. There were over

Sixty Persons Killed and Wounded

in that place alone. The large store of Loomis Bros., crowded with goods, fell and buried up Rockwell Loomis. The debris caught fire close by where he was lying and near to a large quantity of powder in kegs. He owes his life, as do many others, to who, in the midst of the quakings and terrors of the scene, and at the imminent risk of his life, refused to abandon his helpless friend, and never ceased his efforts until he extinguished the fire, then lapping the powder kegs, and got the wounded man out. It was a noble act. The worst hurt, though not the only one, sustained by Mr. Loomis was in having one ear and a large portion of his scalp torn away.

A Deed of Heroism Performed by Wm. Covington,

Mrs. C. M. Joslyn

and her three children were buried under masses of adobes and broken timbers. She and her only son, the pride of her heart, little George, occupied a bed on the opposite side of a heavy partition from the bed where her two little daughters were sleeping. This partition fell across Mrs. Joslyn and little George, killing the latter instantly, and severely injuring her, while the two girls remained unhurt. When finally rescued the wounded and almost insane mother, forgetful of self and all else save her darling, clung to his dead body until made to relinquish it by almost sheer force. The large and strongly built brewery belonging to Munzinger & Lubken crushed in partially, but all escaped witnout injury, save one, Munzinger's was crushed out by the fell blow. A Mexican women, her two daughters and one son all died together, the sole survivor of this family being a boy about ten years of age, who escaped with his nose and one foot badly crushed. Two well known women of the town, Lucy and Antonia, occupying different houses, were crushed to death in their beds.

Innocent Babe Whose Little Life

Juan Ybeseta,

a native of Chili, and a prominent man had his skull split wide open when his house fell in. Others were mangled most fearfully, and many placidly slept the sleep of death, with nothing visible to show the cause. We saw many other dead bodies laid out in a blacksmith shop and other places when we arrived on the ground a few hours after the great visitation, but we now must take note of

The Wounded,

and a few remarkable escapes. Col. Whipple was asleep in the second story of his residence when the crash came. Feeling that escape was impossible, and with a thought of his absent family, he exclaimed,

"This is Death!"

The building went down, carrying him with it. He extricated himself, though nearly suffocated, and found to his astonishment that he had received but a few slight scratches. Not so fortunate, however, was Mr. Austin who was in the same building. His arm and three ribs were broken, we are pained to relate. One end of the building occupied by Dr. Gelcich as a drug store and dwelling fell out, and through this opening the Dr., his wife and babe escaped just as the side walls and roof fell in, the Dr. only being somewhat injured by the falling debris. Hearing Mrs. Joslyn's piteous cries for help from under the ruins on the opposite side of the street he, however, started to her assistance, but before he could do anything, he was prostrated by another shock and hurt so much as afterwards to cause him to spit blood, and render it a difficult matter to answer the numerous calls to attend the wounded. He never ceased in his endeavors to alleviate their distress, though. His stock of drugs and his all is a total loss.

C. D. Begole and some other parties whose names we do not recall, made a most miraculous escape out of their sleeping room, which was buried under the ruins of his saloon.

T. A. Gardner and John Heckel were sleeping together. Heckel got out without a hurt, while Gardner was caught when nearly out of danger and severely, though not dangerously, injured.

When the large building occupied by C. & M. Cohn's opposition store, fell in, the elder Cohn was in a place apparently of little danger, but was considerably hurt, while the younger got out unscathed and did good work in assisting others then and afterwards.

Mr. Deneri, with Deneri & Stewart, had a very close call when their large store fell in, and so did Mr. Zaun when his store went down, bnt both were too busy in looking after the dead for us to bother them with questions as to particulars at such a time.

It is quite out of the question for us to note the circumstances of the wondrous escapes and deaths of so many, or even to give all the names of the sufferers, though many of them will be found in another part of this issue. Soon after daylight to look after wounded and dead, and to care for the exposed property in the ruins. This last was a wise precaution on the part of Deputy Sheriff Begole, as was subsequently proved, for amid all those terrible surroundings and continued quakings, there were men so inexpressibly mean as to rob the dead, one being caught in the act. A day and night police was put on duty, and will be continued until the wrecks are cleared away.

Messrs. Deneri, Zaun and others whose names we cannot give, never ceased work until the dead were all collected and prepared for the grave, to which all of foreign birth were consigned the following day. Fifteen coffins, each properly inscribed and numbered, containing sixteen bodies were deposited in one grave. The Protestant rites were administered by the Rev. Mr. Orne, and afterwards the Catholic service was read in Spanish. Other bodies were buried singly or taken elsewhere by relatives.

Drs. Gelcich, Columber, Lesesne and Messrs. Grannice, Begole and everybody that was able to, were assidious in their attentions to the wounded, many of whom were laid on the bar-room floor at the Orleans hotel, which being a frame building, was not destroyed. The same remark applies to the Lone Pine hotel. Others of the wounded were in brush shanties and small frame houses or walking about, blood and dust covered, among the ruins.

—— Craig, American, 40 years.

There are two or three more yet to be added to this list.

The Wounded at Lone Pine.

D. B. McCarter, scalped, severe.
T. A. Gardner, badly hurt.
F. Austin, arm and three ribs broke.
R. A. Loomis, ear and scalp torn loose.
Mrs. Burt, leg broken, badly hurt.
Mrs. E. A. Reddy, severely hurt.
Mrs. C. M. Joslyn, badly hurt.
Geo. Burkhardt and wife, slightly.
Dr. Gelcich, slightly.
Mr. McCali and wife, badly, and daughter slightly hurt.

We are compelled to omit the names of some twenty-five other wounded persons, and other matters relating to Lone Pine, and can only add that nearly every one there is homeless and destitute AND NEED HELP.

At Camp Independence

all the buildings (adobe) are partially destroyed, though but few were thrown down, but among the latter was Jacob Vagt's, which buried up himself wife and only child. The latter, we grieve to add, suffocated before it could be rescued, a fate the parents barely escaped. Mrs. Vagt and a few others about the Post were somewhat injured, but none seriously. With the pitiable loss of this babe our death list closes, though we are apprehensive of bad news from Deep Spring valley, where most of the miners lived in rickety stone houses which could not withstand the shock a moment.

At Big Pine the shock was very severe, at Bishop Creek somewhat less so; some buildings down in both localities, but no one hurt. At Aurora brick buildings were cracked, and at Benton, this side, the same things occurred, but except the fright, no damage done. We heard nothing from any point north of Aurora.

South, at the lower end of the Lake, the shock was light. From Coso, 70 miles south-east, a report comes that 30 Mexicans were killed, but this needs confirmation.

Below Lone Pine

the general class of buildings are of adobe construction, all destroyed and doubtless there will yet be many cases of death to report from that region. The bridge across the river is a total wreck, being heaved up, down, sideways and endways until the planking is torn from the timbers and the timbers from the bents. It lies flat to the ground, side-wise, though in such a shape as to be passable to footmen.

From Swansea

we have received a very comple report of the terrific effects of the quake, which we can not give at this time. Although buildings were leveled, no lives were lost. The main smoke-stack and the galmadores of Brady's furnace were shaken down, while the earth opened and sunk and the lake receded. Of these effects we shall endeavor to speak in another place.

Cerro Gordo.

Strange to say, Cerro Gordo sustained no loss of life or injury, other than the crumbling of a few dry stone walls. Belshaw's furnace stopped for a few hours, but resumed oberations in the morning. The grade down the mountain was in places so filled with rock and earth as to be impassable for vehicles. At Belmont a few stone cabins were thrown down, but without injury to the occupants.

Fissures in the Earth

are numerous and extend all over the valley; no hurried description can possibly do justice to the wonderful physical effects everywhere visible. Vast crevasses have been opened, new lakes formed, sinks of from ten inches to twenty feet and covering acre after acre, cracks extending miles, the river partially dammed and turned, and the foot-hills are in places rent with wide cracks!

Conclusion.

We are compelled to hurry to a close this sadly imperfect account, foregoing reference to a hundred other matters of the greatest interest. Had our office been only ordinarily supplied with material even this much would have been impossible.

PAST AND PRESENT.

We, this week, reproduce the account of the late earthquake as given in the last issue, and much other matter relating to the same, the most of which was then prepared, but beyond our ability to put in print. From subsequent observations and comparison of opinions, we are satisfied the picture then presented was in no sense overdrawn, though written and put in type in the midst of slight shocks continually recurring, that would sensibly interfere with a proper steadiness of hand, but rarely or never deemed of sufficient importance to cause even a temporary suspension of the work in hand. We doubt if a newspaper was ever before printed under more inauspicious circumstances.

Severe and appalling as this great convulsion of the earth unquestionably was, it is a settled conviction with all here, that not a person would have been killed or hurt had their houses all have been of wood. A large majority of the people lived in adobe, or properly speaking, mud houses, and the only wonder is that casualties were not many times more numerous than they were.

As a natural consequence a number of persons evinced a strong desire to go elsewhere in the expectation or hope of escaping such visitations, but when they come to cast about for a place of safety the folly of such a course was to obvious to be long entertained. There is not a spot on the face of the globe possessing any positive immunity against earthquakes. While almost every part of the world in the past year has been subjected to tornadoes, war, famine or pestilence, causing death and destruction everywhere, our own locality has passed absolutely unscathed, with the sole exception of one earthquake, which has shaken a half a continent at the same time, and may never be repeated again. It is not for man to say what next, but judging the future by the past we are just as safe here as we can be in any place, so far as earthquakes are concerned, for on the authority of the Indians nothing like this has occurred here before for at least two generations, and by the same rule, thousands will die by other visitations for each individual that perishes by earthquakes. Running will not help the matter, but it would be daring fate not to take every reasonable precaution against accidents, which means to forever eschew 'dobes, brick and stone in building.

THE RAILROAD.

The bill asking the right of way for a railroad through this county to Los Angeles was defeated in the Senate. A few hired lackeys of the C. P. R. R. accomplished this thing, far more discouraging to the prospects of this region than the earthquake. For five or ten dollars apiece, (we suppose that is about their price) Senators Oulton, Duffy, Evans, and Tompkins worked might and main in persuading the others to believe that a terrible wrong would be inflicted upon the people of this county if this bill should pass—if some of our own citizens should be granted the exclusive right of way upon a narrow strip of territory; a very great wrong, no doubt, unless it had been for the big monopoly they were legislating this grant. It is useless to argue this matter now, or speak about further than to say that the defeat of that measure is an outrage upon our best hopes. In this connection we also wish to add a word of thanks from the people of this county to our friends and delegates from Tuolumne, all of whom, in this and other similar matters, done all they could for us.

One of the Senators above named, Evans, was formerly commander at Camp Independence, and since the adjournment of the Legislature, has been arrested in Sacramento on a charge of grand larceny, in having collected or received money ($184), on a soldier's warrant and appropriating it to his own use. He has since cleared himself of the charge, although the ex-soldier cannot find out what became of the money. Evans paid it over to Conness.

EARTHQUAKES AND THEORIES.

As there is no subject possessing any greater interest to our readers at the present time than the mysterious visitations known as earthquakes, we propose to devote a little space to their consideration.

In the "Encyclopedia of all Nations" we find many interesting facts relating to them. According to Werner there are two kinds: Those intimately connected with volcanoes, which are only felt for a few leagues around, and those which appear to have their focus at a great depth. The effects of the latter kind are much greater, traveling with incredible celerity from point to point, thousands of miles distant from each other.

The recent experiences of the Pacific coast, particularly, go to show that there is still another kind, merely local, affecting but a limited space of country neither connected with any volcano nor coming from great depths or distances.

Taking one kind with another, the slight with the violent, it is an established fact that no considerable section of the globe is entirely exempt from them. We quote from the work mentioned:

"Sandy deserts and fertile regions, primitive, secondary and tertiary hills, extensive plains and even marshy districts but little elevated above the level of the sea, afford no protection against these destructive phenomena, which are equally prevalent in cold, in temperate, and tropical climates. They are, however, generally considered more frequent near to coasts; thus Syria, the coasts and islands of Asia and America, the European coasts of the Mediterranean and Iceland are most subject to them; while the plains of Africa, Asia and the North of Europe are the least exposed. Viewing the whole earth, and including every slighter agitation, earthquakes appear to be exceeding numerous, and it may be maintained that not a week passes in which the earth's surface, in some place or other, is not more or less agitated. * * * * Their appearance is not connected with any particular season of the year or state of the atmosphere, and they take place by day as well as by night."

The most violent and disastrous in their effects are earthquakes which appear to have a rotary motion. In these, houses, statues and rocks are turned entirely around and trees twisted around each other like willows, as was the case with the palm trees in Valparaiso in a great earthquake which occurred there November 19, 1822. Occasionally mountains are thrown down in whole or in part, damming rivers and covering plantations, as was the case in 1692, in Jamaica, when the city of Port Royal sunk forty-eight feet, and a plain of 1,000 acres fell in with all the buildings upon it. The earthquake above alluded to, (the 19th of November, 1822), was felt up and down the coast for a distance of 1,200 miles. A hundred miles of the coast about Valparaiso was raised bodily several feet above its proper level. The area thus raised from two to seven feet, was estimated at over 100,000 square miles.

No country in the world has been more affected by earthquakes than Italy and the islands of the Mediterranean. The recurring intervals vary from a few months to a hundred years in that country, though it is stated as a remarkable fact, that after Antioch, Damascus and Tripoli were shaken down in 204 they were not again visited by earthquakes until the latter half of the seventeenth century, during which period other portions of the globe was more affected by them than usual.

It is not our purpose to publish even a bare list of the more important earthquakes mentioned in this history which have occurred since the Christian Era, as it will fill our entire space, but we may allude to them to show that however appaling our own new experience may be, people of other countries have something similar almost every year of their lives. The Roman Empire was shaken up every year, sometimes in the most terrible manner, during the entire reign of Justinian. Says Gibbon, speaking of the one which destroyed Antioch and some 200 other towns, May 30, A. D. 526:

"In these disasters the architect became the enemy of mankind. The hut of the savage or the tent of an Arab may be thrown down without injury to the inhabitants; and the Peruvians had reason to deride the folly of their Spanish conquerers who with so much cost and labor erected their own sepulchres. The rich marbles of a patrician are dashed on his own head. * * * * Superstition involves the present dangers with invisible terrors, and if the image of Death may sometimes be subservient to the virtue of repentance of individuals, an affrighted people are more forcibly moved to deprecate with servile homage the wrath of an avenging Deity."

In 1169 single shocks continued for four months, and following another dreadful earthquake of 1759 they continued for six months. Numerous other instances of the same kind may be cited, and in all of these terrible convulsions the subsequent manifestations continued for sometime afterwards, but with two exceptions we have no account of any where they assumed proportions of violence approaching that of the first grand outbreak. The first of these exceptions was in 1755, when Lisbon was destroyed; two and a half hours after the first shock there was another of nearly equal violence. In 1797 an earthquake destroyed a large portion of Peru. It proceeded from the volcano Tungurragua, which kept the earth in almost a continuous motion for nearly three months, when there was another shock more violent than the first. London was considerably shaken up on the 8th of February and again on the 8th of March 1749, which gave rise to the hypothesis advanced by Stukely, that they were caused by a highly overcharged state of the electric fluid. Andrew Bena affirms that they are sudden explosions caused by gas in the interior of the earth, which he believed would there be found enclosed in reservoirs of sulphur and bitumen. Various other theories have been and continue to be advanced, but none that satisfactorily solve the awful problem. It is the effect, not the cause, with which we have to deal at present, although the "Cause and Cure of Earthquakes" is a very appropriate study for scientists, and we doubt not that the time will come when the cause will not only be fully understood, but the approach of such visitations may be predicted with quite as much certainty as that of tornadoes, and thereby the destructive effects may to some extent be averted, but beyond this human agency can never go.

Nearly every State of the Union within the memory of those now living has been affected by earthquakes, but mostly of very insignificant proportions. The most prominent of these occurred, we believe, in 1812, when New Madrid and considerable tracts of land in various places for a long distance on the Mississippi river were sunk, entailing considerable loss of life. Within the past twelve months the scene of their operations appeared to be transferred to the Atlantic seaboard, where a number of shakes were experienced. Taking that portion of the Pacific coast from British Columbia to Lower California, there has not been a single month, perhaps, for very many years in which these agitations have not taken place. They have been observed more frequently in San Francisco than at other points, though the most violent effects, not excepting our own of the 26th ultimo, were at Haywards, some 40 miles east of the city, which happened simultaneously with what is called the great earthquake in San Francisco, in October, 1868. At that time the court house at San Leandro, we believe, and a number of buildings at Haywards were thrown down or ruined, and at the latter place extensive fissures in the earth were opened.

During the eighteen months immediately preceding October last, 38 earthquakes, rated from light to heavy, are recorded as having occurred in different places extending from San Luis Obispo to Seattle, in Washington Territory; some of them as far inland as Iowa Hill and Yreka, not to mention those which occurred in Virginia City Nevada, nor the slight one felt in this place in July last. No one of them appears to have affected any great expanse of country, some being confined to a single township almost. Nearly one-half of them are set down to the credit (if that is an appropriate term) of San Francisco, or adjacent localities, including Sacramento and Marysville; the most violent, though no disasters are recorded, to Washington Territory.

Since earthquake theories are likely to be the order of the day for some time to come we will record our own crude ideas on the subject. The focus of action is not deep down in the earth, but quite near the surface. This is proven from the limited space generally affected by Pacific coast earthquakes. If the focus was situated under the earth's crust, within the molten mass said to exist there, an earthquake must affect nearly half the world at the same moment. As it is, but a single county or locality is generally the extent of the area affected. The forces which produce earthquakes are simply combinations in proper proportions of certain gasses, acting by expansive force like steam. The earth, rocks and minerals near the surface together constitute nature's labratory in which these gasses are being constantly generated. In their simple forms they permeate every clod of earth, separating and expanding the particles as do the acids used in "raising" dough. Like dough when ready for the oven, bodies of earth may be suddenly condensed or collapsed by consuming or expelling the gasses, and thus sinkings of the surface of the earth in places are brought about. The effects are not uniform, because the operations of this labratory are governed by the amount of material and facilities of combinations afforded by different localities which may be quite near each other. Wherever there is a perfect combination of the simple elements the consumption is perfect, with corresponding results. Saltpetre, charcoal and brimstone, each harmless enough of itself, combined together in certain proportions, form a compound still harmless without the addition of a fourth element—fire. With this addition the whole is consumed or exploded, leaving a vacuum more or less perfect where before there was a substance occupying space. These gasses—hydrogen gas, carbonic, sulphurous, muriatic and other acids in their simple forms are ejected by volcanoes—occupy space in the earth, and when properly combined, explode or are expelled and the earth settles together to again expand and raise up in the course of years or ages to its original position as new supplies of the gasses are generated to take the places of those consumed. No explosion or earthquake can take place until the proper proportions for a combination of the existing gasses is effected, which is rarely the case precisely at the same moment throughout a great expanse of country, so that one place may be affected by an earthquake today, and another to-morrow. The probabilities for this condition to occur simultaneously over half a continent or even a whole State, are about as remote as the recurring exact conjunction of certain planets, a thousand years hence, though the difference is, the exact period when the latter event will take place may be definitely determined while the other can only be guessed at.

The geyser springs, under our theory, are simply earthquakes in miniature, working at intervals by the expansive forces of certain combined gasses. In earthquakes of every description from geysers upward, a period of rest is required for the generation and combination of new forces, and the oftener they are expended the less violent must be the explosion.

Heat is always an attendant circumstance upon volcanic eruptions and earthquakes, but this heat is not always fire any more than that carried by steam. Heat is evolved by violent rending of rocks caused by the escaping forces of earthquakes, and at the same time new gasses are freed which take fire and burn until all produced by the fissure is exhausted, as was the case in numerous places along this slope of the Sierras after the late convulsion. One of these places, which was in plain view of, and but seven miles distant, from this town did not begin to show signs of fire for thirty hours after the heavy shock, and probably originated from some of the succeeding shocks which kept up such a continuous grinding in the rocks that morning. Flames were not visible until nearly sun down, when they showed out like those from a burning house, and in about two hours died away. In other places they began immediately, but as the supply of gas came from no great depth, it burned out in a few hours.

These fires were in no sense volcanic, though a result of the earthquake; friction ignited inflamable gasses, petroleum perhaps, though some of the fissures in the earth near the river present the same appearance, we are told, as those about furnaces reducing ores carrying sulphur.

The booming sounds, sometimes followed by a shock, that have so frequently been heard in, or coming from the mountains to the west, are produced, in our belief, by a gigantic geyser or air volcano, and are not due to internal fires. A volcano is known to exist near the head of Kern river; at least parties who were in that vicinity some three years ago, reported that they heard not less than four hundred explosions in one night; but no fire or smoke was visible. Immense bodies of mineral possibly constitute a battery for generating these explosive forces or gasses, and this battery during the late commotion, which extended for hundreds of miles in every direction, was stirred into extra activity, causing the subsequent roarings and innumerable quakings, some of which seemed to be by concussion of the air. Earthquakes, like every thing else of God's creation are not the result of chance, but of some fixed law of nature of which we know nothing, other than that as with every thing else their forces become exhausted, and periods of rest, perhaps of centuries, must ensue.

Since the foregoing was in type, we find the following in The Tulare Times of March 30: "It is reported that a crater two hundred feet across has opened and is in active eruption on the head of Kern river."

Adjourned.

The Legislature, by Constitutional limitation, had to adjourn sine die, April 1st.

THE EARTHQUAKE AT LONE PINE, 26th MARCH, 1872.

BY W. H. CREIGHTON.

Yes, stranger! we had a leettle shake
Here, and all 'round Lone Pine;
'Peared to me as like old Phosphorus
Had charge of the helm for a time.
It warn't no common shock, you bet!
Not one of your wavy kind,
But lickit-y-split and rattle-ty-bang,
Just which way it had a mind.

Houses throwed down? You'd best believe!
There warn't a 'dobe wall
Nor yet a stone one, more'n one foot high,
That didn't have to fall;
It throwed the bottoms clean from under,
And crumbled the walls to dust,
And them as was sleepin' twixt 'dobe walls
Was them as fared the wust.

Anyone killed? Why where you bin,
That you ain't heerd the news?
How women and young'ins and men lay dead
In ones and threes and twos?
You see, 'twas two o'clock at night,
And them as received their call
Never knowed what struck 'em, or if they did
They hadn't no time to squall!

How many was dead? Well, twenty-five,
As near as we could count;
But some of the wounded and sick and maimed
Will likely swell that amount.
There's a man lives eighteen miles from here,
When it shook his old caboose,
"Get up old woman," said he to his mate,
"For I guess that hell's broke loose."

And, I reckon, that was how most of us felt,
Tho' we all wasn't so profane,
For it shook and shook and rattled and tore
S'tho' 'twould never be still again.
At Swansea, the lake went out from its banks
A good half-mile or more,
And when it cum back, 'twas tho' the devils in hell
Had joined in the awful roar.

How did I get out? Well, stranger, now
You've got me there, I swear;
The hole I cum thro'—it could't be found,
And I reckon it wasn't there.
I only know that I'm here to-day,
Lookin' over this desolate sand,
And I only hope He'll deal kindly with them
As is gone to the unknown land.

Not Quite.

The editor of The Southern Californian thinks "the force of the earthquake spent itself about Visalia." We have reason to know that a good portion of that "force" didn't expend itself at Visalia, but forced its way through the Sierra Nevadas as far as this valley and was then not weakened in the least; not in the least. We much wish it had been.

Borax.

There is in the vicinity of Columbus, about 3,000 acres of land containing borate of lme, and borate of soda. The deposit varies in thickness from one inch to fifteen inches, and the crude material, as taken from the marshes, yields about fifteen per cent of boracic acid. Hearne & Mott are manufacturing a superior quality of borax, from the borate of soda. Their borax is made by a process differing entirely from that by which the English borax is made. It contains an excess of boracic acid, and a less per cent of soda, hence its superiority over the European article. They own their own lands under State laws, but when the Government surveys are extended over them they will of course have to purchase of the Government. Large quantities of borax can be made from these marshes, as the supply is almost inexaustible—the borate of soda forming again within a few weeks after it has once been gathered from the surface of the land. We are indebted to Mr. Markley, of Bishop Creek, for samples of the borax, which, so far as we are able to judge, is as fine an article as was ever manufactured.

Suspended.

A temporary suspension of work has taken place at the Eclipse, all the residences, furnaces, etc., having been destroyed. Aside from the fatality to life, this is one of the worst results of the shake-up, as the mill was workiog far better than ever before, with a certainty of a profitable run and a good clean up. A 3½-ton 8-wheel locomotive is now in transit for use on the railroad, in place of mule power. The track around the bluff from the mine was just completed, and a force was to be immediately put upon the 900-foot shute down to the ore dump where the cars are loaded. The mine sustained no damage, whatever, underground. The shafting in the mill is out of alignmant, and the ditch broken; these damages are not at all serious. We feel assured, however, that the company will soon resume operations.

Aurora Redivivus.

Hundreds of people on this coast, cognizant of the decay of Esmeralda's once celebrated mining metropolis, will be rejoiced to learn that the wheels of enterprise and life are again to be set in motion at that place. A heavy joint stock company—the Consolidated Juniata Mill and Mining Company—owning all the famous mines and splendid mills of that locality, has been organized, and active operations already commenced. There are 50,000 shares of stock, representing a capital of $5,000,000, with such men as William Sharon, A. M. Edgington, A. L. Greeley and others among the trustees. In some of the mines—the Juniata for instance—large bodies of immensely rich ore are known to exist, while in the others a systematic prospecting will, we fully believe, open a great deal more. We salute the New Aurora!

Their Programme.

After having fairly cleared away the ruins, Harris & Rhine are making preparations to remove the corner saloon building across to the lot adjoining the old store on the south, and will use it temporarily. Just as soon as possible, a heavy, one-story frame will be erected, 50 by 80 feet in size, covering the ground occupied by both the old store and saloon. At present their commodious warehouse is used as a storeroom.

Bullion Shipment.

March 25th there were shipped from the mill of Hiskey & Walker, Deep Spring Valley, 8 bars of bullion, weighing 2,970 67-100 ounces, valued at $3,500, extracted from Lida Valley ore. We should judge, taking into consideration the capacity of the mill and the short time of extracting these bars that the ore must be paying over $600 per ton. So it would seem that Lida is not all talk, but some bullion.

Returned.

We are glad to chronicle the return of our old friend John B. White, accompanied by his lady and a neice—Miss Fanny White, all fresh from the great East, and and not in time for the big shake. Harry Wright brought the party through from Carson by special stage. John is fully of the opinion, as are most of us, that Inyo is a decided improvement upon many other localities yet.

A Telegraph.

Mr. Frank Bell, the gentlemanly Construction Superintendent of the Nevada lines of the Western Union Telegraph Co., was spying out the valley generally in a telegraphic point of view. He was so engaged on the 25th ult., but left early on the 26th. However, Mr. Bell is very favorably impressed, and we shall endeavor to investigate and report upon the subject soon.

Lumber.

Tim Lewis informs us that he has not less than 100,000 feet of logs at his saw mill, and can fill orders for lumber as fast as sent in, as he sustained no damage whatever. The flume and pipes at the Black Rock mill were badly demoralized, but it is now running. The Big Pine mill will resume operations in a few days.

Charged with Burglary.

Joe Marcoe was, one day last week, examined before Justice Gunnison, on charge of having broken into and stolen a watch, etc., from the house of J. H. Stratton, Lone Pine. It was decided that the evidence against him was not sufficient to hold him over.

The New Court House.

The county officials are now esconced in Tom Nolan1's building, which has yielded its owner some revenue and considerable notoriety as a "court" house of another description. Terms, two months in advance, cash down.

Butcher Shop.

Cerro Gordoites will take notice of the new advertisement of Anderson & Saunders, who propose supplying everybody with meats, etc.

To Let.

By reading our new advertisements our readers will note that there is a fine chance for somebody to go into the farming business.

Still Stands.

The old Piute Monument still looms grandly up in its lofty situation, despite Nature's spasmodic effort to upset things.

Will Meet.

The Board of Supervisors will meet in special session on Monday next.

INCIDENTS AND CURIOSITIES OF THE EARTHQUAKE.

Some curious circumstances were connected with the late convulsion.

B. L. Brown was writing at a high desk in the Pioneer stable by the light of a tall kerosene lamp, a "comet" burner. The chimney from the lamp was thrown straight up and came right end down on the desk where it remained standing, while the lamp fell over to the edge of the desk, the burning oil running to the floor, the flames from which Brown and Dow stamped out after they came in from the street, where they had gone for safety.

It this office forms and standing matter received a rotary motion from right to left, moving them nearly a quarter circle, and at the same time they and everything movable received a send to the south. A Gordon press was turned partially around on the floor. A small chimney running up inside the gable end of the building, dropped perpendicularly through a close-fitting, light, wooden bracket, ten feet from the top, without breaking it off or displacing it. That chimney was "taken in" with remarkable celerity.

D. E. Hunter, who was sleeping in a small frame building near the steep banks of the creek near Camp Independence, reached the door in time to see the ground open under one corner of the house full eighteen inches. He had to jump across this opening.

The north and south walls of a moderately substantial barn belonging to T. J. Goodale, near Fish Springs, were thrown out. Seven horses broke their fastenings and escaped when the whole structure came down. This is the only wooden building destroyed so far as we have heard. Goodale and others sleeping in a box granary were tossed about so roughly that they could not possibly gain their feet. The house (adobe) fell instantly, burying up Mrs. Goodale and her aged mother, severely injuring the latter. The surrounding ground, which is quite wet, was thrown into ridges and furrows in every direction. Horses and cattle evinced the greatest consternation. The manifestations at this place appear to have been more violent than at any other point, yet most singular to relate, a neighbor's (adobe) house, but a mile distant, and on similar ground, was but very slightly affected.

At Big Pine some dangerous looking fissures were opened, and an ox standing in a corral was killed, probably by noxious gasses. We have also heard that a horse met a similar fate on the plains a mile or so to the north of the same place.

A little girl living a few miles north of this place said, while the quaking was in progress: "It rocks nice, mother; now we can go to sleep."

A mortal fright seized upon two gents, neither of them class leaders, living near Camp Independence. The Sunday-school recollections of the younger, however, enabled him to commence to say the Lord's Prayer, which he did with great earnestness, the other repeating the words as fast as he could, but finally getting behind, he exclaimed, "D— you, Lafe, don't go so fast, I can't keep up."

Another well known person commenced to rail and swear with great vehemence, whether from fright, desperation or defiance we do not know.

In this place as soon as it was ascertained that no one was killed, everyone seemed to be highly elated, and jokes around the out-door fires passed freely.

Such expressions as "There she goes," "Did you catch him?" "That's pretty good for this time o' day," etc., were to be heard every hour.

Several members of Mr. Yancy's family, of Bishop Creek, were attending a dance at a neighbor's house on the night of the earthquake. A portion of a heavy stone chimney fell direct y across the bed where, but for the dance, the two young ladies would have been sleeping, and their death would have been almost certain. This fact will do for a new text for those people who preach "special Providences," as they always do when a boy is drowned while fishing on Sunday, or a young lady meets death while attending a dance.

One of the most unaccountable escapes occurred with Mr. Chaquette, being in an adobe house near the Post. He was sleeping in a bed adjoining that of his wife, who had by her side three children. Mr. Chaquette arose just as the building fell and a 2x8-inch rafter broke across his pillow, while the other bed was crushed to the floor, killing a cat beneath and yet not injuring its occupants!

A noticeable case was that of a child of Mr. J. N. Rose, which tearfully begged and bitterly cried to be allowed to sleep with his father on that particular night. His pleadings were granted, and his accustomed bed buried in the ruins of an adobe wall.

Fourteen members of the "Happy Family" were covered up in the ruins of their home, scarcely one 'dobe of which was left on top of another, yet all, big and little, escaped unhurt, or at least with no serious injuries.

A young gentleman of Bishop Creek was "setting up" with his inamorata at the dead hour of 2:30, A. M., when the big shock came. The young lady, as in duty bound, fainted away. Our Adonis held her in his arms until she recovered, which required many minutes. The next day he swore he would "give $20 a shot for earthquakes when setting up with an offish gal." Shocking.

H. W. Robinson, stage man, was fast asleep in a small room, one side of which was canvass, in the second story of the station at Little Lake, 70 miles south of this place. His impression was that his team was running away with the stage, and singing out "whoa! whoa!" very lustily. During his endeavors to catch the lines he tumbled on the floor, when a new impression got possession of him, which induced him to "get out of that" as no man ever got out before. The building, however, did not fall, nor was any material damage done in that direction. Near the same place some heavy teams were in camp, the mules tied to the wagon, as usual. One of the teamsters jumped up, and throwing on the brake commenced to swear with great energy at the mules, in the belief that they were responsible for the whole trouble. He stopped when he heard the remark from another teamster: "You d—d fool, 'taint the mules; its an earthquake!"

Clocks stopped instantly; and what is still more remarkable, two others, one of which belongs to this establishment, that for some weeks past had persistently refused to turn a wheel, started to run at once and continued to do so for ten hours afterwards.

In P. Reddy's law office all the books and fixtures against the north wall of the front room were thrown down, while not a book was displaced in the library reaching to the ceiling which stood against the south wall of the same room. In the adjoining room (west), this order was exactly reversed. Nothing was disturbed on the north wall, while everything, desks and book cases, were thrown down from the opposite wall.

Little children who do not realize the nature of the phenomena, remark when a shock, accompanied by the subdued roaring, is felt, that "it is thundering," or "the wind is blowing, ain't it mamma?"

Since the the first shock animals of all kinds pursue the quiet tenor of their way, without taking the slightest notice of the continued manifestations of the underground commotions. Some streams ran black with alkali or mud, while others, but a short distance away, were pure and limpid as ever.

The power of the great underground king is every where manifest along the low, wet grounds, particularly at their junctions with the harder and more solid formations of the second benches and hills. On the higher lands fissures were opened from which water spirted and continued to run for some time, where water, except from the rains of Heaven, never ran before.

At the Eclipse works, east of Owens river, the railroad is raised and "humped" in many places as if it had been driven together from the ends. This railroad is three miles in length, running nearly east and west. Captain Scoones and lady had a most wonderful escape. The first intimation either had of the great calamity was after they were buried under the ruins of their dwelling, into which they had moved but the day before. The canvass lining was pressed down upon their faces by two feet of adobes and the roof. Mrs. Scoones providentially managed to get one hand loose, with which she tore a hole through the lining admitting air that came not a moment too soon, for with mouths and nostrils filled with alkali dust neither could have lived but a few minutes longer. With great exertions they finally extricated themselves. They would have both been crushed to pieces by the timbers except for one of those wonderful accidents, we may call it, that could not happen once in a thousand times. A piece of scantling, less than two feet long, struck the floor endways, and before it had time to topple over, a heavy roof timber, which otherwise would have fallen directly across their bodies, struck square on the end of this stick, thus holding up the roof and saving their lives. Some brute, who will doubtless live to stretch a rope, in answer to Mrs. Scoones' screams for help, told her to "help yourself; we have got enough to do to take care of ourselves," and went off leaving her to her fate! Mr. Polkinghorne and son finally, after escaping from their own house, came to their assistance, and done all in their power to render the lady comfortable, giving her his stockings and boots to prevent her from freezing, her own clothing being all buried up in the ruins. Captain Scoones feels under great obligations to Mr. Polkinghorne.

At the Kearsarge mill, west of this place in the Sierras, the shock was quite severe though no damage was done, except that the tramway appeared to be displaced in one place. Parties in the canyons in that mountain were enveloped in clouds of dust that came rolling down, but did not realize the power of the shock as did others in the opposite or Inyo range. In the latter range masses of rock were loosened and rolled into the canyons, from which Mr. Warden and party had a most narrow escape from being crushed to pieces.

At Camp Independence no houses fell entirely except the gardener's, just below the main settlement; but Major Egbert's house had a large part of one wall to fall in, and the Post Surgeon's house had its whole front wall, facing east, and the side wall of the extension, facing south, thrown in. Next south-east of this building the soldier's mess hall and part of the Quartermaster's storehouses were badly shattered, parts of the walls falling, and the mess hall having to be at once pulled down to avoid accidents. The soldier's quarters lost part of its lower, east wall, and one house occupied by two families of married soldiers was about demolished—both end walls falling in and the roof barely standing. The hospital and other buildings were much injured in the plastering, and the walls strained and cracked. All the buildings at the Post are considered unsafe and will be replaced by wooden structures, if the military authorities at San Francisco will authorize the expense.

Officers and men are living either in temporary structures of boards covered with canvass or in tents or shelter tents.

The following list of persons received slight injuries:

Major Egbert's infant son, scratched about the face and head.

Dr. White's mother, severely bruised on the forehead and face by a mass of falling plastering.

Corporal Charles Harcourt and his wife, severely bruised by falling adobes, part of a wall falling on them, the same happening to Private John Lutz and wife.

Sergeant Rensnyder received bruises laming him temporarily. All are now recovering favorably.

E. Chaquette's house, near the Camp, was shattered so that it afterwards fell. The house of J. Earl, Esq., the store of Earl & Harris and the hotel building adjoining the store, were all badly shattered, portions of the walls falling. In the hotel building Mrs. McNamee (so long an invalid, but now slowly recovering) had a very narrow escape with her life, for, drawing about her some few articles of clothing, she just got away from her bed before a wall fell upon it. Excitement kept her up, so that the subsequent exposure to the frosty air seems not to have injured her. Mr. Jacob Vagt's house was much injured, with the sad result (already chronicled by us) of the death of their only child. He and his wife are recovering from their severe injuries. The old Phillips' house, now owned by John Broder, partially fell in, injuring Thomas Hamilton, Thomas Boyce and Martin Moore, a farmer employed by Hamilton. Mr. Moore is still quite badly off, and confined to his bed by severe bruises around the back and loins; but the others got off lightly.

Charles Pierce, an Englishman, was badly injured at the Eclipse mine by the fall of a stone cabin, and is being cared for at the Camp hospital. His spine was bruised and he is paralyzed below the hips. His life is not considered in immediate danger, if at all, but he may be a cripple for life.

Between Mr. Chaquette's house and the Camp, where the lower road crosses the creek, the ground is opened in considerable fissures, a foot to eighteen inches wide, and quite extensive.

At Deep Spring but one house was thrown down, and one person, C. Albert, slightly injured. This is much better news than we expected to hear from that place, where there were a number of persons living in stone houses. With the above exception no damage was done there at all.

The canyons in the side of the mountains to the west filled up nearly to the summit of the hills on either side with dust, flying snow or fog, it was impossible to say which from the appearance. This all disappeared in about two hours.

A cloud of dust hung along the Inyo range as far up and down as we could see until about noon. This cloud of dust looked like a long, narrow streak of fog straight underneath, somewhat ragged on top. The sun shone until noon with a sort of subdued glare, as though the atmosphere contained smoke, though nothing of the kind was visible. The afternoon was warm and cloudy, the wind blowing slightly in puffs, first in one direction and then in another. For the most part it has been cloudy, rainy and windy since, and quite cold. Considerable snow has fallen at times on the mountains and a little in the valley. Such weather, though not entirely unknown, is rarely seen in this valley.

Primaries.

The attention of politicians sailing under the Republican party colors, is directed to the call for a primary election to select delegates to the State Convention, published elsewhere. Voters will make their own selection of candidates, but for the sake of some sort of an understanding we are requested to announce that the names of the following gentlemen are before the people: J. Earl, P. W. Bennett, J. L. Garrettson, P. A. Chalfant, and M. W. Belshaw. Some of them are presented by consent, others by assumption. It is an open field.

The Demand.

At least five hundred thousand feet of lumber will be required this season throughout the valley.

THE WOUNDED.

In addition to those mentioned last week, we append the following list of wounded. Many others are hurt whose names have not been reported, therefore the list is far from complete. The following completes the list at Lone Pine as far as reported;

Paliago Manyose, dangerous.
Ambrea Galyan, severely.
Rafael Farisona, boy, sole survivor of a family of five, badly hurt.
—— Diaz, badly.
Three Frenchmen, names unknown.
Ignacio Cardova, (since died.)
P. Cervantes, millman, leg broken.
—— Lebrado, leg broken.
—— Dias, butcher, leg broken.
Mrs. L. Munzinger, slightly.

At George's Creek, a portion of Mrs. Rogers stone house fell in, severly injuring her, and one or two caildred slightly. Also the "Half way House" a new adobe, slightly injuring Frank Voss, who cut through the roof, which was nearly flat to the ground. Three other men got out of the same building before it fell.

Mrs. Oliver Cromwell, bone of one foot broken, was the only person who received personal injuries on Bishop Creek.

Time Changed.

An important change of time is announced on the northern line of stages, taking effect on Thursday last. Hereafter stages will leave this place every Thursday, and Sunday, at 6 o'clock P. M., making close connection with Wilson's line, the Carson and Truckee and the Central Pacific railroads, on the through time of three days and nights to San Francisco. The snow across by Aurora is being cut away by the energetic proprietors as fast as men and means can do it, and will henceforth afford no trouble. Ullrick & Wright have sold their Virginia and Carson road, and will in future devote their exclusive attention to this line.

Illegal.

Owing to circumstances not necessary to mention at this time, we last week failed fo inform our readers of the following facts: It has been decided by the County Court that the late drawing of jurors for the ensuing year was not in accordance with law, because the term of office of Deputy Sheriff Dow, under whose auspices the drawing was made, ended with the resignation of his superior, ex-Sheriff Elder, and consequently the drawing was illegal. This decision, which is no doubt correct, nullifies the proceedings of the late Grand Jury, and necessitates a new deal.

The Blanks

For the use of the County Assesor are being printed at this office, and Frank will soon be on his rounds. The copy of the new form has just come to hand from the State authorities, making a short delay unavoidable. At present, however, nearly all the county officers are trying to find out, from the numerous changes in the law, what offices they hold and what their duties are. Rather mixed.

The Weather

Has been miserably boisterous and disagreeable during the past week. It comes hard, indeed, upon so many homeless people, to have the worst weather of Winter at this particular crisis.

Still Continue.

Mother Earth has not yet (April 6) quite recovered her wonted steadiness of nerve, slight shocks having been noticed within the past twenty-four hours, but the intervals of quiet now range from twelve to twenty hours, so we feel assured she will soon resume her normal condition of quietude, steadiness, and sobriety.

Again Postponed.

Late advices are that the Kearsarge sale, advertised to take place in San Francisco on March 25th, has been again postponed, this time to the 8th instant. We feel somewhat certain that a part of the old company will get the property, and do the right thing by paying up—which, just at this time, would be a very eminently proper thing to do.

For the Sufferers.

The generous people of Cerro Gordo and Visalia have forwarded substantial aid to the Lone Pine sufferers. Cerro Gordo sent $800 the next day after the shake, and Visalia since sent $500. The people of Los Angeles are about to respond nobly in the same manner, Col. Whipple writes.

Building.

Joe Harris is building a house adjoining the livery stable of B. L. Brown & Co., for use as a saloon.

Disfranchised.

The most un-democratic, un-republican act of the late Legislature was that one which deprives Fresno, Tulare and Kern counties of the benefits of the new no-fence law. These three counties alone are denied the privilege of even voting on this important matter. Their mustang Senator and Representative, Fowler and Burckhalter, have utterly disregarded the wishes of their constituents, and there is never a doubt but both these selfish men, and their stock, too, will have to go remarkably straight if they wish to live in peace in their principalities. The mutterings are both loud and deep.

Legislation for Inyo.

The trespass law petitioned for for this county has passed both houses of the Legislature, and no doubt has received the Governor's signature, ere this. A slight change has been made in reference to our District Attorney's fees. Now, in case of conviction, if the fee cannot be collected off of the defendant the county has it to pay, which has not been the rule heretofore.

Proposed Railroad to Cerro Gordo.

[From The S. F. Alta, March 23.]

Cerro Gordo is a mining camp with much present and more future importance. It is situated in latitude 36 degrees 30 minutes, 222 miles due east of the town of Monterey in a straight line and about 260 miles in a straight line from San Francisco. Freight going from this city passes by way of Los Angeles, which is 250 miles south of Cerro Gordo by the wagon road, and passengers have, until lately, gone by Reno, which is 300 miles north. Another route to which passengers have recently taken, leads from Cerro Gordo 75 miles southward to Walker's Pass and thence by Kern Valley to Merced, the terminus of the San Joaquin Valley Railroad. Each route between the mines and San Francisco is more than twice as long as the direct line.

Cerro Gordo produces about 300 tons monthly of argentiferous lead, frequently called base bullion, containing $250 per ton on an average, making the total silver production about $2,500 per day. The silver is separated from the lead in this city, and the transportation of the base bullion is expensive. Eighty mule teams, each one containing twelve mules, run steadily between the furnaces and Los Angeles, making about eight round trips in a year. Three or four teams travel together, and as their route is the greater part of the way through a desert, they are American caravans. The freight from Cerro Gordo to Los Angeles is $50 per ton and the other way $80 to $90 per ton. The reasons for the difference are, that as the former place is 8,000 feet above the sea, the teams can haul much more going southward, and then the lead bars which are the only freight from the mines, are more easily loaded and require less care than the merchandise sent to the mines. About 150 teamsters and others are employed to take care of the 1,000 mules employed in freighting. The freight from Los Angeles to Wilmington by rail is $3 per ton, and the ordinary charge by steamer to this city is $5; making $58 as the present freight price per ton from Cerro Gordo to San Francisco.

If there were railroad communication between the two places, capital, enterprise, experience, and the reduction of expenses in many ways, would cause a great increase in the production of bullion, for the quantity of ore is very large, and new developments are made every month. A bill is now before the Legislature to grant to W. S. Mesick, T. Reed, P. W. Bennett and James Brady the right of way over the lands owned by the State for a railroad from Cerro Gordo to tide water, or any railroad running to tide water. We have not seen the bill but we are informed that it grants nothing save a right of way and a franchise for thirty years, and we presume there can be no objection to it. Owens Valley, on the eastern border of which Cerro Gordo is situated, is 75 miles long and 15 wide, has a good soil, excellent pasturage, mild Winters, a healthy climate, and if made conveniently accessible by rail would maintain a large population.

A Daily Mail.

Mr. J. Earl, of Owens River, on his return from Washington, D. C., left here on Thursday, after a stay of a few days. He has contracted, on and after the 1st of April next, to convey a daily mail from the San Joaquin Valley road, via. this place, to and from Owens River. He is now engaged in the necessary preliminary arrangements. He brings us cheering news in reference to the 35th parallel road, and assures us there will be no delay in its construction—that the work will undoubtedly be prosecuted the coming Summer with a vigor extraordinary even in the annals of modern railroad building. He says we will be placed in communication with the Atlantic and Pacific sooner than the most sanguine among us anticipate. He thinks after the railroad reaches this point, that Bakersfield will remain the entrepot of the Owens River trade, until such time as a branch of the Southern Pacific shall be extended into that region from the eastern terminus of Tehachepi Pass. This is a fact of which we had always been well satisfied; nevertheless, it was satisfactory to meet with a confirmation of our views from a gentleman so well versed on the subject, and intimately acquainted with the topography of the country as Mr. Earl.—Kern County Courier.

Its Extent.

The following dispatch is dated March 27:

Some thirty towns have been heard from to-day, extending from Red Bluff to San Diego, and east to Virginia City, all of which report heavy and severe shocks of earthquake this morning, between 3 and 4 o'clock. In some places shocks were felt at 6:30 A. M., and in Visalia it continued until 11 A. M. No report of damage has been received, occasioned by the earthquake, with the exception of Visalia. At that place and vicinity the shocks appear to have been more severe. Several brick buildings were badly cracked. One building had the front wall moved out one inch on its foundation. The Tulare Flouring Mills had the gables thrown down, and the earth in clay localities shows fissures or cracks in many places. The rumors at Visalia are that east of that place, on the mountains, rocks and trees were rent and uprooted.

Innumerable dispatches are received here to-day inquiring the effect of last night's earthquake. Not a dollar's damage was done in San Francisco, and few who were in bed knew anything of its occurrence.

By Thursday's mail we learn that all eastern Nevada was shaken up, and every where shocks like those of this section continued at intervals for several days: up to date. All the western half of the continent has been shaken up, we think.

Sorrowful.

A sad tale comes from Selma, New York. It appears that twelve young men of that city "swore off" on New Years Day, 1871, and agreed to deposit with one of their number, on the first day of each month $10 each, the total to be divided among the members of the association who on the first of January, 1872, should prove to have been faithful to their pledge. One by one the members backslid and yield d to the liquor temptation, and only a single individual was left, who at noon on New Year's Day was to receive $1,400. This Abdiel, faithful found among the faithless, proceeded to the rendezvous at the appointed hour. He waited until ten minutes after noon, and then thought he would run into the saloon next door and get a nip. He had just swallowed it when ten of the other members entered to take their noonday Angustora, and he found to his horror that his watch was twenty minutes fast, and the money was lost! The eleven therefore proceeded to the residence of the treasurer, and found that he had lost all the money playing draw poker with one of the church trustees. The sad occurrence has cast a gloom over the whole community.

OBSERVATIONS.

[Republished from Saturday Last.]

As there are many persons who have never had an opportunity of observing the phenomena of earthquakes, either in their light or heavy character, we will endeavor to record our own, as deduced from the constant manifestations of the past three days and nights.

We have already attempted to convey an idea of our impressions of the first terrific shake, which was accompanied with a truly appalling roar, louder and stronger than any which has since occurred, according to the descriptions of those who were awake at its beginning. For ourself we heard nothing of this, the uproar created within the building being quite sufficient to drown any other noise, however great. Of those following we are prepared to speak by the card.

The most frequent form of earthshocks are those where the rumbling may be compared to deep, distant thunder, or a very heavy train of cars running over a bridge. It has a peculiar, metalic sound, its volume increasing to a full crescendo and then as suddenly dying to perfect silence; but often it will swell out and repeat, the duration of time scarcely exceeding five seconds. The next manifestation will often occur after about ten seconds of perfect silence, and then be simply a loud explosion, like the discharge of a broadside of heavy artillery, five or ten miles distant. Rumblings or thunderings will sometimes be heard without being accompanied with any perceptible tremor of the earth, but generally this soon follows. It is impossible to definitely locate the sound, except that it appears to be off in the Sierras, to the west or southerly, but never seeming to come from any great depth. At intervals, varying from a few moments to two or three hours, a violent crackling quaking occurs, occasionally without any premonition whatever. A person lying with his head to the west will have time to note the course of the movement commencing under his head during the instant before it reaches his feet. Sometimes the building acts as though it was set on stiff springs, slightly moving. Again as if struck underneath by a monster, cushioned sledge-hammer, and at other times the sensation is the same as if one was aboard of a vessel in mid ocean being dragged quickly over a rock. There is also a peculiar throbbing motion in some of these manifestations, all varieties of which may take place one after the other within an hour. Whenever any of these are preceded by the rumbling most persons, after the movement has commenced, await developments with perfect equanimity, but if they continue longer than usual there is a movement looking to a change of position.

The Inyo Sufferers.

[From The San Francisco Bulletin, April 5.)

Pursuant to an invitation extended by Mayor Alford, Colonel Whipple visited that officer's headquarters in the City Hall yesterday morning. Tax-Collector Auston, City Treasurer Bauer, Dr. Rivers, of the Mexican Consulate, Messrs. Forbes and Story, and several others were in attendance. Colonel Whipple at the request of those present, detailed his experience in Lone Pine. In regard to the topography and general condition of the affected district, he stated that Lone Pine was in a valley 100 miles long and from seven to eight miles wide, and that this whole area was more or less demoralized by the shocks. The most serious damage was sustained by the town of Lone Pine, but the farmers throughout the valley had not escaped —and in many instances their homes must be in ruins. He desired it to be distinctly understood that he did not come to San Francisco to solicit aid for the town of Lone Pine alone. The Relief Committee at home had been advised of that fact when he started, and were intending as soon as possible, to prepare and forward reliable statistical information of the damage to the property in the valley. The merchants of Lone Pine had acted with such kindness and consideration toward the people that he felt they should receive assistance to re-establish business. If 200,000 feet of lumber could be procured from Los Angeles, San Francisco subscribing the purchase money, the Colonel promised to make arrangements with leading teamsters whereby the freight could be forwarded at half price. And it was absolutely necessary that this assistance be rendered, and rendered promptly, for the people were now houseless and homeless. Let the merchants receive extended credit and some pecuniary assistance, and they will be in position to help the people. The committee appointed by the citizens of Lone Pine is composed of honest men, in whom the community has unlimited confidence. All moneys collected will be distributed by the committee among the sufferers. When Colonel Whipple had concluded his narrative, Austin suggested a method for raising money. He thought the Mayor should take the responsibility by naming the committees appointed for San Francisco and that the merchants, brokers, members of the bar, etc., should receive special invitations to subscribe to the relief fund. And this gentleman further said that the merchants who traded with Lone Pine, having a great interest in the matter, would take pains to swell the contributions. Perhaps it would be well to place subscription books at the houses having business connections with Inyo county, and then notify the public where the moneys could be deposited. These suggestions were immediately adopted. Colonel Whipple said that the checks of Belcher & Co. were as good as gold in Inyo, and if the moneys collected were deposited in some bank here to the credit of that firm, they would issue checks to the Lone Pine Committee, and thus matters might be expedited. This suggestion met with general favor. City Treasurer Bauer was chosen Treasurer for the Relief Fund. The Mayor, alive to the importance of the occasion, issued an appeal to the public.

Paraffin.

A writer in The London Field gives the following as his method of ridding his fowls of vermin: "During the past season I have found paraffin to be a most effective cure for both house and birds. For the former, sprinkle it about the building every other day or so, until they have disappeared; then a good plan is to keep a can of the same in the house with the cork out. For birds, apply with a common small paint brush from neck to tail on the back, and again under the wings; this will kill them all in an hour so, and not hurt the birds."

A Poison and Its Antidote.

The traveler Loudon gives the following interesting account of the famous poisonous valley in the island of Java: "We took with us some dogs and fowls to try experiments in the poisonous hollow * * * * When within a few yards of the valley we experienced a strong nauseous smell, but in coming close to its edge this disagreeable odor left us. The valley appeared to be about half a mile in circumference, oval, and the depth from thirty to thirty-five feet; the bottom quite flat; no vegetation; and the whole covered with the skeletons of human beings, tigers, pigs, deer, peacocks and all sorts of birds. * * * * * We now fastened a dog to the end of a bamboo, eighteen feet long, and sent him in—we had our watches in our hands, and in fourteen seconds he fell on his back, did not move his limbs or look around, but continued to breathe eighteen minutes. We then sent in another, or rather he got loose and walked in to where the other dog was lying. He then stood quite still, and in ten minutes fell on his face and never afterward moved his limbs. He continued to breathe seven minutes. We now tried a fowl, which died in a minute and a half. We threw in another, which died before touching the ground. * * * * On the opposite side [of the valley], near a large stone, was the skeleton of a human being, who must have perished on his back, with his right hand under his head. From being exposed to the weather, the bones were bleached as white as ivory. I was anxious to procure this skeleton, but any attempt to get it would have been madness."

The old legend in regard to this valley was that a poisonous tree grew here named the Upas, and if any one approached it the result was sure death. Subsequent investigation, however, proved the incorrectness of the legend in regard to the tree, but not, as it seems, in regard to the deadliness of the place. Nor was this latter exaggerated; but its cause examination proved to be merely the overloading of the air with carbonic acid gas. The origin of the gas has not been so clearly ascertained, but has been supposed to be from some vent in the earth supplying the gas faster than it can be dissipated in the air, though the traveler just quoted says, "we could not perceive any vapor, or any opening in the ground." Nevertheless this gas is known to be an abundant product of volcanic action, and from some such interior source it may be conveyed to this spot faster than it is conveyed away.

But why are there not many such poisonous valleys in the world? The number of volcanic vents is great, and they are continually sending forth this same deadly product. Yet farther, so far as this material is concerned, every fire is a volcano continually emitting this gas as its chief product; and the amount of the whole may be judged by the fact that an average sized blast furnace will send forth at least two tons every hour. Still farther, every pair of lungs is a little furnace adding no inconsiderable quota; for the breathing of a population like that in New York will produce no less than four thousand tons every day; and, the world over, animal lungs produce fully twice as much as the human. Still further, the various processes of fermentation and decay are pouring into the air four times as much of this gas as the human lungs produce. Altogether, the beat computation makes the daily production of carbonic acid gas from these latter sources no less than eleven thousand million pounds; and this in addition to what may be produced from any sources within the earth. Surely, in view of such numbers we might ask, why should not the whole surface of the earth be made at length a Upas valley? Such indeed it would have become, not within the period since man's creation, but since the earth's first creation, had it not been for a wonderful provision which has been made for the consumption of this gas as fast as produced. A poison to all animal life, it is the indispensable food of all vegetable life. However much, therefore, the former may sent forth into the atmosphere, the latter is ready to absorb it all. We are amazed at the immense sum which represents the whole amount produced, but we are no less surprised at some of the figures which tell of the amount required to sustain all the plants which are growing upon the earth. These are all provided with little mouths, scattered thickly over their leaves, which suck in the carbonic acid from the air, and, under the influence of the sun-light, resolve it again into its elements, retaining the carbon to build up the plant, but sending out the oxygen to be breathed over again by man or animal, or to sustain a flame, which will freight it again with carbon for still another use of the plant. And thus the endless interchange goes on. The respiration of man is kept up by this distillation of the plant, and the plant is sustained by the waste from the system of the man or the animal; or else by the destruction of some other plant.

The number of these little hungry mouths, which the vegetable world opens to take up man's poison, but its food, is perhaps the most wonderful thing in all this story of beneficent wonders. "A single common lilac tree has a million leaves, and about four hundred thousand millions of pores or mouths at work, sucking in carbonic acid; while on a single oak tree as many as seven million leaves have been counted." With such a consumption even the immense production does not seem too great. The two are exactly balanced. The air remains pure; the plants are all fed.

—The Marysville Appeal says that during the recent heavy shock of earthquake in that city a party were playing pool in Schwab's billiard rooms. One of the party had the sixteen-ball, and just as he played the first shock occurred, throwing down all the pins. He immediately claimed pool, and the other players were too much frightened to dispute the claim or to notice that he did not really make a pin.

MORE FALSE STATEMENTS.

It is nothing more than might have been reasonably expected that strangely perverted and exaggerated accounts of our terrible earthquake should reach the ontside, but of all that we have yet seen there is none that can compare in this respect to the stories told by one Augustus C. Diggins, who was here that night. He is either naturally an unqualified liar, or was so perfectly crazed by fear that he did not know whether he stood on his head or his heels. We notice a few of his statements as given in The Bulletin. After describing his sensations before reaching the street, and the character of the earth's movements, he says on looking around that "every adobe and rock structure in the place was in ruins." In the nature of the case we do not find much fault with that statement, since there was three buildings in to be seen in that condition, and that was all. After this had taken place, he goes on to say that "away down the narrow valley, in the direction of Lone Pine, was heard a sharp and thundering explosion, like that of a thousand columbiads fired at once The people braced themselves for the shock—nearer and nearer came the appalling noise, and as the shock advanced, thousands upon thousands of huge rocks tumbled from the crags on either hand and crashed with deafening din into the ravines and upon the edges of the valley below. Then came the noise under their feet, and with it the awful, sickening and terrifying uplift and swing of the earth. The people ran to and fro, some screamed, some prayed, others stood still and watched the course of things with stoical indifference. They soon learned that but one or two persons had been killed there, and yet none knew what the end might be, for the earth vibrated constantly. At short intervals would be heard away off in the direction of Lone Pine and the Lake that terrible boom! bang! as if the very mountains themselves were splitting in twain. 'Look out, boys,' they would cry, 'here she comes again!' and come she would. But in each instance they had time to brace themselves for the advancing shock. Not only did tens of thousands of rocks and boulders rolling down the mountains add to the confusion of the scene, but in the Sierras on one side of the valley avalanche after avalanche of snow was sent thundering, booming, almost screaming down from the regions of eternal frost and ice to the gulfs below."

We have never seen a more exaggerated perversion of facts than is contained in this extract and more of the same character following. Terrible and appalling it most assuredly was from the beginning, and many of these things did take place, but not in the knowledge of this man. In a moral sense people doubtless did "brace" themselves, but not in the sense implied by his statement. The first great shock, which was ended before he reached the street, was the only one from that time to the present writing that would have unsteadied a toddling infant. In less than thirty minutes after leaving his own room he was aboard the stage en route for San Francisco. The way bill was being made out, and the driver making preparations for the usual start at 3 A. M. at the very moment of the shock, and instead of an "hour and a half" spent in trying to recover the express box from the ruins of Harris & Rhine's store, the whole time thus spent was not exceed a minute and a half. The man was totally demoralized, or a second Munchausen.

The Apportionment Bill.

It seems the Legislature failed to pass a new Legislative apportionment bill, and the old law remains in force. We are very glad of this failure. Some weeks since a bill passed, and is now a law, dividing the State into Congressional districts, constituting the Fourth district as follows: San Diego, Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, Tulare, Monterey, Fresno, Kern, Merced Mariposa, Stanislaus, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, San Mateo, Mono and Inyo.

Right.

The State "Incubus" adjourned sine die April 1st.

REMOVAL OF CAMP INDEPENDENCE.

There is a strong probability that Camp Independence will be abandoned. The great earthquake has demoralized the United States Government. The only military protection vouchsafed to a sparsely settled, Indian infested region extending for hundreds of miles around, is to be withdrawn because of a few thousand dollars expense in rebuilding. From surrounding circumstances we would consider this an unjust or impolitic movement and at this crisis, right on the heels of a calamity by which half our people are practically without shelter from weather or Indians, it is particularly so. Within the past month two men were killed, and two others, one of whom was wounded, were chased by Indians, just east of the Inyo range. These men were traveling from the Colorado river to Austin. Small parties do not consider themselves safe from Indian attacks in that region. It is full of dangerous renegades from this and neighboring tribes, all of which are liable any day to be infected by their warlike spirit. The mere presence of the military has undoubtedly been of great importance in restraining these Indians and keeping them within bounds, and in view of existing facts, this restraining influence is just as essential now as at any time since the Indian war. It is useless to argue this matter, but we will say that as this is the only Post in all this vast region, cut off from the rest of the world, and where the Indians out number the whites, here it ought to be retained, and least of all, not be removed now as a consequence of a visitation of itself sufficiently depressing without this unlooked for addition.

THE CENTER OF ACTION.

Inyo county has now attained a a world-wide notoriety as the center of the most violent earthquake of the North American continent. It was violent and disastrous enough we all know, but so far as the loss of human life is concerned there would have been nothing of the kind to mourn had our people all lived in wooden instead of adobe buildings. Not a single one of the former throughout the length and breadth of the valley was injured to a dangerous extent, or at all, except in the adobe lining and plastering. Not a single person was injured in any of them, nor would there have been any at all, in all probability, had it not been for the adobe houses. In that event the effects of the earthquake here would only have ra ed, as in many other places hundred of miles distant, where from the described effects the convulsion was really very near as violent. It was terrible and appalling indeed, but circumstances have tended to give it a worse character in various ways than the facts fully justify. The ill-advised movement to excite sympathy abroad for the purpose of assisting the needy is much to be regretted, all things considered. It conveys an idea of financial ruin and personal distress far beyond the real facts, and to a material extent must have a disastrous effect upon the prosperity of the county. The loss has fallen heavily upon many poor families and individuals considered aside from the loss of life, but in no case is it sweeping as if brought about by fire. In some instances material aid is needed and will be gladly accorded by our own citizens, but none of the heaviest losers need or will accept donations. Except for the wounded, orphans and widows none should have been asked. So far as others are concerned the main cause of distress is the lack of shelter, for which suitable material at this season of the year can not be had. Under a kind Providence, we will yet prosper as a people. Our great resources are not a whit less than before, and in our honest belief Inyo county will at no distant day stand as prominently before the world in her prosperity as she now does as the theater of a great calamity.

Professor Morse Dead.

Professor Morse, of telegraph fame died in New York on the 2d instant, full of years and honors. He was born in Charleston, Massachusetts, in 1791. His invention of the telegraph, or rather his practical application of known principles to telegraphy, has given him more honors and a wider fame than has ever before fallen to the lot of an inventor. His funeral obsequies were of the grandest description.

Some Shakes.

The ground at Visalia was kept in almost a continuous tremor up to March 30, and on the 3d of April two severe shocks were felt.

THE PROPER COURSE.

From various San Francisco papers accounts reach us of the ill-advised operations of Col. Whipple, acting as solicitor for the "Inyo sufferers," by some sort of quasi authority. The reports also include the fact that he has officiously asked extended credit for all of our merchants, in addition to appealing to the citizens of San Francisco generally for pecuniary assistance.

The more the facts of this case are investigated the more manifest is the utter senselessness of the operation. In the figures furnished us of the losses at Lone Pine, published last week, we find that the major part of the sufferers are stated to have lost more than twice the amount they ever possessed in the county—taking the assessment roll as a basis, and not permitting "consequential damages" to figure in the count. The estimate of losses for this place were greatly overdrawn, and it is probable that in four-fifths of the cases the losers themselves were not consulted when the lists were made up. And now that the excitement, natural enough at the time, has abated, the fact is conceded that, leaving out of the count the loss of a score or two of adobe houses—which if rebuilt would not now sell for one dollar apiece—the actual extent of the damage will not exceed $100,000, taking the county throughout. Now then, our citizens will either have to themselves take the entire issue of the new county building bonds or else make manifest the real facts in regard to our actual losses, and cease permitting two or three panic stricken, flying residents to pile on such unlimited amounts of agony.

In money contributions from Cerro Gordo, Visalia and Swansea the Lone Pine Relief Committee have had $2,200 placed at their command. A gentleman of this place only a day or since proffered these gentlemen an individual contribution of $100, but it was declined. So they have sufficient with which to help the very few who will accept help. The word "destitute" scarcely applies to any one in the county.

Col. Whipple is undoubtedly an honest, disinterested man, but his trip had better been delayed a stage or two—for then there would have been no appeal made for outside assistance; and now all that can possibly, honorably be done in the premises is to respectfully decline the money and credit assistance so generously proffered by the noble citizens of San Francisco and Los Angeles. This is the proper course, and one that should be pursued.

About Telegraphic Dispatches.

Several of our business men here, thinking to get answers to their San Francisco communications as quickly as possible, had them telegraphed to Visalia, thence by stage. Not one of them got here from Visalia in less than four days, letters relating to the same business and dispatched by the Northern route at the same time reaching here first. Now this is not the fault of the stages, for they come through regularly in about half the time. The supposition is that Postmasters and express agents at the intermediate points, having only seven minutes to change mail and express matter, dump all out, throw in their own and send it forward, keeping the other to sort at their leisure or until the next trip. This may be very convenient for them, but it is very aggravating to parties awaiting the answer. People here have long since given up the idea of getting mail matter by that route in less than eight or ten days from San Francisco, and we suppose the reason given above accounts for it.

Still Affected.

Earthquakes continue to be felt at many places, among which we will mention Visalia, Stockton, Marysville, San Jose and one in Oregon, March 31st. At Eureka the big shock was terrific, and has been followed by a few slight ones since. The extent of that earthquake is now fixed at 750 miles north and south, and 500 east and west. No reports are yet received from Mexico, some parts of which were doubtless affected at that time.

Newspaporial.

A new daily called "The California Republican" has just been started in San Francisco. Judging from its advertising columns and general appearance, it starts out under favorable auspices. It is strongly Republican, and advocates the re-election of Grant.

"Heald's College Journal," published in the interest of that useful institution, Heald's Business College, San Francisco, has just donned a new suit, and is much improved thereby.

Placer gold mines are being worked on the Colorado river which pay from $10 to $20 per day.

"A STERILE REGION."

Concerning an outlying region like this, it is not to be expected that even prominent newspapers, to say nothing about the general public, should be well posted, but when one of the former pretends to know all about it and misrepresents important facts, we consider it a very mean thing. As an instance, the sapient Examiner informs its readers that this is a very sterile, desert region, where but little water and that of the worst description, is to be found. Considered only in reference to the settled portion of it, covering a fertile valley nearly one hundred miles long, nothing could be farther from the truth. No country in the State is better watered, or contains water of a better quality, than does this—lying as it does along the foot of the Sierras, from which purling streams of snow water cross the valley every mile or two throughout its whole length. Its agricultural and mineral resources, taken together, are unequalled.

This county possesses every essential resource to make it one of the most prosperous in the State, its main drawback being its lack of communication with the outside world. By next Fall this draw-back will, to a great extent, be removed by the completion of the railroad to Tehachepi Pass, which is within 150 miles of this place.

Escaped Prisoners Captured.

A telegram to The Eureka Sentinel, dated Hamilton, April 2, says "that Frank Clifford, George Roth and John Burke, the Carson escapes and robbers of Woodruff & Ennor's stage, below Mineral Hill, were captured near Emigrant Gap, 45 miles from this place, yesterday, and brought to this city last night. The prisoners were asleep at the time, and were firmly secured before resistance could be offered. Four stolen horses and a full supply of arms and ammunition were found in their possession."

Los Angeles Rioters.

At Los Angeles, March 30, in the District Court, some of the late rioters in that city received sentences. L. F. Crenshaw was sentenced to the State Prison for three years; Lewis Mundell and A. R. Johnson to six years each; Charles Austin, M. McDonald and E. A. Alvarado to five years each; Jesus Martinez to four years, and Refujiro Botello to five years.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

, All advertisements, to insure insertion in these columns, must be handed in on or before 2 o'clock P. M. Friday.

In Commemoration.

Capt. H. D. Scoones, formerly of the Engineers in the British army during the Crimean war, and now of the Eclipse company, executed a very excellent sketch of the ruins of our Court house as it appeared after the Great Earthquake, which picture is now in our possession. This picture will be presented to the county if the county will officially acknowledge it by paying the cost of framing it, otherwise it won't grace the new Court house when built. No relic pertaining to the archives of Inyo county will ever possess half the interest to future generations as this representation of the destruction of its first Court house. It is a fine picture. The Captain has also made complete drawings of the ruins of his own house, from which he and lady so narrowly escaped death, and also of other buildings about the Eclipse company's works.

His Occupation Gone.

It generally requires many years, if not ages, to effect a radical change in prevalent styles of architecture, but the 'dobe style, so far as this section is concerned, is a notable exception. It didn't take over forty seconds to effect a complete revolution in this style of architecture and henceforth the 'dobe maker's occupation is gone. Piles of 'dobes will hereafter be pictured out by parents as bug-a-boos to frighten naughty children into obedience. Individuals, whom John Owens describes as being afflicted with "tremendous lemons," will hereafter be troubled with visions of falling 'dobes instead of "snakes in their boots." Our curb-stone brokers will now sell 'dobe stock short, and guarantee to fill.

Business Again.

We are pleased to state that one of our principal business firms, Harris & Rhine, whose premises were thrown into a heap of ruins, have been enabled to continue their business, with but slight interruption, by re-arranging their extensive stock in their large storehouse, where they are now attending to customers. As stated last week they have already ordered material to erect one of the most spacious storerooms in the valley, and until their new premises are completed they propose selling at greatly reduced prices. We refer the public to their new advertisement.

By Steam Power.

Messrs. Hiskey & Walker are now using steam as a motive power in their mill at Deep Spring. We have previously mentioned that they had obtained Mr. Chaquette's steam thresher engine for this purpose. They had it in motion in less than ten hours after it reached the ground. With this additional power (about 12-horse) they will be enabled to keep the mill in steady operation, and we doubt not that the amount of bullion turned out will be something extraordinarily large.

The Missing "Ads."

We ask a little indulgence from many of our patrons, whose advertisements are under process of resetting. However, they will all appear next week; and we would suggest to the business men and firms who are not advertising that a great many new ones ought to accompany them. If you want business ask the public for it; give advertising—the new philosopher's stone—a fair trial, and reap the benefit of an investment that gives cent. per cent. returns. Try it on.

In Error.

It appears we were in error in stating that the Black Rock saw mill was in operation. The grade between the mill and timber was badly filled up with rocks, and otherwise injured so that a number of days were required to put it in condition for hauling logs. The mill will not be fairly in operation before next week, although Messrs. Smith & Engle are doing all in their power to get things in shipshape.

The Deep Spring Road.

Messrs. Greenley & Co. are steadily at work on their new grade over the Inyo range, clearing it out as fast as they can. The present amount of travel is not near sufficient to reimburse them for the outlay but they are going ahead all the same, and by the time it is required they will have an A 1 road, and we hope a paying one.

How it Is.

The reason nothing can be done to stop the shakes, more general and disagreeable here than in the worst swamps of Indiana, is possibly due to the scarcity of quinine, all of which was absorbed by 'dobes not long since. Mother Earth needs an opiate very much, too.

Work on Hand.

The job department of THE INDEPENDENT office now has more work on hand than ever at any one time before since the establishment of the paper. This is encouraging, to say the least. But don't stop your orders on this account.

Rothschild & Co.

This well known firm this week make their re-appearance in our advertising columns, inviting attention to their fine stock. Jeems talks sense, and the liberal dealing of this well known firm lends a point to their pertinent style of putting it.

Another Victim.

We hear that Charles Pierce, who was injured at the Eclipse mine during the late earthquake, died of his wounds at Camp Independence hospital, this morning. This makes the twenty-seventh death from the great calamity.

In Town.

Mr. Hiskey, of Deep Spring, was in town during the present week on the look out for a retort, the one hitherto used in their mill having barsted. He was successful in getting one.

Next Week.

We are in the receipt of a humorous piece of dialect poetry, which will be given next week. Another, concerning a lover's busted he-art and things is respectfully declined.

Time Table.

Consult the new advertisements for matters of interest connected with the northern stage lines.

The Shakes, up to Date,

Recur at intervals of from ten to twenty hours, but except from the association, are nowise alarming.

Board of Supervisors.

The Board of Supervisors held a special meeting commencing on Monday last, for the purpose of again making a drawing of jurors for the ensuing year. After this business was completed, the general situation referring to Court house and bridges was discussed; under the District Attorney's rendering of the law, they did not feel authorized to do anything in these matters until the regular May term, except to repair the Lone Pine bridge temporarily so as to permit the crossing of the mail, and order the wreck of the Bend City bridge to be cleared out. That is all well enough, but it certainly could not have been any great stretch of authority to have made some order in reference to the Court house wreck, for the want of which it will now, wind, weather and earthquakes permitting, have to remain nearly two months more in statu quo, a lasting memento, or monument, to mark the exact locality of the "Great Center of Action"—of earthquakes, not of man. It has one thing to recommend it, though, that should not be lost sight of, viz.: it will afford an excellent opportunity to the savants to note the physical effects, in connection with other phenomena, of earthquakes, and be particularly reassuring to buyers of Inyo county bonds. It shows that we as a people have the recuperative abilities and "get up" (at 2:30, A. M.) sufficient for all practical purposes. We rather like such strict laws; but if Capt. Jim and his band in Legislature assembled couldn't make better we would propose to kill him.

Lone Pine.

Many of the business men of Lone Pine are hard at work getting into new quarters. The Loomis Brothers have a portion of their stock placed in a temporary frame, constructed from such material as they had on hand. The roof of the old building has been raised bodily, and the sides of a new storeroom will be put under it. The Opposition store of C. & M. Cohn has been relocated, and now ready for business, in the frame of J. B. Stratton, while Stratton is ensconced in a portion of Briggs' saloon. V. Hoff has re-established himself in a good wooden house on the former site of his adobe. Rockwell Loomis and in fact all the other wounded are, so far as we can learn, rapidly recovering. It is reported that three or four loads of lumber are on the way from Los Angeles, which will find a ready market. It is also said that a load of clothing has been sent as a contribution. If true, this is about as absurd an operation as we ever heard of.

Is it True or Not?

Some people are anxious to know whether it is a fact that one member of a firm who report having lost $18,000 by the quake really did swear his assessment down to $2,200 before the Board of Equalization, a few months since.

Examinations.

County Superintendent Symmes notifies all interested that the Board of Examination will inquire into the qualification of applicants for appointment to the State Normal School, on the 20th instant.

Lost.

John Wentworth has been so unlucky as to lose a check. See notice.

PACIFIC COAST HEADAGRAMS.

The Eureka and Palisade stage was stopped and the passengers robbed of money and jewels by four masked men March 20. Clifford and Parsons, two escaped State Prison convicts, are supposed to have been with the robbers. Wells, Fargo & Co.'s box was chopped open but did not pan out very well.

The "Inyo county earthquake" is credited with having entirely stopped the flow of water in some of the artesian wells at Los Angeles, and those still flowing do so in diminished quantities.

The Shasta county hospital was entirely destroyed by fire April 3. All the inmates escaped.

The Merced woolen mills and the Nelson flour mills were totally destroyed by fire on the 4th instant. Loss $150,000; no insurance.

A dispatch dated San Diego, April 2, says:

In the Penasquitos valley the late earthquake opened the springs to such an extent that the flow of water has increased over four fold. The reservoir, which it formerly took 3½ to 4 days to fill, now fills in 20 hours. There is now a sufficiency to irrigate the whole valley. The earthquake fifteen years ago had the effect of partially closing these springs.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Twelve conspirators made a late attempt to assassinate the Mikado or Tenno of Japan. It failed, but caused much apprehension in Yedo, and fears that there may be a wide-spread disaffection.

Madrid gives a very large majority in the primary elections against the Ministerial party. Some of the leading provinces, as Valencia, Seville and Alicante, have gone the other way.

Sir Travers Twiss, late Queen's attorney, has become insane over the frailities of his wife, recently exposed in court.

Dizraeli appears to be making up a strong Tory opposition in the House of Lords and among the people of England. His main reliance is the Alabama question, on which Gladstone is now unpopular.

The London Globe prints a rumor that the American Alabama claims have been figured up to $14,000,000 for private damages and $2,000,000 damages by the Government of the United States in pursuing and capturing the privateers fitted out in England. Gladstone is called on for an explanation.

A reaction in favor of the Bonapartists is the latest sensation in Paris. The cause of it is Marshal McMahon's testimony in the Trochu libel case, which acquits the late Emperor of all responsibility of the Sedan disaster.

—Speaking of theoretical farming, Josh Billings says he once knew a man who wouldn't even set a gate post without having the ground analyzed to see if it possessed the proper ingredients for post-holes.

Earthquakes—Their Cause.

[From The Sacramento Union, March 30.]

EDITORS UNION:—Some three months since the writer of this article made some predictions in regard to earthquakes and high tides. They were predicated on the fact that the planet Jupiter was approaching the earth, and on the 15th of January would be at his nearest point. From the 15th to the 25th the highest tides known happened on this coast, and from December to the present time the earth has been in a constant tremor. We did not fix the time for those unwelcome visitors, or state for a fact that they would occur, but that they might, from the influence of this planet. Jupiter is a planet of immense proportions—some 1,400 times larger than the earth—and his influence extends through the entire system. He attracts the planets Saturn and Mars; he opens the luminous atmosphere that surrounds the sun, and causes the spots on his surface to a certain degree. Astronomy demonstrates that the attraction of Jupiter upon the earth is inversely proportioned to the square of his distance from us. Geology teaches that the center of the earth is in a state of fusion. Hence earthquakes may happen from internal causes, unaided by planetary attraction. But when a planet so large as Jupiter is nearer the earth by one hundred millions of miles the tendency to lift the comparatively thin crust of the same is proportionately greater. No one will deny the fact of the moon's creating the tides, and if her attraction is sufficient to elevate the tidal wave may she not elevate the land in proportion? Water is about eight times lighter than than earth. Therefore the moon must elevate the land one-eighth as much as it does the water. Science has proven this to be the fact. The spectroscope, which analyzes the stars and planets, tells the undisputed fact of the common origin of those bodies. The same minerals which exist in the earth are found to exist in the distant star Aldebaran. Sixteen minerals common in the earth are found in metallic vapors in the sun's photosphere. Now, I contend that if those bodies are the same physically (and the solar spectrum proves them so to be) they must be subject to the same changes. Some years since a comet was attracted and drawn from its orbit by the power of Jupiter. It was lost amongst his moons and never afterward seen. If he can so attract one of these erratic bodies, can he not in like proportion attract the earth? On the 15th of January he was nearest to us, and on the 16th, or the next day, happened the great earthquake at Shemacha, in Russia, destroying that town with great loss of life. Great storms and earthquakes have swept over the entire globe, awakening apprehensions in the minds of all. Do not the above facts prove what I have stated in the beginning? We are still under the influence of this planet, and will be till about the 10th of April. But as I intend to give a free lecture on this subject, I will conclude for the present.

GEO. MADEIRA.

A Centenarian.

There is at present living at the San Gabriel Mission, an old native Californian lady, whose eyes have seen the passing away of several generations. She claims to be 132 years old. She was a mother at the time the Mission church was built—102 years ago. Her hair is as white as the driven snow, but her eye sight is as keen as that of a child, and her step as firm as that of a woman a century younger. She is an expert as a worker of embroidery, and executes the finest work without the aid of glasses. Every day, weather permitting, she may be seen in the fields or orchards near by her residence, busy at work with her needle. A specimen of her handiwork was exhibited at the Industrial Department of the last Agricultural Fair, and drew forth the admiration of all those who saw it. Her memory is unimpaired; and she converses vivaciously of events of the past appertaining to the San Gabriel valley—her world. She recalls without hesitation, the reminiscences of her younger days, and recounts with evident pleasure to those who feel sufficiently interested to ply her with questions relating to them. In all appearance the old lady gives fair promise to outlive many of us who are more than a century her juniors.—Los Angeles News.

Early Earthquake.

Previous to the catastrophe at Lone Pine there had been no earthquake in California attended with loss of life since the great shock of 1812, which destroyed the Mission of San Juan Capistrano, in Los Angeles county, and the Mission of Purissima, in Santa Barbara county, which are about 170 miles apart, and both near the coast. These Missions were built of adobes, the churches being pretty large and heavy, but not very strong structures. The shock occurred on a Sunday in September, and the first shake prostrated the church at San Juan, burying in its ruins many who were there worshiping at the time, the number of lives lost being variously stated at thirty to forty-five. A number of lives were also lost at the Purissima Mission. Two or three deaths resulted from the earthquake of October, 1868, at San Leandro and San Francisco, caused by the falling of brick patapets upon persons passing in the street. There is no reason to suppose that the shock of 1812 was more severe than that of 1868. The buildings of that time were not capable of much resistance, yet had the shock occurred at any other time than Sunday, when people were assembled in church, no lives would probably have been lost.—San Francisco Bulletin, March 30.

—Mrs. and Miss Grant, wife and daughter of the President, sailed for Europe on the 3d inst., in company with Borie, ex-Secretary of the Navy.

EASTERN NEWS.

Barlow, Attorney-General of New York, has entered suit in the Albany Supreme Court to compel Jay Gould and his confederates in the old Erie Railroad directory to disgorge the moneys of which they have plundered the common stockholders of that company. This promises to be one of the most important suits ever tried in America, and has a meaning not pleasant to other railway plundering directories to contemplate.

Charles A. Dana, of The New York Sun, was yesterday before the Naval Investigating Committee to inquire into the truth of the charges published in The Sun, that Secretary Robeson of the Navy is one of the greatest robbers in America. Dana said if the committee were full he would produce the evidence to make good this charge; but the only member of the committee desirous of an investigation (Blair of Michigan) is now absent, and he withheld his testimony. The committee declined to wait for Blair's return.

Rhode Island elects a Republican Governor and a Democratic Lieutenant-Governor. The Legislature is largely Republican.

It is thought in New York that the new Tammany organization, which leaves Tweed and the rest of the old "ring" thieves out in the cold, will carry the next city election by an overwhelming majority.

In the lower house of Congress the Committee of Ways and Means have agreed on sixty-five cents as the tax on whisky and twenty cents on tobacco.

Vogt, the Brussels murderer, has been jailed in New York and is held to answer the charge of murder in that city.

Tom Fitch and Delegate Hooper were yesterday elected United States Senators by the Assembly of the self constituted State of Utah. The Senate elected Hooper, but Fitch lacked one vote of a majority.

Major General Hancock, Commanding the Department of Dakota, has addressed a letter to The Sioux City Times for publication, announcing that as Black Hills region is an Indian reservation, he shall prevent by the use of troops if necessary, any prospecting parties entering. He adds an official letter from General Stanley in command in that region, which says no gold has been found in Black Hills.

The Democrats carried the St. Louis municipal election on the 2d instant, by a large majority.

Editorial Visit.

Mr. Kelly, of The San Francisco Chronicle, paid us a visit Wednesday last, he having been sent out by that enterprising, though rather too much sensational, journal to write up a full report of the earthquake. We were much prepossessed in Mr. Kelly's favor, and have no hesitation in saying that his report based on what he saw himself will be strictly reliable. At least we feel assured he has no desire to misrepresent facts, as might be inferred by his Visalia dispatches. These were given as received from frightened individuals just from the scene of action, and naturally enough supposed to be reliable. He has had a large number of photographic views taken of the ruins at Lone Pine, and also one or more sketches furnished by Captain Scoones, all of which are to be reproduced in the columns of The Chronicle, which paper has certainly displayed commendable enterprise in going to so much expense in order to lay the real facts and circumstances before its readers. Mr. Kelly started on his return via the southern route, Thursday morning last.

Surveying Expedition.

L. H. Shortt, Civil Engineer of the California Pacific Railroad Company, left Sacramento on Wednesday with three car loads of outfit to superintend the surveying of the route of the Southern Pacific Railroad from Tehechepi to the Colorado, near Fort Mojave. He will have a corps of seventeen men, and will probably be about six months in completing the work. As the country is comparatively unknown, they take with them everything that prudence suggests may be necessary.—Vallejo Chronicle, March 29.

IN MEMORIAM.

At a meeting of Inyo Lodge U. D. Free and Accepted Masons, held on the 27th day of March A. L. 5872, A. D. 1872, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted.

WHEREAS—It having pleased the Grand Master of the Universe to call from labor below to refreshment above our beloved brother HENRY THEGELLAS, we who survive bow in humble submission to His Supreme Decree. Therefore, be it

Resolved—That we deplore the loss of our worthy brother, and feel the void left in our midst.

Resolved—That in the death of our brother HENRY THEGELLAS our Fraternity has lost a zealous and faithful Mason, and the community a useful citizen.

Resolved—That as Masons we deeply sympathize with the bereaved widow and family of our late brother, and tender to them our heartfelt sympathy and condolation in this, their hour of affliction and bereavement.

Resolved—That the jewels and furniture of this Lodge be draped in mourning for thirty days.

Resolved—That these resolutions be spread upon our minutes and a copy be presented to the widow of our deceased brother, and also a copy be published in THE INYO INDEPENDENT four weeks.

"Art thou weary, art thou languid, art thou sore distressed?
"Tending, following, keeping, struggling, is He sure to bless?

Where the Gold Goes.

In the reign of Darius, gold was thirteen times more valuable, weight for weight, than silver. In the time of Plato it was twelve times more valuable. In that of Julius Cæsar, gold was only nine times more valuable, owing, perhaps, to the enormous quantities of gold seized by him in his wars. It is a natural question to ask—what became of the gold and silver? A paper read before the Polytechnic Association by Dr. Stevens, recently, is calculated to meet this inquiry. He says of our annual gold product, fully fifteen per cent. goes to Europe; twenty-five per cent. to Cuba: fifteen per cent. to Brazil; five per cent. direct to Japan, China, and the Indies; leaving but five per cent. for circulation in this country. Of that which goes to Cuba, the West Indies, and Brazil, fully fifty per cent. finds its way to Europe, where, deducting a large percentage used in manufacturing, four-fifths of the remainder is exported to India. Here the transit of the precious metal is at an end. Here the supply, however vast, is absorbed, and never returns to the civilized world. The Orientals consume but little, while their productions have ever been in demand among the Western nations. As mere recipients, these nations have acquired the desire of accumulation and hoarding, a fashion common alike to all classes among the Egyptians, Chinese and Persians. A French economist says, in his opinion the former nation alone can hide away $20,000,000 of gold and silver annually, and the present emperor of Morocco is reported as so addicted to this avaricious mania, that he has filled seventeen large chambers with the precious metals. The passion of princes, it is not surprising that the same spirit is shared by their subjects, and it is in this predilection that we discover the solution of the problem as to the ultimate disposition of the precious metals. This absorbtion by the Eastern nations, has been uninterruptedly going on since the most remote historical period. According to Pliny, as much as $100,000,000 in gold was, in his day, annually exported to the East. The balance of trade in favor of those nations is now given as $80,000,000.

VARIETIES.

—"To Wrent" says a sign on a house in Detroit.

—Two curious suicides have taken place at Paris, both occasioned by the remorse of the victims at having scolded their wives.

—"What can be more harrowing to your soul than the thought of wasted opportunities?" asked a teacher of a bright boy. "A peg in my boot harrows my sole more'n anything else," replied the boy.

—A Massachusetts State constable who recently entered a store to make a seizure, because of information that something had just been tapped there, was intensely disgusted to find it was only a pair of boots.

—A Kentucky legislator sent up the following memorandum to the clerk: "Leeve is asked to bring in A Bill to alter the time for the Legislater to meat. Referred to the comity on Religen."

—Sunset Cox made rather a good point on Judge Kelley, of Pennsylvania, when he called him "the perturbed ghost of pig-iron." Judge Kelley received the hit with a pig-ironical smile.

—A new safe has been invented which makes things very unpleasant for burglars. The walls are filled with gunpowder in such a manner that the blows of a sledge or cutting of a chisel, in the attempt to rob the safe, will ignite the powder, blow off the outer crust, annihilate the burglar, and leave the contents of the safe uninjured.

—An Illinois paper relates that during the cold weather on Thursday last the city editor of The Jacksonville Journal froze his ears about a foot deep. They are to be amputated at the second joint; but his many friends will be rejoiced to know that, in spite of the accident, he still has an ample stock for all the purposes of his position.

—A person who wrote to Treasure Spinner asking for his autograph and "sentiment," received the following reply: "You ask for my autograph with a sentiment. My sentiment is this: When a gentleman writes an other on his own business he should enclose a postage stamp."

—It is said that a white man is swindling the negroes of Mississippi with the statement that the emancipation proclamation by Lincoln had been burned at Chicago, and that it would require a large amount of money to get up another; and that unless the thing was done soon, slavery would be restored and they would all go back into servitude.

—There are two kinds of stock that are doing remarkably well this Winter in Northern Colorado—coyotes and buzzards. They may be seen at any hour in every direction feasting on the carcass of some poor animal that has succumbed to a frozen fate. Thousands of antelopes have perished on the plains, and as they sought protection near the settlements, hundreds were shot down by heartless scoundrels and left to be devoured by carnivorous beasts and birds.

—The following is a verbatim copy of a letter recently received by a schoolmaster in Indiana, from a householder in his locality: "Cur, ass you are a man of nolege, I wish to intur my sun in your skull." The obscurity and seeming offensiveness of this address disappear on translation. What was intended to be written was: "Sir, as you are a man of knowledge, I wish to enter my son in your school."

—A handsome young man walked into the Adams Express office the other day, and desired to express a package of letters to a lady, to whom he desired to return them. "What are they worth?" asked the clerk, who in making out his account desired to know what was the risk. The young man hesitated a moment, then clearing his throat from a certain huskiness, replied: "Well, I can't exactly say, but a few weeks ago I thought they were worth four hundred thousand dollars."

—In a divorce case pending in Ohio the grounds of the husband's application are that his wife insists that he shall kill the old cat that has been with them for ten years. He says "it is not because he hates to part with the animal, but the job is too much to ask of him while he is in feeble health as at present." He has drowned her twice, shot fourteen rifle balls through her vitals, given her half a pound of strychnine, and the only effect perceptible is a trifle more tone in her voice and a bay window over one eye. This is one of the peculiar concatenations of fortuitious circumstances on record.

BY W. H. CREIGHTON.

Somedings happen to me dis morning, my fren',

Von Irishman comes in about half past ten,
Und he ask if I got any brown stout.

"Zartainly," I says, "ve keeps everydings here,

From the best coniac to ze Deitch lager beer,
You find no better if you go all aroun'."

"Vell, give me a glass," says ze von Irish Mick;
"For I swear I'm most frozen wid de could."
I yust goes to ze barrel to take out ze stick
When he yell, "hould, Mr. Deitcher, yust hold!"

"When I come to consider 'tis crackers I'll take, Yust a bit's worth, ze price is all one;"
Zen I goes to ze box, und get some leetle cake

Says he, "hould a minute, I guess we can trade
Dese crackers, you see, won't do me no good."
So I'll yust take ze porter—'tis too long I staid
So hurry up if you plaze, Mr. Stroude."

I draw him ze porter, and he drink wit a smack,
Zen he puts down ze glass on ze shelf;
Und widout saying von word he turns mit his back
Und was starting to make off mit himself.

I spoke to him kintly—says I, "Mister, look here,
You not pay for zat liquor," I says;
"Not pay you," says he, "don't I trade crackers for beer?
What more do you want, if you plaze?"

"Yes," but I says, "you don't pay for ze cracks;"
You got dem," says he, "dat is clear,
You see a leedle bit mix or you make some mistake;"
Und zen, as I live, he valks off on his ear.

Now how you make dat? How comes it dat way?
Dat Irishman surely take me for a fool!
But I tell you, my fren', ze I drink lager all day,
By shing! I no can get dat thro' my wool!

About Hair—A Little Crinological Lore.

Red hair, some years ago, was not admired, yet now it is almost as much esteemed as yellow, as barbers—we beg pardon, "crinologist," as they term themselves nowadays—by means of certain "charms" can produce upon it a beautiful golden yellowish sheen, that out-yellows yellow itself. Red hair was always an object of aversion among the ancients. Ages before the time of Judas Iscariot red hair was thought a mark of reprobation. Typhon and Nebuchadnezzar are instances of this, the former who acquired it because he deprived his brother of the sceptre of Egypt, and the latter who bore it in expiation of his atrocities. Even the donkey tribe suffered from this ill-omened visitation, according to the proverb "wicked as a red ass." Asses of that color were held in such detestation by the Copts, that every year they sacrificed one by hurling it from a high wall. Black hair was not much esteemed by the Romans, but red hair was detested. Auburn or light brown was thought the most distinguished, as portending intelligence, industry, a peaceful disposition, as well as a great susceptibility to the tender passion. Castor and Pollux had brown hair; so also had Menelaus. The hair most in esteem was such as hung in long curling locks, like that of the unfortunate Absalom. Dares, the historian, states that Achilles and Ajax Telamon had long curling locks; such also was the hair of Timon, the Athenian. The Emperor Augustus, we are told, had such an abundance of long curling locks that no barber in Rome could produce anything like a successful imitation of it even. If our fair sex make themselves conspicuous by wearing hair from pagan heads, such as Chinese pigtails, Indian scalps and Tougataboo chowaries "worked up" into Brobdignagian chignons, the "lords of creation" scorn the idea in 1872, though in 1772 the maccaronies, as the exquisites of the time were called, wore a similar adornment to the chignon, only turned upside down, as it were, and the top part was called a "toupee." In the play of "The Modern Husband" we read: "I meet with nothing but a parcel of toupet coxcombs who plaster up their brains upon their periwigs," alluding to the pomatum with which they were covered. "Pigtails were in vogue at one time, although we laugh at the Celestials of the "flowery kingdom" who wear them now. In 1772 nothing was thought of a man without that appurtenance; in 1780 the tail was unraveled and hung loose; then was tied and turned up in a knot; and towards the end of the century, wigs et id loc went out of fashion.

"Uneasy is the Head that Wears a Crown."

Queen Victoria is, personally, perhaps, one of the best and most amiable sovereigns that ever occupied a throne, yet she has been made the victim of no less than five assaults upon her person, which are thus enumerated by an exchange paper: In 1840, a pot-boy named Oxford shot at her in the same spot on which Arthur O'Connor made the last attempt. Prince Albert was in the carriage with her. The Queen rose, but the Prince seized her dress and pulled her down upon the seat of the carriage, which was a low one. Oxford's second shot was aimed too high, and thus the Queen's life was saved. Two years afterward, one John Francis shot at her on Constitution Hill. The Queen, on this occasion, showed great coolness, and ordered the coachman to drive on. Francis was transported for life, although sentenced to death originally. Six weeks afterward, a boy named Bean pointed a pistol at her which missed fire. He was transported. The next attack (1850) was made by an officer of the army named Pete, who struck the Queen in the face and on the head with a heavy cane. The Queen, on this occasion, was also very cool, calming the fears of her children, who were with her and thought her very badly injured.

On one occasion, also, a young man secreted himself in the Queen's apartment in St. James' Palace, but did not succeed in his attempt at assassination with a pistol. He was found to be insane. So many attempts on the life of an unoffending monarch, and that monarch a woman, form a curious episode in the history of the crowned heads of the world. Here we have the most popular of them all exposed to the pistol of the assassin a greater number of times by far than the most despised and hated.

An Unmerciful and Unmusical Judge.

At a Detroit police office the other day, James Ryan, a negro, pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy. "You see how it is, Judge," said he. "I can't neither read nor write; I ain't got no home nor nuffin to do, an' I'se been in jail, an' I spec if you lem me go dis time I don't whistle no mo' in dis yere town." James is a whistler by profession, and with his mouth produces a peculiar combination of sounds not unlike a cross between the noise of a locomotive whistle and a Japanese fiddle, and gives entertainments in saloons and other such places for whatever money he can pick up. "What is your business, James?" asked the Court. "I am a whistler, sir," he said, and he jammed his hat under his arm, and prepared to get himself into position to hum one of his favorite airs, when the Judge suggested "that will do. I have no ear for music to-day"—and the musician subsided. For a few moments a death-like stillness pervaded the court-room, and then the face of the prisoner assumed an expression of deep sorrow, not, evidently, because the Court had refused to listen to his music, but because there was a lively prospect of his being consigned to listen to the machinery at the House of Correction. Then there was a profuse leakage about the eyes of the whistler, prior to which sorrow was spread all over his countenance, and the facial expression was sad to behold. "There, that will do," remarked the Court; "I do not object to your weeping, if you want to; but I do remonstrate against such excessive preparations for it." And then James was ordered to pay a fine of $10 or go up for three months. He lacked precisely $9 83 of having the amount, and went to prison.

The Farmer.

The man who stands upon his own soil, who feels that by the laws of the land he is the rightful, exclusive owner of the land which he tills, is, by the constitution of nature, under a wholesome influence, not easily imbibed from any other source. He feels, other things being equal, more strongly than another, the character of a man as the lord of the animate world. Of his great and powerful sphere, which, fashioned by the hand of God and upheld by His power, is rolling through the heavens, a portion is his; is his from the centre to the sky. It is the space on which the generation before him moved on its round of duties; and he feels himself connected by a visible link with those who follow him, and to whom he is to transmit a home. Perhaps his farm has come down to him from his fathers. They have gone to their last home; but he can trace their footsteps over the scenes of his daily labor. The roof that shelters him was reared by those to whom he owes his being. Some interesting domestic tradition is connected with every enclosure. The favorite fruit tree was planted by his father's hand. He sported beside the brook, which still winds through the meadow. Through the fields lies the path to the village school of earlier days. He still hears from his window the solemn voice of the Sabbath bell which called his father and forefathers to the house of God, and near at hand is the spot where his parents laid down to rest, and where, when the time is come, he shall be laid by his children. These are the feelings of the owners of the soil. Words cannot paint them, gold cannot buy them; they flow out of the dearest fountain of the heart; they are the life-spring of a fresh, healthy and generous national character.

ONE MILLION SQUARE MILES.

The late earthquake generally spoken of as the "Inyo earthquake," appears to have affected a greater area of territory than any other ever known. We have definite accounts of its effects from the city of Mexico to the Oregon line, a reach of 2,000 miles north and south and nearly 500 miles in the opposite direction. In fact, on the same day and the same hour, local time, it was felt at Paducah, Kentucky, but it was not unmarked at intermediate points east of the Rocky mountains. At Camp Cady, Arizona, its force was sufficient to move heavy Government wagons several feet. No damages of note are reported from any place outside of this county.

Up to the 10th instant repeated shocks have been felt throughout the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys and into the mountains as far as Truckee and Lassen county; where the latest was much heavier than any of the preceding, not excepting the first. Whatever may be the cause or effects, these facts go to show plainly enough that these terrible convulsions are not the result of a purely local disturbance spreading its wave of motion for thousands of miles around, and that so far as human knowledge goes, the supposed center of action or starting point is a myth. Mount Vesuvius, on the opposite side of the world almost, is now in an active state of eruption, but the causes that produced that result probably have no connection whatever with this great earthquake.

The shock of the 26th ultimo seems to have mainly followed the direction of the Sierra Nevada and Sierra Madre—southeast and northwesterly, although the volcano of Colima, in Mexico, on a westerly branch of the Sierra Madre, also burst forth in a state of eruption on the day of the shock, a fact which renders it extremely probable that there was some immediate connection with the activity of this volcano and the phenomenon observed in this State.

PHENOMENA OF EARTHQUAKES.

Scientific men everywhere are busy in investigating the case of those terrible convulsions of the earth—earthquakes, and there is a faint hope that something of value may be adduced from their inquiries. It seems to be generally conceded that electricity in some form is the prime cause of these movements of the earth. It is much to be hoped that some person or persons, possessing the necessary scientific attainments, will pay this section a visit. No better place or opportunity was ever presented to American scientists to investigate these phenomena on their own soil than this county has afforded during the past three or four weeks. For the information of such, we will mention a few facts, mainly relating to electrical phenomena, that has occurred within our knowledge.

A few days after the big shock, so called, at Cerro Gordo very loud thunder was heard during a violent snow storm. With the exception of the snow the same thing occurred here and perhaps other places in the valley. This is remarkable because almost unprecedented.

Immediately following the great shock, men, whose judgment and veracity is beyond question, while sitting on the ground near the Eclipse mine, saw sheets of flame on the rocky sides of the Inyo mountains but a half mile distant. These flames, observed in several places, waved to and fro apparently clear of the ground, like vast torches; they continued for only a few minutes.

In this office one day last week, while one of the proprietors was running a large number of small sheets of flat-cap paper through a job press these sheets after leaving the press were affected by the movements of the operator's hand, as a strong magnet would affect iron filings. When his hand was near them the whole pile, or at least a hundred of them from the top, seemed to float in the air like tissue paper in a slight breeze. The top sheet would raise at each end up to the hand when held four inches above it and thus by attraction be moved entirely away from the others.

At other times during the night sparks of fire were repeatedly emitted from a woolen shawl, on being touched by the hand.

At the Kearsarge mill, located at an altitude of nearly 8,000 feet above the sea, the following occurrence was noted by Harry Clawson and P. J. Joslyn. The former, while sitting with his knee in about three inches of a cast iron stove, felt a peculiar numbing sensation, and supposing his limbs were "asleep," essayed to rub them with his hand. As soon as his hand touched his knee he felt a shock, and immediately after and for a number of seconds, a stream of fire ran between both knees and the stove.

We will here, on the authority of a man who had an opportunity of knowing, state that the item going the rounds to the effect that no movement of the earth was observable 300 feet under ground in the mines, is not correct. At Cerro Gordo and also at the Eclipse mine, the rocking motion was distinctly observed, especially in the timbering. Small particles of rock were detached, and in both places the miners went to the surface in alarm, but at Cerro Gordo they soon resumed work as before. No subsequent shock has been remarked at that depth.

ABOUT CAMP INDEPENDENCE.

It behooves our citizens generally to take some action in reference to the proposed removal of Camp Independence. This Post should not only be retained here but should be made complete and permanent in every respect. Its removal at this crisis cannot be considered in any other light than as a misfortune, more disastrous and demoralizing in its effects than the great earthquake. It is the only military or Government station in a vast region extending nearly five hundred miles in every direction. In this region there are several thousand of Indians, wild and tame, but all bound together by a common tie, liable at any moment to break out into active hostility, or some minor acts of agression that will inevitably result in a prolonged and expensive Indian war. The moral effect of this Post upon both races is of the greatest importance. Its maintanaince here or some convenient point, is as essential to the security of the Indians against lawless whites as for the opposite reason, and we will venture the assertion that six months will not pass after this Post is taken away until a general war ensues, or some outrages occur, sufficiently alarming to depopulate the country to some extent, or necessitate the recall of the military.

This Post should, and does hold the same relation to this vast region that Fort Boise does to that of Idaho. It is needed here to maintain order and peace between the two races; as the only reliable force that can be brought to bear in the arrest of outlaws, for which our isolated region affords a favorite field of action and asylum; as a base of explorations over a great unexplored region, the development of which depends greatly thereon, which important duty can only be properly and effectually done by well prepared Government expeditions, and last but not least, its withdrawal at this time will be looked upon as a positive wrong and injustice upon a community, every member of which has enough other difficulties and discouragements to contend against without having the fear and danger of Indian troubles added.

This Post can be maintained as cheap, perhaps, as any frontier station in the United States, and directly and indirectly its maintainance here will conduce more to the ultimate advantage of the Government than the same expenditure could possibly do elsewhere.

We hope that some of our leading men will take upon themselves the duty of laying all the facts bearing upon this case before the proper authorities at once. It is useless and worse than useless to send on petitions, depending on the force of the number of signatures. Every officer in the United States army knows full well that these petitions can be produced in objection to the removal of Government stations of any kind, no matter much what the facts may be. We must show by simple straightforward facts and arguments the necessity for not only a temporary but a permanent Post here, and an appropriation should be asked and respectfully insisted upon to rebuild and make it a permanent institution, at least until such time as the increase of population or construction of railroads may render it unnecessary. There is no present liklihood that either of these contingencies will occur for some time to come, and hence the greater need for this Post to be continued.

"STOP MY PAPER."

We infer from the tenor of a number of notes received by us in the past few days, the burden of which is conveyed in the above caption, that we have mortally offended a large number, if not all the good people of Lone Pine. Well, we can only say that nothing was further from our intention or expectation, but as we are not conscious of having ever misrepresented or done any intentional injustice to the inhabitants, individually or collectively, of that town, and further, have in every respect, and on all occasions from first to last, considered ourselves and interests as closely identified with those of that place and people as any other in Inyo county, and furthermore have acted accordingly, we do not feel that we owe one single word of apology to any man or set of men who thus put a gratuitous insult upon us without even deigning to convey a hint of the nature of our offence. We are left to grope in the dark as to the cause of the extraordinary action of the signers of these documents; their names we give below. The earthquake has undoubtedly addled their brains, for otherwise they would never have taken such a childish course as this to right a wrong, either real or supposed.

The most of these notes are in the handwriting of some active, intellectual and highly educated member of the late firm of C. & M. Cohn. These excellent, public spirited American citizens, C. and M. Cohn, are the men who declared they would spend $500 rather submit to a fair taxation of their property then fixed at less than one-third of its real value as proven by subsequent events. These are not the kind of men that ought to lead in a warfare against us, who, whatever our errors or weaknesses, have almost totally ignored past and present personal interests in trying to do our duty toward them and all others alike. We can only account for it for the reason given above, or on the suppositon that we in some way interfered in allowing the charitable to make good their losses.

Next comes P. Rojas, of whom we expected better things, with an insulting note in badly written Spanish.

Then comes S. Zaun, another sufferer, Burroughs & Harvey, L. Munzinger, and last and least, that beautiful man and brother, C. D. Begole, who, in the handwriting of another, informs us that it we come to Lone Pine we "shall have a handsome reception." We knew full well when we saw that signature which way the popular feeling ran, and so did he when he put it there, the terrible man! Hitherto we have neglected to institute any inquiries relative to the extent of the private burial grounds of this ferocious creature. In reason we know it must be largely peopled with the remains of the many unfortunates whom he has devoured, or at least of those who have perished at his hands—by shots directly through the neck. It is awful to contemplate, the consequences of such disfavor; almost as terrifying as a fourth-rate earthquake. We are comforted in the belief, however, that he did not lose his entire stock in trade; he must have saved a little of his "sheep herder's delight," enough for his private use. To this fact we are probably indebted to his self-constituted censorship over the Press, as indicated in this note and more particularly, when at 4 o'clock in the morning he intruded himself upon the privacy of The Chronicle reporter demanding a statement of the nature and character of the report which the said reporter was going to make about Lone Pine. He (this Begole) didn't care what was said about him or his personal losses, but must know the contents of ninety pages of manuscript or it would not be permitted to leave the town. This great censor of the Press and autocrat of Lone Pine don't know to this day what those ninety pages of manuscript really did say, though they did leave the town. Perhaps forty of them sung of Begole, perhaps they didn't.

Now, while we have no apologies to offer for having done what we considered our duty, we will submit a few words of explantion to the sensible portion of the citizens of Lone Pine, relating to points having, we suppose, some bearing in this matter. It don't look well, we will admit, to commence a defence before charges are preferred, but we have something to say in this connection anyhow.

From various circumstances we suppose the ire we have excited is to be attributed to some one or all of these three things, which is the substance of all said on the subject: "These adobe buildings, if reconstructed, would not now be worth one dollar apiece." Or perhaps it was this: "That the sum of the losses, not counting the loss of these buildings, or consequential damages, was placed much too high;" or this: That "in the light of subsequent developments, the efforts being made to obtain aid, were ill-advised and ought to be stopped." These cover the whole ground of offence, so far as we now know. Who is there to dispute the truth of any of these propositions? Such a person can't be found outside of Lone Pine, and except on the last, not even there. In regard to the first, if there is any man in Inyo county who would in the face of the late horrible experience of adobe buildings give one dollar or one cent for one of them to be occupied as a permanent dwelling or place of business, Inyo county posseses a greater fool than we have given her credit for. We meant that remark as here stated, without reference to the first cost, which in many cases amounted to hundreds or thousands of dollars, or the value of the lumber used or movable fittings. How there could be any misconstruction of that sentence is beyond our comprehension; the exact words used, after making allowance for the original cost, were: "which if now rebuilt would not be worth one dollar apiece." If there is now anybody that can find anything offensive in that he is welcome to cherish it till the last days of his existence.

Respecting the next supposition we have this to say: Immediately after the publication of the estimated losses we received letters from prominent residents—not of Bishop Creek, or Cerro Gordo, or Independence, but of Lone Pine, calling our attention to the great discrepancy between the tax list and the reported losses. We were requested to publish comparative lists as an advertisement and send bill. We declined, and except for reasons which will appear in good time, we should never probably have referred to anything of the kind. In consideration of the circumstances when these estimates were made—the apparent direct and consequential losses, there was nothing particularly extravagant about them, nor did we consider it our business to show that in many cases the tax lists were so lamentably short of what they should be. When reports of Colonel Whipple's operations came back, taken in connection with other facts, the opinion gained ground, and prevails today, that the alms he might succeed in collecting were to be divided on the basis of these estimates. For ourselves we never entertained any such idea until the present week. In other words we did not believe, and so stated last week, that any business man of Lone Pine, unless completely impoverished would accept one cent's worth of these alms. It seems we were mistaken in part at least. For the sake of these paltry gains there are some there who are anxious to ruin the future prospects and standing of the whole county, by permitting a continuance of the belief abroad that our people generally are financially ruined and in great distress. And when a paper, whose interests above all other institutions are directly identified with all parts alike, dares to intimate that such is not the fact it immediately becomes an object for the spleen of such men. For their immediate advantage we as a people must continue to be represented as in a state of beggary, for whom alms, in quarters and halves, must continue to be solicited from street to street and city to city.

We do not wish to offend any one unnecessarily in these remarks, but we wish to be distinctly understood both as to our present and past views concerning this matter. We honor and respect Colonel Whipple for the energy, promptness and thoroughness he has displayed in trying to alleviate the supposed almost universal distress of the people he represented. In that respect no one could have done better. His motive, as well as that of the Committee which prompted him, is worthy of all commendation, or rather was, in the midst of such terrible surroundings and fearful anticipations. We have not at any time, nor do not now attach any blame whatever for what was then done when the proofs of a great calamity were every where obvious, and with a future portentious of something even worse. It was not what the agent, acting under these impressions and instructions, afterwards done to which exceptions have been taken. He performed his duty, considered in that light, well and thoroughly. The fault was and is, in not putting a stop to a wrong impression as to the real facts affecting not only one locality but the future prospects of a county. There is no such state of affairs existing here to justify the position we as a people occupy in the minds of all from San Francisco to London and back again. We venture the assertion that there is more real distress and destitution existing to-day in the city of San Francisco than there is or has been in all Inyo county. We don't mean to say there is nothing of the kind here or none who need help, but we do mean to say that it is not right or fair to put a whole county in the field, and continue it there week after week, as a first class mendicant begging alms not to relieve absolute distress alone, but to make up mere pecuniary losses. If anyone thinks that we are overdrawing this thing, we refer that person to the appeal of the Mayor of San Francisco, to the urgent appeals of The Chronicle and other San Francisco papers and prominent firms, to the acts of the Trustees of the city of Sacramento, to the columns of The Union, to almost every paper on the coast. It is a fact perfectly obvious that all of these, and we ourselves as a people, have gauged the extent of our misfortune and distress more in accordance with its wonderful and terror inspiring cause than its real extent. Had it occurred exactly to the same general extent from any ordinary calamity, we don't believe there would have been the slightest move in the direction taken in this instance to bring our troubles before the world. Had this calamity originated from any ordinary cause, a four-line paragraph would have told all, perhaps, in the same papers which in this have devoted whole columns to the subject. We are not trying to under rate our losses, much less to say there is no one who needs help; very far from it. There are plenty who need help, but with the fewest exceptions, none but the helpless—widows, orphans and wounded. There are others, too, who have losses beyond compensation by human aid; still a greater number entitled to sympathy and substantial aid, too, in some cases, but not at the price we are now paying for it, the opinions of Cohn & Co. to the contrary notwithstanding. It is help dearly bought if it is intended for such as they—men whose losses are nowhere near total; their trade, good will, resources, every thing except buildings and a portion of stock in trade, all as before. Take Begole, Cohn and Munzinger for example, whose yearly profits, as shown by their tax and loss lists, range from $6,000 to $14,000, and say whether for such objects of charity we are to continue begging until nothing more can be obtained, and that, too, in the name of a whole community. We object, and that objection is endorsed by nine-tenths of the people of this county, many of whom have lost as much or more in proportion than any of them, and with no such prospects to regain it. Perhaps they don't expect or ask any of the proceeds thus obtained. We certainly had no idea, last week, that they did, but if not why take such dudgeon when we intimated as delicately as we could that those who originated this business, commendable enough in its conception, ought to be the first to a stop it when it was doing themselves and all besides more harm than good? We now know, though we did not at that time, that the only reason why a request, signed by a number of persons, to have the further collection of money stopped, did not go to San Francisco was out of regard to those who set it motion, and in the expectation that they would do it themselves. We also know that the general feeling from the northern portion of the county down, is one of mortification that it has been permitted to go on so long, anyhow in the name of a county possessing enough of everything to prevent absolute want and distress therefrom. A very few days after the calamity was enough to demonstrate that no such state of affairs existed here as has been represented abroad, and full three weeks was long enough to use such statements as a working capital. If any of those whom we have named or any others wish to recuperate their fortunes in this manner, let them take the field on their own responsibility; no one will object, but don't try to keep up the impresssion that Inyo county, whose natural resources and immediately available necessaries to comfort are scarcely second to any other in this State, is a pauper and on its last legs.

DECISION IN A LAND CASE.

Mr. Wilson Butler, Register at the Land Office, Aurora, has favored us with a copy of a decision of a land case from the Commissioner. Mr. Butler remarks: "The hearing was had at this office, January 8, 1869, while Mr. Ackley was Receiver. The Register and Receiver disagreed as to who had the right to the land. The Register's opinion was in favor of Collins, the Receiver's the reverse. It caused quite an excitement at the time, and this decision will doubtless be of interest to a number on Bishop Creek."

In an other decision, which we can not publish, where James Hays and Chas. F. Hildason, of Round Valley, are the parties, Hildason is awarded the land. Following is the decision first mentioned:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, March 30, 1872.

Register and Receiver, Aurora, Nevada; Gentlemen: This office has considered the testimony in the contested case of John Phelan, Administrator of the estate of P. P. Corning, deceased, vs. George Collins, who made homestead entry No. 3, December 1, 1869, N. W. ¼ Sec. 31, Township 6, S. R. 33 East, unoffered land.

It appears from a bill of sale forming part of the case that said Corning purchased the possessory claim of one Sinclair covering the land in question, May 16, 1868. The testimony shows that Corning was residing on the land at the date of his death, October 1, 1869.

It does not appear that said Corning ever applied to file a D. S. for the land during his life time, or that the application of Mr. Phelan as Administrator to file a D. S. December 24, 1869, was within three months from the date of settlement by said Corning.

The said homestead by Collins being prior to the application by said Phelan this office must decline to disturb said homestead entry.

Please notify all parties in interest of this action, allowing 60 days for appeal.

Very respectfully,
W. W. CURTIS,
Acting Commissioner.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

In Continuation.

Our old maternal parent Earth has not, as yet, resumed her wonted condition of quietude. On Saturday last a very severe shock in Round Valley, 60 miles north of this place, occasioned the fall of a number of buildings previously damaged by the monster shake, raising a thick dust which enveloped the entire valley. We are unable to designate the houses thrown down, but believe that there was no one injured. They had a subsequent one, also, nearly as violent, neither of which were more than felt at this point. On the 18th, at 4 o'clock A. M., a shock of unusual severity took place at Cerro Gordo, distant 45 miles southeasterly. There is no damage reported, however. Numerous temblors have occurred throughout the valley, though with less force and frequency than during the previous week, and none have been remarked in this place since yesterday forenoon. So far as we have seen or heard these continued manifestations occasion no alarm, but all are compelled to give more thought than is their wont to the wondrous power of the great Ruler of the Universe.

Close Call.

Yesterday afternoon sparks from a fire at Uncle Abe Parker's blacksmith shop fell through the unfinished roof of Joe Harris' new building, setting fire to the cloth lining. Very fortunately, indeed, it was discovered in time to prevent the conflagration which bid fair to follow. The town is now all wood, and will soon become a more extensive tinder-box, completely at the mercy of the flames when once started: so it is impossible for our citizens to be too careful. And let our fire company, which seems to be dying from sheer inanition, at least keep up an organization until better times enable us to procure the much needed wherewith to effectually combat the dread monster.

Not Injured.

We notice in some of the Bay papers a statement that the Swansea smelting works were completely demolished, and that the Cerro Gordo furnaces fared but little better during the late shake. The Swansea works sustained no damage except the destruction of the furnace chimney, to replace which an iron smoke-stack was the next day put in position; it was ready for business on the next succeeding day, and did start and has been running ever since. Beyond the cracking of the brick smoke-stacks there was no injury to the furnaces on the hill, and in a few hours both were in regular operation.

Building.

The Executors of the Blaney estate yesterday received the first consignment of lumber for the reconstruction of the destroyed portion of the Exchange Hotel. It will be a large, two story frame, and join directly on to the present commodious lodging house. THE INDEPENDENT proprietors have orders at Lewis' for lumber for a 40 by 16 ground floor office, but some weeks will be consumed in getting it here. Meanwhile our nervous "prints" have to work in the old establishment.

Passable.

In accordance with an order of the Board of Supervisors, John Alexander has constructed from the timbers of the old one a pontoon or floating bridge across the river below Lone Pine, on the Swansea and Cerro Gordo road, for temporary use. The stages now cross it, and several heavy teams have passed. Considering the short time and comparatively light expense, the work has been creditably done.

Their Condition.

All of the Lone Pine wounded are slowly recovering, under the care of Drs. Gelcich and Columber. Gardner is doing very well, but from the nature of his injuries will be a long time confined to his bed. Austin's severe hurts are also slowly healing, and Mrs. Burt, McCartey and the rest are as favorably reported. Rockwell Loomis is out and around, sporting a very festive-looking hat.

Arrived.

The engine, boiler and machinery for the Owens Lake steamer was shipped from Los Angeles on the 1st instant, and is doubtless now on the ground. The date of her trial trip is probably not more than three weeks distant, which occasion will be an event of the profoundest interest. Give us the honor of naming the boat, and then christen her the Bessie Brady.

A New Organ.

A club of subscribers has been formed in Lone Pine for The Visalia Delta—a very sensible move, as The Delta is a good paper. But we would advise our cotem. to present all Lone Pine references in words of one or two sylables only, or else be misunderstood by a certain half dozen of its new constituents.

Returned.

We notice upon our streets the sylph-like form of Mr. J. W. McMurry, just back from a trip below. The Los Angeles News mentions the starting of teams with his new goods. He came via the City of Angels, bringing his eldest daughter home from school.

Worthy of Commendation.

There are many persons who are entitled to the gratitude of the sufferers from the late calamity, and no less to that of the general public, and among these, taking all the facts into consideration, we know of none more worthy than D. J. Canty, of the Orleans Hotel, Lone Pine. Not alone for turning his house into a hospital since the great earthquake, but for giving an asylum to the sick and helpless, greatly to the detriment of his business occasioned thereby, long before that eventful day. A bill against the county for the simple cost of taking care of two indigent sick persons at that time was refused by the Board of Supervisors, not because it was not right or just, but on the ground that it would be establishing a bad precedent. From all the attending circumstances we believe the county ought to pay this bill without a word, and tender Mr. Canty a vote of thanks besides. He took these two persons in and cared for them, notwithstanding the objections of some of his boarders who were annoyed by their groans, and who in consequence left his house; so that when a man sacrifices his business to help the helpless in that manner he ought to be reimbursed if possible.

Back Again.

Mr. I. W. Hunt, of Lone Pine, returned last Sunday from an extended visit to the East. The pleasures of his visit were sadly marred by an attack of that dread disease, small pox, but we are pleased to add that he got off without any marks of disfigurement. He was accampanied by his sister, a widow lady, and her family, all of whom suffered from the same disease while in Missouri and en route for their new home, by which they were detained two months. It must have been a rather discouraging introduction to this lady and family when their eyes were greeted by the sight of so many ruins surrounding their new place of abode.

Thanks.

Mr. H. W. Robinson of the Los Angeles and Owens River Stage Line has our thanks for late Los Angeles dates, received only four days from date of publication, which beats mail receipts all out of time. The Los Angeles line is doing a flourishing business, we are told, and we hope it may always do so.

Capt. Scoones.

In a reference, last week, to Capt. H. D. Scoones, of the Eclipse Co., we stated he served in the Engineers in the Crimea. We now learn it was in H. M. 49th, or Princess Charlotte of Wales regiment in which he served in that war, and saw some pretty rough work—nearly equal to earthquakes.

Daily Stage.

The Independence, Lone Pine and Cerro Gordo Daily Stage Line men publish elsewhere the complete time-table of their road, to which attention is invited. All the lines seem to be carrying full loads each way, and none doing more than this.

Special Term.

Notice is given that a special term of the District Court will be held next month, commencing on the 1st of May. Litigants and lawyers will make a note thereof.

Inyo Saloon.

Joe Harris has completed his new saloon, next door to B. L. Brown & Co.'s stable, and is now dispensing liquid refreshments to all "indulgers."

Good Time.

The upper stages are now making the trip from Carson in 47 and 48 hours, which beats any former staging, hereabouts, by several.

Query.

Why don't some of our Round Valley friends post us in regard to the effects of their last big earthqakes?

Gone Below.

N. Rhine, Esq., of the Harris & Rhine firm, started last week on a business excursion to San Francisco.

Los Angeles and the Relief Committee.

The following, from The Los Angeles News, April 13, we re-produce with a great deal of diffidence, fearing it may cause C. & M. Cohn, et als., to boil over again. However, we have known people to boil over with great violence, and do well afterwards notwithstanding, though we have but faint hopes for any of the aforesaid indignants. They are hopeless cases. It will be seen on comparing dates that this "vile sheet"—THE INYO INDEPENDENT—is responsible for the way Los Angeles has acted: Says The News:

Mr. Robinson tells us that the Relief Committee had expected material aid from Los Angeles, and were much disappointed to find that their appeal had been disregarded. We find, however, the aid called for is not exactly intended for the object for which an appeal for charitable assistance would naturally be expected to be made. It is not as much for the assistance of the wounded—for the relief of the widows, the orphans and the destitute—as it is for the purpose of re-establishing in business the suffering merchants, that our contributions are asked. The misfortunes of the merchants of Cerro Gordo are to be deplored, but they can scarcely be numbered among the legitimate objects of charity. Our citizens hesitated in contributing because they were not aware that actual destitution prevailed in Owens river. When they learn that their charity was solicited for the purpose of giving the merchants there a new start in business, and not for the purpose of relieving immediate want, it is not likely any steps will be taken in the premises. We have no doubt but what those parties in this city having direct business connections with the Owens river store keepers will not withhold from them credit, which is all they need to recuperate.

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS.

The people of Pioche have a theatre just completed. Its capacity is sufficient to seat 600 persons.

The new trial of Laura D. Fair, for the murder of Crittenden, is set for June 24. She asks no change of venue from San Francisco.

The decrease in the public debt last month was $12,391,451. The coin balance in the Treasury has reached the enormous sum of $120,500,610.

The London Times says if the United States shall not, before the tribunal is ready at Geneva with its award, have abandoned its claim for consequential damages, then Great Britain will withdraw her ratification of the Treaty of Washington.

The New York Democratic Central Committee held a meeting at Albany recently, and the feeling of those present was decidedly in favor of the passive policy and of looking to the Cincinnati Convention to initiate a programme for the party in the presidential campaign.

President Grant has consented to co-operate with the British Government in suppressing the slave trade in the Persian Gulf.

According to The Enterprise, the Comstock mines produced for the quarter ending March 31, 1,453 bars, weighing 111,024 pounds, or 55 tons 512 pounds, valued at $2,934,548,30. The yield for March alone was $1,066,-247,70. There can be no question that the mines along the line of the Comstock have improved wonderfully within the last year.

Burke, Clifford and Roth, the escaped convicts who robbed Woodruff & Ennor's stage in Elko county a short time since, and who were captured near Steptoe valley, have been returned to Carson and placed in their old quarters in the State Prison.

The mines in the vicinity of Pioche are yielding magnificently. During the last year they have shipped from that place nearly five millions in bullion. The Raymond & Ely is yielding eleven thousand dollars worth of bullion per day.

The Eureka Sentinel says that a faro dealer named Henry Burgess, was shot and killed on April 4. He had a dispute about a bet with one Tom Laswell, and in the quarrel which ensued Charles Daney, a friend of Laswell, shot and killed Burgess. Daney stole a horse from the Mineral Hill Mining company, on which he made good his escape.

An editorial article in The Chicago Tribune of March 7 estimates the total losses by the great fire at $190,-000,000, and the total insurances at $90,000,000. Of this amount the solvent companies have paid over $40,000,000, and the insolvent companies in liquidation may increase the amount to $50,000,000.

St. Louis was visited by a tornado on March 31, which destroyed a market house and did other damages, killing and injuring several people.

A calamitous north wind has greatly injured the crop prospects from Red Bluff to Los Angeles. In the vicinity of the latter place crops are said to be entirely ruined.

The Cincinnati Convention.

The committee of arrangements for the Cincinnati Convention have issued a circular, inviting voters, without distinction of party, to join in sustaining the Constitution as it is, and in securing civil service reform, a tariff for revenue only, amnesty for past political offenses, and local self-government. It says further that while the objects of the Liberal Republicans and the Revenue Reform organization are in the main the same, the latter organization has the special object of gathering together all parties who are in favor of these principles. It also states that arrangements have been made with most of the railroad companies to return persons home free who have paid full fare in coming to the Convention.—Washington Star, April 2.

VARIETIES.

—Women are seldom good sailors, but they sometimes command smacks.

—The first day of Adam's life must have been a long one, as it had no Eve.

—"What should you be, dearest," said Walter to his sweetheart, "if I was to press the seal of love upon those sealing-wax lips?" "I should be stationery."

—The May of a Syracuse January recently eloped with said January's son, and to counterbalance which an Indiana father has married his son's divorced wife.

—The following congratulatory telegram was received from Cincinnati by a wedding party in Nashville: "Congratulations on your nuptials; may your your future troubles be only little ones."

—The Austin (Tex.) Gazette says: "A bride in this county advises against making bridal tours across the Gulf. She says it causes sea-sickness—months after the trip is made."

—A bookseller in Portland, Maine, named Hall L. Davis, does not wish English cockneys to take liberties with his name.

—"Have you much fish in your bag?" asked a person of a fisherman. "Yes, there's a good eel in it," was the rather slippery reply.

—Moses was the first legislator to make a law for the protection of animals (Deuteronomy xxii. 6). Mohammed followed his example.

—Irate officer—"Mr. O'Brien, yer out o' step, sir." Smart private—"Share, thin, darlin', it's meself that's the only man in the houl ridgment that's in step, ye mane."

—A human footprint fifteen inches long has been found in a slate quarry near Seneca, Kansas. The pre-Adamite man wore large boots.

—After working all night at an Indiana County Treasurer's safe, a gang of burglars were rejoiced to find one dollar and ten cents in its gloomy recesses.

—A Cleveland saloon keeper is the master of a tame cockroach which comes at his call and capers about over the cracker dish to the tinkling of a spoon in a champagne class.

—During the past eighteen years, fifty-four boats have been blown up on the Western rivers, killing three thousand and eighty-three people.

—It takes only twelve hundred dollars' worth of lace to trim a velvet cloak properly, and yet men grumble at female extravagance in dress.

—An industrious nosologist has estimated that there are about twenty-four hundred disorders incident to the human frame.

—A Kansas City man, who blew out the gas before retiring, saved his life by rushing down to the office of the hotel and enquiring if there was a glue factory next door.

—A resident of Newport, Rhode Island, claims to be the owner of a tom-cat whose weight is thirty-four pounds. Thomas is said to thrive on flour dough, of which he devours fabulous quantities.

—Count Larendon a wealthy Parisian, was killed in his door recently by a chimney-pot, which was blown from a neighboring house and fell on his head. His father was killed in the same manner in 1850.

Earth Movements.

Sir Charles Lyell and Dr. Chambers have made us familiar with the fact of the upheaval of the Scandinavian peninsula, and M. Reclus adds many curious details. Certain fine woods in Norway are "continually being upheaved toward the lower snow-limits, and are gradually withering away in the cooler atmosphere; wide belts of forest are composed of nothing but dead trees, although some of them have stood for centuries. The gulfs of Bothnia and Finland, like vessels tilted up out of the horizontal, slowly pour their waters into the southern basin of the Baltic. Fresh islets appear, and M. Reclus contemplates a remote future in which the Aland Isles will become connected with the continent, and will serve as a bridge between Stockholm and the empire of Russia. Of South America we are told a very curious thing. The western coast, from the island of Chiloe to Callao, is upheaving; Patagonia and Brazil are sinking. "Then a large portion of the South American continent is constantly gaining on one side that which it loses on the other, and is gradually making its way through the ocean in a westward direction."

The Road Steamers

Seems to be making practical progress in Great Britain. One of these machines recently made the run from Ipswich to Edinburgh, a distance of 450 miles, in seventy-seven hours' traveling time. The engine is one of four now being built for the Indian Government, under Thompson's patent, with india rubber tires, and is of 14 nominal horse-power, but which has been worked up to 80 indicated horse-power. Her weight is about 13½ tons; length, 15 feet; breadth, 8 feet 8 inches; hight to top of chimney, 15 feet. The omnibus weighs about 3½ tons and seats 21 passengers inside and 44 outside.

Rejected! ah well, 'tis only a fond hope blighted,
A hope full of happiness, a lifetime to last,
A hope that has often dark troubles lighted
And o'er the pathway before me a bright sunshine cast.

Only another hope dead, and sorrowfully buried
Down deep in my heart, where other hopes lie,
To revive again never, but to ever be carried
With me in my wand'rings till God lets me die.

It has cast over the future a pall dark and dreary,
That blots out all happiness, all pleasures in life,
And leaves only a round of stern duties to cheer me
As I go through this world of contention and strife.

The future looks gloomy in the distance before me,
It has no bright scenes in the path I must tread,
And as I look forward, a cloud hovers o'er me
That obscures my horizon and fills me with dread.

No hope for the future? Yes, thank God, there is one,
A bright, blessed hope, fraught with happiness pure;
A hope that will make this world bright as the sun,
A hope that will last, aye forever endure.

My hope is this promise, that our Father has given,
"Come ye weary and heavy laden, I'll give you rest
Forever with me in the mansions in heaven,
That I have prepared for those that are blest."

Bishop Creek, April 6, 1872.

W. F. Stewart on Earthquakes—An Open Letter to the Citizens of San Francisco.

[From The S. F. Alta.]

Since the promulgation of the philosophy of universal correlation of natural forces, the most profound thinkers in the Old and New World have fallen into the belief that electrical action is the grand motor and soul of the Universe. That all things celestial and terrestial are fashioned and controlled by this all pervading force. In Europe, especially, the old and venerated notions in regard to the assumed laws controling matter and motion, are rapidly falling into discredit, and the more rational and demonstrable idea that electro-magnetic influences are the causes of all material mutations is being generally adopted.

The old and untenable supposition that our planet was an incandescent mass, bearing upon its periphery a thin rim of cooled and hardened slag of oxidized matter, is now laughed at by men who reason fairly upon natural phenomena and by the wisest philosophers of the age are being floated as unworthy of serious consideration. If it be true, then, that the earth is not a vast body of molten matter, we must look to some other quarter for the startling phenomena of earthquakes, volcanoes and other terrestial disturbances.

If, in localities subject to earthquakes and volcanoes, it is invariably observed that clouds and vapors in the atmosphere are the precursors, and that thunder and lightning always accompany such manifestations, as is the case at Stromboli, Mt. Hecla, Vesuvius, Ætna, Scaptaryokel and Chimborazo, is it not fair to suppose that external influences have something to do with the local convulsion? If it be true that a marked disturbance upon the faculæ of the sun's photograph instantly produces a corresponding disturbance of the terrestial magnets, followed by grand aurorial displays, which are so intimately connected with the earth's magnetism that telegrams may be sent over the globe without the use of a battery, and with aurorial influences alone, is it not reasonable to suppose that terrestial disturbances are attributable to these active outside agencies?

It is long since a demonstrated fact that while an ordinary temblor may be rending the earth's surface and devastating whole provinces, those that are engaged in mining at the depth of a few hundred feet know nothing of the dreadful pother overhead. Hundreds of instances, well authenticated, might be given to prove this fact, and it shows conclusively that external forces are the cause of our temblors, but I have neither the time nor space here for elucidation. I have merely to say this—if earthquakes are electrical in their origin, they can be controlled and disseminated by iron conductors with as much ease and certainty as we now control the telegraph or steam engine. I have substantial reasons for believing that earthquakes are wholly the result of electrical action. My convictions are not based upon theory, but are derived from long years of careful personal observation of phenomena, and from the experience of learned contemporaries.

In view of the fact that this city has been, and doubtless will be periodically visited by these alarming convulsions, and as human life and the values of property are constantly endangered, it becomes the part of wisdom to investigate every fact which may tend to the solution of the great mystery and render a palliation of the awful calamity possible. I believe that a careful and thorough investigation of all the facts, circumstances and geological surroundings of the recent startling temblor in Inyo county, might be of inestimable value, not only to the city but to the entire State. If your city, or the Chamber of Commerce, or the Academy of Sciences, wish to employ me at what will be a reasonable compensation to go there, I am here and will willingly serve them to the best of my ability; or if they select some one more competent I shall be better pleased. At any event, San Francisco should immediately send some competent investigator to Lone Pine. Respectfully,

W. F. STEWART.

A Regular Mess.

A select squad of us went to an inland village, on the Ohio river on a fishing excursion. No sooner had we pitched our tent and rigged our tackle than we were honored with a visit from Jake Henthorn. Jake is a man of too independent a spirit to be tyranized over by despotic fashion or arbitrary conventionalities. Accordingly, he goes barefoot twelve months in the year; and in consequence o the expanded valley which his "footsy tootsies" makes in the mud (frequently in the vicinity of hen-roosts) he is best known as "Barefooted Jake." However, it is not with Jake's "bug mashers" that we have to do, but with the "elastic receptivity" of his maw. One morning, Bill Lynch and I were running the fishing business while Bill Read prepared breakfast.

Jake's instincts prompted him to "shassay" around the fire, and feast his nostrils on the odor of a ten-pound perch, which was then baking. In due time Lynch and I returned to camp for our breakfasts, and found Read coming in with an armful of wood.

"Well, how about grub?" was our greeting.

"Oh, all right; I'll set it out for you in a minute, boys. But just come this way and see the nicest baked perch you ever laid eyes on."

We went and we looked; but only saw a rick of bones, from which every fibre of meat had been picked. Jake had been there before us. I don't distinctly remember whether we swore or not. It don't seem to me we did. Anyhow, we ate breakfast without fish.

During the afternoon, while we were all lounging on the bank, Jake yawned and drawled out:

"I'd like to have as many fish as I could eat onst. I hain't had a mess since Tom Whitten ketched the big cat fish."

"Jake," said I, in a tone meant to be scornfully sarcastic, "I thought you had a pretty fair mess this morning. You ate at least fifteen pounds."

"Oh yes," replied Jake, "I ate that; but what I mean is a reel, reg'lar mess."

Smelling a Rat.

A lady having met with an accident by which a considerable portion of skin and flesh an eighth of an inch thick were removed from her leg, the doctor suggested that a portion of the skin of some inferior animal might be used, and the patient readily consented. A rat about two-thirds grown was caught, killed, and quickly skinned, after which the doctor cut out a piece of the required size, trimmed it to suit the exposed surface, clapped it on, and fastened it with strips of adhesive plaster, after which the whole surface was covered with a coating of collodion. The experiment succeeded beyond his most sanguine expectation. The graft took by first intention, and in ten days the cure was complete. The surface of the wound is covered with a fine growth of hair, and the rat skin seems to answer every purpose. The only inconvenience to which the lady is subject is on account of the cats. On several occasions, while sitting down reading, she has been put to no little alarm and some inconvenience by having the cat spring on her, and fasten its teeth in that portion of her dress which immediately covers the transplanted rat skin. The terriers also sniff suspiciously at her when she walks in the streets.—Exchange.

—A young man asked his sweetheart if he might be permitted to kiss her, and give her an affectionate hug. "No," said she, "I can't allow that; but I'll tell you what I will do; I'll split the difference with you—you may kiss me and I'll hug you."

—A wretched husband in St. Paul advertises for the recovery of his wife, "a taul woman with gray eyes and a small babie just beginning to wauk," who has been appropriated by "a taul feller, with red hare."

—The young widow who was buried in grief is now alive and doing well. It is only another instance of premature interment.

TWO YEARS OF DISASTERS.

Modern history gives no account of a year more prolific of wonderful events and terrible calamities than A. D. 1871. While almost every place or country suffered to a greater or lesser extent, it was vouchsafed us as a community to pass all unscathed—only as interested spectators. The beginning of the present year, however, brings us, too, within the unwelcome circle, and forcibly reminds us that we possess no immunity against the terrors and calamities which beset the human race over the whole face of the earth. But severe as our own experience has been, we ought to be truly thankful that we have escaped so well, as compared to the fearful experiences and disasters that have fallen upon so many people in various places all over the world, from the same cause and almost simultaneously with our own. Though we know nothing by experience of the sorrows so many thousands and hundreds of thousands of the human family have in the past year down to the last month been subjected to from war, famine, pestilence and tornadoes, we will now have a more lively appreciation and sympathy for the feelings of the many other thousands, who, with us, have experienced the most wonderful and terrifying, though the least fatal, of all these visitations—earthquakes. Whatever may be our own tribulations or fears, the people of nearly one half of the world, at this time, have similar and no fewer causes of unhappiness, and many of them very much more. This fact is worthy of note, not that it is any satisfaction that others have fared worse, but only as showing that we have an abundance of cause for thankfulness that no greater share of a power that literally shakes a world was visited upon us.

Though it is not for any man to say, yet, according to all previous recorded history, we have the consolation of believing that the worst is past. Such extensive convulsions of the earth, so far, have never been repeated, except after the lapse of ages, and though all things are in God's hands, we do not believe any of the present generation, though allotted their full term of years, will ever again witness another such an event as the notable one of the past month.

It is presumptious to attempt to fix a date when their manifestations or disturbances will cease, but taking the two most noted shakes of late years as examples, they may continue yet for two months. The great shock of 1812, which sunk New Madrid and rent all South-East Missouri, according to the story of a living eye-witness, writing to The St. Louis Republican of a late date, continued at intervals for three months.

The other instance was the one which, in 1857, we believe, opened such vast or lengthy fissures in Tejon Pass. The disturbances continued there, also, for three months afterwards. From all accounts both of those shakes were fully as heavy in their respective localities as ours of the 26th of March. In fact that of 1812 affected much greater changes in the face of the earth over an extensive territory than did this, but in both cases it was all done at the first great shock.

Not Settled.

It seems that the electrical forces, or whatever it may be, that has been shaking up the earth so much of late, has not yet exhausted itself. Many other places besides the "great center of action" enjoy a fair share of these little disturbances. In Tuolumne county and other places along the western slope, they are more severe and quite as frequent as here; a number have occurred at Sacramento Stockton, Virginia City, Aurora, and doubtless many other places have been similarly favored at the same time that have not yet reported. An earthquake, as Lord Dundreary would say, "is one of those things that no fellah can understand;" but we can understand this much, that no matter how many get a share of their shakes the individual effect is all the same.

The Coast Review

We have received the first two numbers of a monthly publication bearing the above title, published by J. G. Riley, San Francisco. The Review is a large 32-page pamphlet, devoted exclusively to the mining and insurance interests, and will doubtless prove of much value to both. Price $2 50 per annum.

OUR MORAL STATUS.

A week or two since we received a communication from the Rev. A. Clark wherein he takes great exceptions to the lack of morality manifest in our columns. He says: "I have often felt pained to see in the selections and productions of its editors so much of coarseness, skepticism and anti-religion, such as might be expected as saloon talk, but unworthy of a higher place." All that we have to say in reference to that matter may be summed up in a few words: We think the Reverend gentleman puts the case a little stronger than the facts justify. We have never intentionally inculcated a single sentiment of infidelity, but have often, in our selections at least, done quite the reverse. Coarse and profane allusions have occasionally been admitted, true enough, but according to our ideas of journalism, the only exception to be taken to these apply to the wording not the subject matter. Justifiable or otherwise this rule obtains with nine-tenths of the secular newspapers of the country. We consider it the duty of newspapers to present facts as nearly as possible as they occur, always supposing such accounts to be kept within the bounds of decency, of which the editors are the judges. Their judgment is not infallible, but it is not necessarily bad or irreligious because differing from the views of a professed teacher of the gospel. Though not in conflict the the duties of the two professions are vastly different, a fact that is sufficiently obvious from the fate which usually befalls exclusively religious journals conducted by preachers. This is not due to the fact that they are not coarse, vulgar or profane, but because they wage an incessant warfare against almost every natural feeling and inclination of the human race, presenting everything earthy in its gloomiest colors, as viewed from the old tradionary stand point of a thousand years ago. We have the highest respect for the conscientious believers of every class and denomination, but respectfully submit that the teachings of the leaders themselves are responsible for much of the infidelity and want of sympathy, so frequently manifest. Their lines are too narrow, rigid and marked by naught but gloom on earth; the love of God is taught by fear, and many of their positions, in the lights of science, are untenable, although there is nothing incompatible between science and religion. These remarks apply more particularly to a portion of the following extract from Mr. Clark's letter, and are not intended as a justification for immoral allusions in this or any other newspaper. He says: "The great mass of our people are feeling, and not ashamed to express gratitude to God for their remarkable preservation from the horrible death that some of our people suffered. This you seem to labor to expel from all minds, and even in the "Incidents" you name a text and preach a sermon against "special Providences."

In regard to the first: We are the last person to deny or attempt to deny our accountability to God in any respect, and last of all to repress a feeling of gratitude for His mercies manifest not only on that memorable occasion, but every day of our existence; but while such is our feeling and sentiment, we do not consider it any more our duty to give public expression to it on the occasion of an earthquake, than if we personally had had an equally narrow escape from death by any of the numerous ordinary dangers besetting life. And had we been giving an account of a most wonderful escape of some other person from death by a runaway horse, a falling wall or the accidental turning aside of a pistol ball aimed at his heart, we would have been transcending the duties of our calling to have expressly given expression to words of thankfulness to God for His great mercy. There is no obvious reason why we should adopt Mr. Clark's view, and make an exception of earthquakes to a general rule, unless it is because from its terrifying nature such an occurrence makes a more direct appeal to our cowardly natures than the far more common and fatal casualties brought under our notice almost every day. Such feelings of gratitude are right and proper, but it is not the place of a newspaper to so state it on any one occasion more than another.

In regard to the plain inference conveyed in the last sentence of the quotation we dissent in toto. The doctrine of special Providences is a remnant of old fogyism as completely void of true religion as the burning of witches or heretics. Its whole tendency is to bring down the Ruler of the Universe to the level of mankind—a mere creature of impulse, governed by no fixed or immutable law, inflicting punishment or rewarding merit here and there in a manner totally incomprehensible to the mind of man, and consequently of no avail; it constitutes the Almighty a mere king among men. To attribute certain results occurring within the knowledge of all to the special intervention of God, is often times to attribute to Him a worse apparent act than actuates the average man. While acknowledging His omnipotence in all things, it is far more in accordance with the true attributes of a creator and ruler of the universe whose limits are wholly beyond human conception, to believe that every event of every kind and character is brought about by its conformity or non-conformity to the immutable, unchangeable laws of nature, fixed by God in the beginning, subject to no changes or variations from that day to the present. The laws of nature are the laws of science, but for the most part the laws of science are yet wrapped in mystery, and hence the only way to account for the unaccountable, so to speak, is to adopt the superstitious explanation of special Providences. Men knowingly and unknowingly violating mere human law have to suffer the penalty though ignorance may be admitted in extenuation, but never in violations of the laws of nature. We, in our ignorance and insignificance, are wholly irresponsible for many of the misfortunes or visitations which beset the guilty and innocent alike. These unknown and ever present dangers show not only the need of repentance, but of conforming our lives to the fixed laws of God. Earthquakes and such dangers are the reminders of this duty, but special only as the roaring of the sea, or the lightning's flash, all of which would occur and recur just the same though no human being existed on the face of the earth. This is not fatalism; it lessens no man's responsibility to his God, but is in proof that we are not to accept a simple superstitution as a governing principle. Science, imperfectly as it is understood, does more every day to elevate our ideas of the Creator than all such old fogyisms that were ever preached.

We have no desire or intention of entering into a religious any more than a political discussion, but having said so much we are sorry space will not permit a more explicit expression of our imperfectly expressed ideas, as well as a notice of one or two other points included in this communication.

EARTHQUAKES ELSEWHERE.

We now learn that Antioch, one of the famous cities of the Bible and of profane history, was utterly destroyed by an earthquake sometime last month. The telegram from Constantinople, conveying the intelligence, failed to give the exact date, but states the above facts, and gives the number of the killed at 1,500, or one-fourth of the entire population. Great distress prevails among the survivors. But few cities of the world have suffered such vicissitudes of fortune as Antioch.

In ancient times it was the most magnificent of sixteen cities of the same name all of which were built about 300 B. C., by Seleucus Nicator. It was familiar to the Greeks as "The Beautiful Antioch," and became the favorite residence of many wealthy Romans and the Seleucid princes. At one time it contained a population of over 200,000 inhabitants, who were distinguished both for their intellectual and their luxurious character. They were famous, likewise, for their scurrilious wit and for their invention of nicknames, and to this cause is to be attributed the appellation o "Christian," first given in this city to the followers of Jesus Christ. For 600 years Antioch held, as Pliny called it the title of "Queen of the East."

About 145 B. C., 100,000 of its inhabitants perished in a war with the Jews under Jonathan, and in A. D. 115 it was almost utterly ruined by an earthquake but was rebuilt and its ancient splendor restored by Trajan. In 155 it was destroyed by fire, but Antoninus Pius again rebuilt it. In the years 458, 526 and 587, Antioch was visited, and on each occasion utterly destroyed, by earthquakes. Another earthquake ruined the place in 1822, from the effects of which it has never entirely recovered, and the latest estimate of its population gave the number of inhabitants at about 6,000 persons. The city was the ancient capital of Syria, in its north part, 57 miles west of Aleppo on the left bank of the Orontes, about 20 miles above its mouth. Since 1822, the time of the last earthquake, up to this new calamity, the houses were mostly new and of slight materials, differing from those of Eastern towns in general in having sloping roofs. It had about a dozen mosques, but there was not a single Christian church. The city walls' a ruined aqueduct and two bridges were almost all the remaining vestiges of ancient magnificence, and no doubt these are now destroyed.

On the 27th of March, the State of Oaxaca, Mexico, was visited by an earthquake, greatly damaging a large number of villages and almost utterly destroying its capital, a city of the same name, containing 25,000 inhabitants, and one of the finest in Mexico. The destruction of property is very great, and also the loss of life, but no definite statements as to the latter have yet come to hand.

About the same time Japan was visited by a very destructive earthquake.

The precise dates will be obtained, doubtless, in a short time, when an opportunity will be afforded to the earthquake sharps to air their scientific acquirements. The New York Times remarks as follows in this connection:

That there was a connection between the recent earthquakes in California and Syria is rendered probable by the news that Vesuvius has broken out in eruption. It is well known that there is such a close connection between the eruptions of Vesuvius and earthquakes in Southern Italy, that the former are a certain safeguard against the latter. When the mountain has been silent for a long time, Naples is in danger of an earthquake, but when the safety valve of Vesuvius is open, the danger of violent earthquakes is over. The present eruption of Vesuvius is therefore to be interpreted as the result of forces which, had the eruption not occurred, would have resulted in an earthquake. That these forces should manifest themselves nearly simultaneously in California, Syria and Italy may, of course be a mere coincidence, but the presumption is certainly otherwise. It would be interesting to know if that isolated volcanic region, Iceland, has also been disturbed. If so, the fact would be a further evidence of the wide spread character of the recent disturbance.

THE SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE.

The Chronicle of April 21 (Sunday) gives a large sized illustration of the scene of destruction at Lone Pine, and no less interesting pen pictures of the memorable event, written by their able commissioner, Mr. Kelly. The people of this county generally, and of Lone Pine particularly, are greatly under obligations to The Chronicle for its efforts in support of the relief measures in San Francisco, and also for the detailed and expensive reports of the whole occurrence. The reports as written up by Mr. Kelly, on the run, as it were, involved an immense amount of labor, and do him great credit as well as the paper which has reproduced them from day to day. Except in one or two particulars in his first letter from Lone Pine, we have seen nothing in the whole volumninous reports but what we can fully indorse, both as to facts and opinions. The only exception worthy of note relates to his misapprehension of facts in regard to the weather prevailing in this valley as a general thing, and particularly on the night of the great calamity. We will correct this by saying that instead of clouds and a terrible gale of wind adding anything to the horrors at that time, the night was pefectly clear, while there was scarcely a breath of wind stirring from the preceding sunset until the second one following. He also states that this section is noted for its boisterous winds. That is the reputation it has always borne, without doubt; but speaking only from our own two years' experience, it is a reputation not founded on fact. We know whereof we speak when we assert that this valley for the past two years, at least, has been less afflicted with such winds than almost any portion of the State west of the Sierra Nevadas. Such winds here are of the rarest occurrence and the climate, one month with another, is superb. The worst or most disagreeable weather we have ever experienced here has prevailed since the 28th of March last, but we have seen much worse in the coast valleys.

In another column will be found some interesting extracts from The Chronicle's reports, and to them we might add much more of the same character did our space permit.

The Tuolumne Independent.

A new paper bearing the above title has recently been started by the Messrs. Duchow, in Sonora, Tuolumne county. The Independent bears evidence of being managed by men who sabe their business, and if they receive their dues, are bound to make a success of it. We like the style generally of our namesake very much, unless we except to the name, which, on account of there being so many of the same, they will find much of their thunder credited to some other Independent by careless exchanges, and thereby suffer much vexation of spirit.

WHAT OTHERS THINK.

We have no desire or intention of harping upon a disagreeable subject but as certain short-sighted individuals have seen proper to "jump" us for doing what was clearly our duty, as most of them will one of these days admit, we print the following extracts from the pen of The Chronicle's correspondent, whose motives or judgment cannot be impeached, and as exactly representing our views of the matter. We might add much more bearing on this subject from the same and other sources particularly relating to one or two gents of Lone Pine, wherein they are not placed in the most enviable light; and also where Col. Whipple is severely animadverted upon for taking so much pains to create sympathy by wearing his bloody clothing through the country, which fact really done his cause more harm than good, but as hinted above, unless some new occasion arises with this, we pass the whole subject:

SAN FRANCISCO'S CONTRIBUTION.

Lone Pine is in need of assistance from the outside world, beyond a doubt, but as San Francisco is looked to as likely to be the prime helper and contributer, a few serious words upon the subject will not be out of place. The principal victims of the earthquake, after the dead, are the wounded, and those poor people, who, owning nothing in the world but their shanties, had these destroyed and were thereby rendered utterly destitute. These people—and of their number and quality I shall presently speak—have a distinct, undeniable claim upon the public purse, but the merchant who lost a part of his goods, or even his building itself, has no more such a claim than if a fire or hurricane had worked the destruction. But, nevertheless, I am convinced that they who are well, or even tolerably well, able to carry their losses are looking forward to a share in San Francisco's contribution with just as much eagerness as they who lost all of their worldly effects and were crippled and maimed into the bargain. And it is to guard against misapplication of the money freely and thoughtlessly given by your open-handed people that I write these warning words.

THE ACTUAL DESTITUTION has been not a little exaggerated by Col. Whipple, although his statements were made in perfect good faith, I have no doubt, while the pecuniary loss suffered by the people of all classes has in almost every case been so shamefully overstated that I am filled with amazement. In a previous communication I have hinted at the latter fact, although I furnished the figures of losses given by each man, assuming that there could be no object in deliberate turpitude on their part. But careful investigation and mature reflection it is my deliberate and settled conviction that the figures transmitted are fully fifty per cent. wide of the mark. In other words, Lone Pine hasn't lost half as much in dollars and cents as its people claim. Precisely what is to be gained by misrepresentation of the facts I confess that I cannot see, unless it be the keeping of intended immigrants out of the county, the depression in value of the county's bonds, the creating of a false impression that the taxable property of the county has been wiped out, and the like—circumstances which appear to have entirely escaped some of these inconsiderate gentlemen when they pleasantly footed up the totals of their fictitious losses. The fact of the matter is, unless the funds contributed by San Francisco—for, in common with every one here, I apprehend the sum will be considerable—be very carefully and very judiciously advanced, there is danger that you may find that your free horse has been ridden to death and your money squandered in greater parcels than there is really need for, immediately.

AFTER THE CALAMITY

about a couple of thousand dollars, more or less, was taken up at Cerro Gordo, Swansea and Visalia, and yet, although this money has been industriously applied to the relief of cases of actual want, there still remain several hundred dollars in the hands of the Board of Relief. This certainly doesn't look as if people were famishing here. Of the few houses which the earthquake leveled, with few exceptions, none could have sold before for more than a few hundred dollars, but their owners claim to have lost thousands by their destruction, as if animated by some distinct idea that the people of San Francisco proposed to pay them dollar for dollar whatever they may claim as the sum of their pecuniary injury. The exceptions noted, where the houses were worth anything of consequence, are of people abundantly able to bear their losses without the intervention of San Francisco or any other place. Public charity is apt to be impulsive and uncalculating, but in this case it will do well to go slow and not expose itself to reaping a harvest of mortification by and by. Mind, I do not by any means counsel parsimony, but Lone Pine is only a village of threescore houses and as many hundred inhabitants, and a small, a reasonable sum, properly applied, will be ample to bridge the people over the

IMMEDIATE RESULTS OF THE GRAVE MISFORTUNE

which has visited them. This is not my single opinion, but is shared in by not a few of the more thoughtful and conscientious inhabitants of the place. As for purchasing of lumber and making of large contracts at Los Angeles, and all that, it is the veriest nonsense imaginable. I do not for a moment doubt the well meaning of Col. Whipple's intentions, but it is my duty to correct his hasty and imperfect impressions of the pecuniary magnitude of the disaster, a duty which becomes a pleasure since I can state that the loss is not near so great as he has erroneously supposed. It must be remembered that the Colonel left here while houses were toppling or dancing on their foundations, while the earth quivered with fierce frequency, and frightened women's screams and men's groans still hung upon the air, and under such circumstances one is not apt to concentrate upon matter-of-fact details. At first my impressions of the necessity for large need were identical with his; but careful and minute investigation of the premises has dissipated them in a great degree. Now I merely present the facts, and the people of San Francisco are free to form their own conclusions. I only urge that they act with judgment and sense, lest the springs of their impulsive generosity drying up by reason of abuse and disappointment, some other desolated place in the future be suffered to go unaided, when the claim upon their charity be as good as in this case, or even better.

THE MORAL COURAGE OF THE WHOLE PEOPLE

has asserted itself grandly in this calamitous emergency. The people throughout the entire county appear to be buoyant and regard the future hopefully. North of Lone Pine especially, I find that a general rebuilding and resumption of business is the rule, and despondency the exception. The final result, I apprehend, will be simply a radical change in the style of building and building material, the adobe having forever lost its place in the regard and confidence of intending builders. They have learned, at bitter cost, that the only true economy is in building out of permanent and enduring material, and I am convinced that they will not prove slow in profiting by the lesson. So far, nobody with whom I have conversed hereabouts express the least desire to abandon the undoubted great mineral wealth of the county on account of an accident which, according to all precedent, seldom recurs in the same locality, except in the lapse of centuries of time.

A CHILD'S DEATH THROUGH THE INHUMANITY OF MEN.

Outside of Lone Pine and the Eclipse works, where Superintendent Tregellas was killed, there occurred no deaths, with the single exception of the infant child of Jacob Vagt, which was suffocated under the ruins of an adobe house, about three miles north of this place. In connection with this fatality I hear a report, which, if true, stamps the three men concerned as the most depraved and soulless of their sex. It is said that when Vagt's house went down, burying himself, his wife and little babe under two heavy adobe walls, two of his employees went manfully to work at removing the ruins and beseeched the assistance of three men who stood within easy hearing and in plain view, but beseeched in vain. The bereaved mother, losing this her seventh and only remaining child by this direful calamity, asserts that the babe was crying as she escaped from the ruins and would undoubtedly have been saved had the needed assistance been extended. I am loth to credit this shocking story, but it is vouched for by so respectable a source that no room is left me for doubt. It is indeed painful to believe such things as these, because they reveal a side to humanity so dark and appalling as to make one blush for the dreadful possibilities of his race.

—A bookbinder said to his wife at the wedding: "It seems now that we are bound together, two volumes in one with clasps." "Yes," observed one of the guests, "one side highly ornamented Turkey morocco, and the other plain calf."

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

 All advertisements, to insure insertion in these columns, must be handed in on or before 2 o'clock P. M., Friday.

A Grave Affair.

We are in possession of the outlines of a noteworthy occurrence which recently transpired in a couple of our most important towns, which we give as received, only omitting names: A German, who has been doing business as a cobbler at Cerro Gordo, was one morning recently lying on a bed in his cabin when a fellow bunker came in from a night's work to prepare breakfast. Noticing that the man in bed was unusually quiet, he called lustily for him to get up, but received no other response than a mere look. Finishing breakfast, the man went again to wake his partner and found him, to all intents, dead. The facts were immediately reported, and several parties visited the place; among the rest was a Justice of the Peace, who made preparations for an inquest, summoned a surgeon for a post mortem examination, placed a man in charge of the remains, and took possession of the money belonging to the deceased. News of the death reached Lone Pine, and, as the deceased was a Mason, the members of that order took steps for the proper interment of the body, had a grave dug, and despatched a wagon for the remains. Meanwhile, as the surgeon's instruments were being got out, some singular facts were reported in regard to the condition of the body, and the doctor repaired to the spot, not to dissect the man, but to revive him, which he finally succeeded in doing. It is said that the man is in the habit of taking opiates, and that the suspended animation was the result of an overdose of morphine or laudanum. The results are that no Coroner's Jury and verdict followed, and that there is an empty grave at Lone Pine.

Fruit.

The severe cold weather immediately following the big quake has proved even more disastrous than that event to many of our fruit raisers. In the orchards of D. D. Gunnison and J. B. White, both contigious to this place, the peach trees are completely stripped of their blossoms, destroying all prospects of a crop. The strawberry beds bear equal evidence of the severity of the frost, though the very late plants promise a small yield. The warm days of February are apt to prematurely forward trees, only to be nipped in the bud by the cold of March. We have no report of the vines and trees further up in the foothills, but it is possible that they are not so severely injured.

Lida Valley.

From all accounts Lida Valley is "booming," and the miner's goose has attained a greater altitude than was ever before known in the district. The bullion shipments fully corroborate these statements. The "Mountain View" mine, owned by Halsey & Co., had one ton of rock worked in Hiskey & Walker's mill, which yielded $1,016 35 in silver, and $13 25 in gold. The Manhattan company, of Austin, are intending to put a mill in Lida Valley, which the miners think will do a splendid business.

The Borax Works.

We learn that M. A. Hearne, of the borax works near Columbus, is making $10 or $12 a day with the small works now in use. He intends to enlarge his works as soon as possible to many times their present capacity. A beautiful specimen of borax crystallized upon a sage-brush can be seen at the Headquarters saloon in this place. Mr. Hearne has shipped several tons of his borax to the Bay, and is in a fair way of opening up a very important enterprise.

Not Advanced.

We are pleased to state, on good authority, that our lumbermen, to their credit be it said, have no intention to raise the price of lumber owing to the present and probable extraordinary demand. Owing to the recent tax for stumpage, however, which the millmen have to pay, they have been compelled to add $5 per M to the usual price, in order to make the same small profit they did before—a fact we mention in order that the real cause of the advance may be understood.

Well Done.

The liberal citizens of Los Angeles have contributed and forwarded to Mr. James Brady, $840, for the relief of the Lone Pine sufferers, accompanied with special directions as to the manner of its expenditure. And in this connection allow us to suggest that in case any necessaries or essentials to comfort are further required for the sick and helpless, just let the citizens of our own county know it, and the same will be forthcoming.

Lumber and For Sale.

Tim Lewis, of the Bishop Creek saw mill, wishes everybody to know that he has plenty of lumber on hands at the mill, and furthermore, that wishing to change his business, he wishes to sell mill, ranch and the whole institution. As the lumber business is likely to be very lively this Summer, here is a chance for somebody to make a profitable investment. See advertisement.

Progressing.

The work of repairing damages at the Eclipse works is progressing favorably, some three and a half miles of the canal having been fixed up as before, while repairs to the furnace are being pushed ahead. It is expected the whole will be in running order in less than ten days from the present time.

Bullion Shipments.

On the first day of April there were shipped from the mill of Messrs. Hiskey & Walker, Deep Spring Valley, (extracted from Lida Valley ore) 6 bars of bullion, weighing 2,442 ounces, valued at $2,800. Also, from the same, April 11, 8 bars, weighing 3,200 ounces, valued at $3,700.

See the Advertisement.

Al. Briggs this week hangs out his official sign in our columns, setting forth the fact that he is running a bar and billiard saloon at his well known stand in Lone Bine. He has a splendid billiard table, with the completest appurtenances, and keeps no "sheepherder's delight."

All Doing Well.

All the Lone Pine wounded are in hopeful spirits and satisfactorily recovering. It is probable, therefore, that no further names will have to be added to the terrible list of victims of the Great Earthquake.

Not Much Loss.

Charley Begole says that all his "sheepherder's delight" was smashed in the earthquake, and that he don't propose to import any more of that brand.

PACIFIC COAST READAGRAMS.

A severe frost on the night of April 15th materially damaged fruit, and killed potatoes and corn to the roots in Los Angeles county.

The long looked for and much needed rain commenced to fall in Santa Barbara county, April 15th. Thousands of acres of late sown grain, which would have amounted to nothing, will now make a heavy yield. It also rained, the same day, at Los Angeles and San Diego.

The Fresno Expositor says the permanent railroad bridge across the San Joaquin river is fast approaching completion.

On the 11th instant, an enormous snow-slide occurred at the Wellington Mine, Salt Lake District. Eight men were swept down a distance of 500 feet, one of the number being killed.

A dispatch dated Visalia, April 15th, says: Lee Fletcher, a painter of that town, was shot and instantly killed that morning while walking with his wife on the road four miles from town by two men, whose names are not yet given. Officers have been sent to arrest the suspected parties.

There are 200 men now employed on the San Pedro breakwater.

James Buchanan, in San Francisco, sues the Central Pacific Railroad Company for $50,500 damages for loss of foot and other injuries sustained by being struck by a cow catcher at Reno, October 27th, 1870.

It is claimed that the Committee of One Hundred represent $100,000,000 of capital, and made up without reference to party.

The Eureka Consolidated Mining Company of Nevada has declared a dividend of $3 per share.

The Ophir has levied an assessment of $5 per share.

In Los Angeles on the night of April 15th, Don Rafael Guiardo, aged 71, one of the oldest pioneers of California and a prominent officer under Governor Figueroa, died. Deceased was father-in-law of ex-Gov. Downey, and was for 40 years a resident of Los Angeles.

The immense grain crops throughout the Tulare Valley are in the finest possible condition, and a very large harvest is confidently anticipated. Peaches, almonds, figs and other early fruits are somewhat injured by the late severe frost, but a fair crop is nevertheless expected.

All the Mormon prisoners held by the United States Marshal on illegal process are to be immediately discharged under the late decision of the United States Supreme Court.

In some portions of Los Angeles county wheat is represented as doing well, whilst in others it is probably a total failure and will be mowed for hay.

An earthquake sharp predicts that San Francisco, Oakland and San Jose will shortly be destroyed by an earthquake. He says that the Pacific ocean will cover the present localities of those cities.

The San Francisco Citizens' primaries, on the 19th, resulted in the selection of delegates almost unanimously anti-railroad in sentiment. The election of delegates in Sacramento took place the following day, the regular ticket beating the Citizens'. Among the delegates selected we note the name of Henry Edgerton.

A destructive fire broke out in North San Diego, April 20th. Loss, about $40,000.

The New License Law.

The political Code, which is now a law, makes some material changes as far as licenses are concerned. The receipts from this collection now go into the coffers of the County Treasury instead of the State. The County Treasurers will issue licenses under the new law. Under it auctioneers are divided into eight classes, and pay a tax ranging from $7 50 to 4 per quarter. Bankers, express companies and carriers are divided into five classes and pay a license ranging from $10 to $100 per month. Bridge, ferry, wharf, chute or pier licenses are to be fixed by the Board of Supervisors. Brokers, trust companies, etc., are divided into six classifications, and must pay license ranging from $3 to $250. Proprietors or keepers of billiard tables must pay $5 per quarter for each table; for each bowling alley, $5 per quarter. Theaters, minstrels, etc., $10 per month, $200 per quarter, or $600 per year. For caravans, menageries, or any collection of animals, circuses, acrobatic performances, $10 per exhibition. Jugglers, magicians, etc., pay $5 per day. Home insurance companies, $100 per quarter. Pawnbrokers, $30 per quarter. Inns, taverns, saloons, from $5 to $40 per month. Merchants and keepers of livery stables are divided into nine classes, and must pay from $3 to $50 per month. Peddlers and hawkers must pay $15 per month. Persons keeping animals for propagation must pay for each stallion $50; jack, $10; bull, $10; the classification of the latter class of licenses formerly existing being repealed.

Stocks.

The Gold Hill News asserts that the present intense excitement in stocks and their unprecedented rise is based upon the real merit of the mines.

Notary Appointed.

Urial Gates has been appointed Notary Public for Lida Valley by Gov. Bradley, of Nevada.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Catacazy has been sent from St. Petersburg to Paris in disgrace on a pension of 3,000 roubles per year, on condition that he behaves himself.

Napoleon is censured in the report of the French Committee on Capitulation, for not consulting with his Generals on the surrender of Sedan.

The London Telegraph reiterates its former statement that the relations between France and Germany are of the most precarious character, and that there is danger of another war unless France shall at once consent to comply with Bismarck's demand for a reduction of the French army. The statement is contradicted by The Paris Constitutionnel.

There is, as was anticipated, a deadlock in the Geneva arbitration of the Alabama claims. The United States demands something more than compensation for the ships and cargoes destroyed by the Alabama. England denies that it is within the scope of the treaty of Washington for the Arbitrators to sit in judgment on these extra claims.

The Berlin North German Gazette (supposed to be Bismarck's organ) positively contradicts the statements made by The London Telegraph, that there are grave complications between the Cabinets of France and Germany.

Late intelligence from Mexico states that Gen. Marquez, the Governor of Sinaloa, had left with all his forces for Culiacan, where he was fighting General Pesqueira.

General Rocha had occupied Durango on the 20th of March, and General Donato Guerra was stationed with his revolutionary forces at Lagunillas, watching his movements. It is generally supposed that if Rocha should march against Mazatlan, Guerra would either come to the assistance of Marquez or re-occupy the city of Durango.

General Navearoz, revolutionary Governor of San Luis Potosi, has been defeated, losing five hundred horses and their equipage.

The Sultan has sent one of his steam yachts to Odessa to convey General Sherman and Lieutenant Grant and friends to Sebastopol.

Juarez, in a message to Congress, said that the rebellion was crushed, but he still clings to his dictatorial powers, and asks for an extension of his ample facilities.

General Sheridan has captured thirty privates and seven officers (Mexicans) for depredations in Texas, and holds the officers for trials in the courts.

Dates from Yokohama are to March 25th. The political news is unimportant. Robberies are rife. The natives have profited by the example of foreigners by being prepared to protect their houses. Earthquakes are frequent. On the 14th of March a severe shock of two minutes' duration occurred.

EASTERN NEWS.

A dispatch from Muskegee, Indian Territory, says a man on trial for murder at Salaquah was acquitted, whereupon a relative of the murdered man shot the defendant dead, and then the Judge on the bench; an indiscriminate fight then commenced, in which eleven persons were killed and as many more wounded. Among the killed were three United States Marshals, named Owens, Hawkins and Wilson.

A Washington dispatch, dated April 20th, says: General Banks called on Secretary Fish yesterday, according to instructions from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, to consult regarding the proposed action of the House on Peters' resolution advising a withdrawal of the claim for indirect damages. Fish said that he was not in favor of modifying the case, and knew of no other member of the Cabinet who was. He did not think it possible to make any modification. At the same time the Secretary is said to have admitted that he did not expect a favorable award for indirect damages. At a Cabinet meeting which followed, Fish communicated the substance of the conference, which was unqualifiedly approved. A strong lobby, representing owners of Alabama claims, has been in Washington during the last few weeks, endeavoring to influence the Administration and Congress to withdraw the objectionable portion of our case. Reverdy Johnson has written a letter to Peters declaring his approval of his resolution, and asking permission to address him in a more elaborate letter for publication.

The State Republican Convention met in Richmond, Va., April 17th; 73 counties were represented. It was very turbulent, and midnight came before they succeeded in effecting an organization. The police were called in once to suppress the row.

The Republican State Convention of North Carolina nominated Governor Caldwell for re-election. The resolutions favor a general amnesty and indorse Grant.

Erastus Corning, of New York, died in Albany on the 7th instant. He was a member of the Assembly at the time of his death.

A. B. Elder.

Mr. Elder, who, as most of our readers are aware, left this county with the intention of erecting smelting works in Clark's District, has changed his base of operations to Wallapai District, Arizona. At the last accounts his machinery, some 60,000 pounds in weight, was on the ground, and he was busy in grading for his furnace, letting contracts for building material, charcoal, etc., and negotiating for 100,000 tons of ore. Save on the earthquake question, we much doubt whether he has bettered his prospects by leaving this county, but he has our best wishes for unlimited success anyhow.

VARIETIES.

—An ass may bray a good while before he shakes the stars down.

—What people can never live long nor wear great coats? Dwarfs.

—A man in Illinois was bitten by a rattlesnake seventeen years ago. and is still taking whisky to cure the bite.

—Massachusetts has a mile of completed railway for every five square miles of territory, and one for each thousand.

—What is the difference between a cloud and a beaten child? One pours with rain and the other roars with pain.

—"What are you doing?" asked a father of a son who was tinkering an old watch. "Improving my time," was the witty rejoinder.

—"Grandma," said a shrewd child, "do you wan't some candy?" "Yes, dear, I should like some." "Then if you'll buy some I'll give you half," said Polly.

—The scratched face of an elderly citizen of Chicago, who has a young, handsome, and rather vain wife, is accounted for as follows: "My dear," said she, "people say I walk like an Andalusian. Do you think so?" "All but the 'An,'" was the brutal reply, whereupon she went for him.

—The following is a fact: A clerical gentleman, in examining a Sunday school, asked the class before him if they could tell anything about the Apostle Peter. A little girl raised her hand much to the gratification of the examiner. "Come up here, my good little girl," said he, "I am glad you remember your Bible lessons so well. Now tell the other boys and girls what you know of St. Peter." The little girl was quite willing, and commenced: "Peter, Peter, pumpkin eater, had a wife and couldn't keep her; he put her in a——" But before she could get to "pumpkin shell" the school was in a roar.

Singular Whisky Phenomena.

It appears that Mr. Fifield has been troubled with a fearful cold, which settled on his lungs, and his friends held a consultation and decided to give the gallant Sargeant an old fashioned sweat. He was wrapped in a blanket and placed upon a cane seat chair and a pint of whisky put under the chair and a match touched to the whisky.

It is evident that too much confidence was placed in the fact that Madison whisky was never before known to burn; but singular as it may seem, this particular whisky did burn, and Mr. Fifield, with his well known astuteness, discovered the fact as soon as anybody. Without stopping to argue with his friends as to the singular phenomenon, Mr. Fifield rose as one man, and with his hand on his heart thanked the audience for the warm and genial manner in which he had been received, kicked the chair over and jumped up.

He jumped well, but it is said that if the ceiling had been higher he would have increased his leap by eight feet. On his return to the earth his elocutionary powers were brought into requisition, and he made a speech that in blistering sarcasm and burning pathos has never had its equal in the annals of legislative experience.

Dr. Wolcott was telegraphed for from Milwaukee, and came by special train, but gave it as his opinion that amputation would not be necessary. The party with whom Mr. Fifield boards, the telegraph informs us, has raised the price of Sam's three dollars a week, because it is necessary to set the table for him on the mantelpiece.—La Crosse Democrat.

That's How.

After a great snow-storm a little fellow began to shovel a path through a large snow bank before his grandmother's door. He had nothing but a small shovel to work with.

"How do you expect to get through that drift?" asked a man who was passing along.

"By keeping at it," said the boy cheerfully, "that's how."

That is the secret of mastering almost every difficulty under the sun. If a hard task is before you, stick to it. Do not keep thinking how large or how hard it is, but go at it, and little by little it will grow smaller, until it is done. If a hard lesson is to be learned, do not lose a breath by saying "I can't," or "I do not see how;" but go at it and keep at it. Study! That is the only way to conquer it. If a fault is cured or a bad habit broken up, it cannot be done by merely being sorry or only trying a little. You must fight it, and not give up fighting until it is got rid of.

"Ultramontane."

The term "ultramontane" is much used in books and newspapers, and but little understood. It is one of those words which, from representing a locality, has come to represent a religious belief and a political party. Ultramontane literally means beyond the mountains. When used as the political and religious tenets of the Church of Rome. Ultramontanism is a belief in the unbounded supremacy of the Pope and the union of the Church with the State. Representatives of these principles, in whatever nation of Europe they are found, are called Ultramontanes. In Spain, in France. in Germany and in Austria the Ultramontane party is a strong element in the direction of public affairs. The party is the remnant of the followers of the old despotic power of the Pope, which placed its foot on the necks of kings and robbed them of their purple at will.

AN ACT

To Authorize the Issue of Bonds by the County of Inyo, to Erect County Bridges and Buildings.

The people of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The Board of Supervisors of the county of Inyo are her by authorized to issue and sell the bonds of said county not exceeding in the aggregate forty thousand dollars, payable at the option of the said Board at any time within twenty years from the date of issuance of said bonds in gold coin, and to bear interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, payable annually, in gold coin, on the second day of January in each year.

SEC. 2. Said bonds shall be in sums of not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars; shall bear the date of their issuance and shall be signed by the Chairman of the Board of Supervisors, the County Auditor and the County Treasurer of said county. Coupons for the interest shall be attached to each bond, signed by the Chairman of the Board of Supervisors and the County Treasurer.

SEC. 3. Before the sale of any of said bonds, said Board of Supervisors shall, at a regular meeting of said Board, cause to be entered upon the records of said Board an order directing the sale of a specified amount of said bonds, and the day and the hour of such sale, which shall not be less than thirty days after the entry of said order, and shall cause a copy of such order to be inserted in a newspaper published in said county and in some weekly newspaper in San Francisco, to be designated by said Board of Supervisors, for at least three successive weeks, and a notice that sealed proposals will be received by said Board for the purchase of said bonds. On the day and hour named in said order the said Board shall open all sealed proposals received by them, and shall award the purchase of said bonds to the highest responsible bidder, provided that the said Board may reject any or all bids; and provided further, that no bonds shall be sold for less than eighty cents on the dollar, par value.

SEC. 4. The said Board may sell said bonds at not less than ninety cents on the dollar par value without the notice provided for in the preceding section.

SEC. 2. The amount of bonds sold, their number and dates shall be entered upon the records of said Board.

SEC. 6. The proceeds of the sale of said bonds shall be paid into the County Treasury, and shall be expended under the direction of said Board of Supervisors for the purpose of building three bridges across Owens River, one at Lone Pine on or near the site of the present bridge, one at Bend City on or near the site of the present bridge, and one at a point on Owens River in Bishop Creek Valley, or at Big Pine, at a point to be selected by the Board of Supervisors; and for the purpose of building a Court House and Jail in the said county of Inyo.

SEC. 7. After the passage of this Act and until all bonds sold are redeemed, the said Board are hereby authorized and it shall be their duty to levy annually, and at the same time that other State and county taxes are levied, a tax not exceeding forty cents on each one hundred dollars value of taxable property in said county; provided, that said tax may be levied at a special meeting of said Board for that purpose for the year A. D. one thousand eight hundred and seventy two. Such tax, when collected, shall constitute a fund for the payment of the interest on said bonds and for the liquidation of the same, and shall be named the "Interest and Building Fund;" and if any interest shall be due on said bonds and there is no money in said Interest and Building Fund to pay the same, the County Treasurer shall transfer to the said Interest and Building Fund from any and all of the other funds of said county except the School Fund a sufficient sum to pay said interest.

SEC. 8. Whenever on the second day of January in each year, after the year A. D. one thousand eight hundred and seventy three, there shall remain in said Interest and Building Fund, after all the interest then due has been paid, a sum of five hundred dollars or more the said Board of Supervisors shall advertise in a newspaper published in said county and also in some weekly newspaper published in San Francisco, to be designated by said Board, for the space of three weeks, for sealed proposals for the redemption of said bonds, and one week from the expiration of the time of such publication the said Supervisors shall open the sealed proposals and shall pay the bonds offered at the lowest price, as far as the money in the Interest and Building Fund will extend; provided, that no bids shall be considered for more than the par value of said bonds. Should there be no proposals made for par value or less, then the money in the said Interest and Building Fund shall be used for the redemption of said bonds according to the number of their issue, of which the County Treasurer shall give the same notice as is required by law in the case of the redemption of county warrants; and from the date of said notice the bonds proposed to be redeemed shall cease to draw interest, and if any such bonds shall not be presented for redemption within three months from the date of such notice the County Treasurer shall apply the money for the redemption of bonds next in order of the number of their issue.

SEC. 9. Whenever any bond shall have been paid, the County Treasurer shall mark the same "canceled" over his signature, and return the same to the County Auditor, in the same manner as redeemed county warrants, with interest coupons which are not then due attached.

SEC. 10. In the event the said bonds or a sufficient amount of the same cannot be sold at the minimum price as provided in section three, the Board of Supervisors are authorized to levy annually a tax of not exceeding forty cents on each one hundred dollars in value of taxable property in said county, for the purpose of building three bridges, and the Court House and Jail above mentioned. Said tax to be levied at the same time that other State and county taxes are levied; provided, that said tax may be levied at a special meeting for that purpose of said Board in the year A. D. one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two. The levying of said tax shall cease as soon as three bridges, a Court House and Jail have been built and paid for.

SEC. 11. This Act shall take effect from and after its passage.

Passed Senate February 29; passed Assembly March 7; approved March 12, 1872.

The Age of the World.

"Soldiers recollect that from the hights of these pyramids forty centuries look down upon you," said Napoleon to the army which he led into Egypt. Was the great captain historically correct? Did he use a pardonable exaggeration, or did his figures fall short of the truth? He had certainly wandered a little even from the chronology of Rollin. That writer, whose authority was accepted until a late epoch, placed the first historical date 2,188 years, and the construction of the pyramids 1,000 years before the Christian year. This would give them a little less than thirty centuries. But later researches in the twin sciences of archæology and Egyptology have pretty nearly overthrown Rollin's crude calculations, and most modern authorities are disposed to assign a much greater age to the world. On that subject M. Jules Oppert is about to publish a work which must attract attention. M. Oppert recalls that there were among the Egyptians measures the time, or cycles, of 1,460 years each, of which the last ended in 139 A. D. Tracing these periods back it will be found that one began in the year 11,542 B. C. Among the Assyrians likewise our author claims to have discovered analogous cycles of 1,805 years, the last of which terminated 712 B. C. Counting these periods back in the same manner it will be found that one of them also begins at the date 11,542 B. C. From this coincidence, M. Oppert infers that the year 11,542 marks the beginning of reckoning time among the two oldest peoples, and consequently the beginning of the historical era. He also finds this conjecture supported by some considerations based on the Chaldaic chronology, which placed 39,000 years between the historical period and the Deluge. If equal credence be given to the entire system of the Chaldeans, which I do not understand M. Oppert to affirm, there must be added the trifling period of 432,000 years between the origin of the human species and the Deluge, making a total of 482,542 years for the age of the globe and its inhabitants.

Busy Times.

Mr. Harry Thomas informs us that arrangements have been made for the immediate commencement of work on the canal from Tulare Lake to Antioch. The survey is fully completed, and the work pronounced possible and practicable. Save a divergency of about four miles in the vicinity of Firebaugh's ferry the canal will run along and through the foothills. The Superintendent wants 5,000 men and teams to commence work immediately, and continue until the enterprise is fully completed. If white men cannot be obtained it is the intention to put on Chinese. In consequence of this the people in the vicinity of Firebaugh's are anticipating busy times.—Fresno Expositor.

Earthquake Investigation.

The public will be glad to learn that Prof. Whitney, State Geologist, intends to start forthwith for Inyo county, especially to collect all the data and investigate on the spot all the phenomena of the earthquakes which still disturb that region. As the Professor has made the study of earthquakes a specialty, and pursues it on strictly scientific methods; as, moreover, he is more familiar than any other man with the geology and physical geography of California; he is the man above all others for the important work he is about to undertake. The Inyo disturbance is the most remarkable of its kind known to have occurred in North America since its settlement by Europeans. There is so much shallow theorizing about its causes, and so many loose statements about its results, that a careful investigation and report by a thoroughly cultivated and cool-headed scientist like Whitney cannot fail to prove exceedingly valuable. Incidentally, no doubt, the whole subject of earthquakes in California would be discussed, and an official statement of the facts in this connection would set at rest many foolish exaggerations.—San Francisco Bulletin, April 17th.

Again Snowed Up.

Saturday evening a severe snow storm began at Percy, on the line of the Union Pacific, and worked its way eastward. At Sunday noon it had reached Cheyenne, where the snow fell three feet deep on the level. During yesterday the trains did not move much, as the wind was blowing a perfect gale, drifting the fine, dry snow of the mountains hither and thither, so that it was impossible for the engineers to see or the men to work. In consequence of the storm no train from the West arrived here yesterday. Two trains were consolidated to-day at Cheyenne, and will arrive here to-morrow noon. During last evening we felt the effects of the storm here in Omaha, as the wind was blowing very strong from the West, and the weather turned cold very suddenly. It was predicted that we would have snow here to-day, but on the contrary, the weather has been mild and pleasant. —Omaha Bee, April 17th.

New Railroad Town.

Mr. Jacob informs us that he was down on the line of the railroad last week, and that the company are laying out a town sixteen miles south of the San Joaquin, to be called Fresno, which will be the most important point in our neighboring county. The railroad company are building extensive machine shops there, have already constructed a turn-table, and are building numerous side tracks—more of which are already laid than they have in San Jose. The site is in a very fertile region, with abundance of good water. The present station, six miles this side of the San Joaquin, is only temporary. The construction trains advanced to Fresno last Saturday, and the graders will reach Kings River in two weeks. Mr. Stanford will be in Visalia this week, if the Goat Island imbroglio does not prevent, and we shall then have the question of the location of the depot settled.—Visalia Delta, April 26.

Be Cheerful.

Emerson says: "Do not hang a dismal picture on your wall, and do not deal with sables and gloom in your conversation." Beecher follows with: "Away with these fellows who go howling through life, all the while passing for birds of paradise. He that cannot laugh and be gay should look well to himself. He should fast and pray until his face breaks forth into light." Talmage then takes up the strain: "Some people have an idea that they comfort the afflicted when they groan over them. Don't drive a hearse through a man's soul. When you bind up a broken bone of the soul and you want splints, do not make them of cast iron." After such counselings and admonitions, lay aside your long faces.

Independence Stage Route.

Harry Wright (handsome Harry), of the firm of Wright & Ullrick, Independence stage route, informs us that the travel on their route is steadily increasing and promises to so continue. The journey from San Francisco to Cerro Gordo is made in 10 hours less time by this than by the Southern route. Of course, in a country where time is so valuable as it is in this, the travel must increase on this route. We congratulate the proprietors; they deserve a fortune and are in a fair way to obtain it. Mr. Wright is detained in Carson on account of sickness in his family.—Carson Register, April 27.

Stewart.

The electrical philosopher, is not without honor save in San Jose. The Mercury of that city says: The earth has been in almost a constant tremor for weeks, showing beyond cavil that the disturbance is of a volcanic character. It upsets completely our townsman's—Judge Stewart—electrical theory as an explanation of the causes of these phenomena.—S. F. Chronicle.

Altogether.

Fort Scott, Kansas, is one of the altogetherest places in the West. A man has a lot for building on. From the cellar he digs stones enough to build a house, takes clay sufficient to lay the stone, yellow ochre enough to paint the building, coal to last six months, and slate pencils enough to last his family a lifetime.

Household Electricity.

During the extraordinary clear cold weather which prevailed in February and March the electrical phenomena observed in some houses excited much interest. In our own dwelling, for many days, no member in the family could walk across a room and come in contact with a metallic substance without receiving an electrical shock, accompanied with a spark and report. The door-knobs, stop-cocks connected with steam radiators, gas-cocks, registers, etc., were so electrically spiteful that they were handled with caution. Our children amused themselves in the evening by lighting the gas with their fingers, and altogether the electrical condition of the atmosphere was quite unusual. In order that this exhibition of house hold electricity may be witnessed in perfection, it is necessary that the weather be clear and cold, and that the rooms be carpeted with heavy carpets, and these should be insulated by paper mattings beneath. Under these favorable conditions, a person shuffling or even walking across a room becomes so charged with electricity that he can ignite a gas jet readily, by applying to it the tip of his finger.—Boston Journal of Chemistry.

New Building Material

Aluminous paper is a new material somewhat extensively used at the East, particularly in Chicago, as a substitute for lathing and plastering, and on the interior of ordinary buildings. The advantages claimed for it are: Nominal expense in laying on, capability of application at any or all seasons, non-liability to be contracted by heat or expanded by dampness, and the furnishing a smooth even surface on which can be laid paint, paper or whitewash, which will adhere without previous preparation. The Chicago Journal of Commerce claims that it is more wholesome than plank ceiling or plastering, which are more or less affected by the various changes of the atmosphere. It is not easily burned. Indeed, it is chemically so saturated by various ingredients that it would not blaze. Placed even in a furnace it merely smoulders and dissolves. It is made of any desirable thickness. Used as exterior sheeting for roofs or walls of buildings, and covered with shingles or siding, a better wall is made than with ordinary boards, because the air is entirely excluded, and most of the material being of non-conducting substances, a better wall is made both to exclude the heats of Summer and ward off the colds of Winter.

THE ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC RAILROAD.

A party of the leading representatives of the Atlantic and Pacific, or 35th parallel railroad, are now in San Francisco for the purpose, it is supposed, of submitting definite propositions to the capitalists of that city looking to the immediate construction of the trans-continental road. The indications are all very favorable for the undertaking. The Goat Island grab, particularly, has satisfied San Francisco that she must take some action to protect herself. It is high time her citizens should do something besides simply to sit still and wait for others to pour gold into their coffers, not one cent of which has been devoted to any puplic enterprise intended to benefit the country at large. The Goat Island grab, the late snow blockade on the present overland railroad, the manifest superiority in every respect of the 35th parallel route, the earnest desires of the great city of St. Louis to complete this road, and other inducements of many kinds bearing on this question, are of so much weight that we feel assured many months will not pass until work on this road is begun in dead earnest. The Goat Island bill has already passed the House of Representatives in spite of the remonstrance of the city of San Francisco, and as it is almost sure to pass the Senate, the Atlantic and Pacific road must be built, and soon too, or that city, to use an expressive vulgarism, "goes up the flume."

As this road when completed will run through Walker's Pass, bringing it within easy distance of this section, it will inevitably exert a vast influence on our future prospects, and accordingly its progress towards completion will be watched by all here with the greatest interest.

Bill for Suppression of Polygamy.

The Senate Committee on Territories have about concluded the consideration of the bill to prevent polygamy in Utah. It features are partially the same as those contained in Voorhees' bill, now under consideration by the House Committee on the Judiciary. It authorizes the Courts to proceed against Mormons who practice polygamy, and makes the fact of cohabitation and acknowledgement of marriage sufficient for conviction. The bill will shortly be reported to the Senate for the purpose of having it printed.

Railroad to the Colorado

It is not generally known that the Mormons are actively engaged in the construction of a railroad from Salt Lake southward, traversing all the rich mining and agricultural districts of Southern Utah, and designed to connect with the 35th parallel road at the Colorado. This Summer it will be completed a distance of sixty miles. It will be an important feeder of the Southern Pacific. In the Winter it will be the means of bringing all the trade of Utah in this direction, and in the Summer, all that portion of it south of Salt Lake City.

Importance of a Paper.

The business men of Corrinne, recognizing the importance of a local newspaper, have, in a body, waited on Judge Toohy, editor of The Corrinne Reporter, and offered him a bonus of $5,000 to continue the publication of his paper at that place, and not publish The Gentile Sun at Salt Lake City. The offer was accepted, and The Reporter appears again. It is the old Gentile paper of Utah. The population of small places seldom properly appreciate the benefit done by a local paper, and do not often discover its importance to the community which it represents, even after it has suspended.

New Nevada Paper.

The Virginia Evening Chronicle, recently started by Messrs. Bean & Ginn, at Virginia city, regularly reaches us, indorsed with an invitation to X. You bet! It is a little the nattiest, rattling specimen of newspaper snap and enterprise that has come under our notice, and is well worthy of unqualified success as the Chronicle of the chief of all the Silverlands.

County Bonds.

The Act of the Legislature authorizing the issue of county bonds for building purposes, will be found complete on our first page. It is worthy a careful perusal.

SOME FACTS.

Now and then the wails of croakers assail the ears of the public concerning Inyo and her prospects, as these gentlemen exercise their penchant for bemoaning everything generally. While perfectly willing to admit that the misfortune of having Whipples and earthquakes is a weighty discouragement, we rest in supreme confidence that our vast and varied interests will eventually attract a due share of the world's attention, the county soon recover and resume its steady march to wealth and prosperity. Possessing every essential interest, Inyo combines in her numberless mines, farms, grazing land, timber and unlimited water power a happy union of all that could be desired—only lacking population and capital to render us one of the most prosperous communities in the world.

In due consequence of the terrible misrepresentations of parties reporting us as helpless paupers, some time will doubtless lapse before any entirely new enterprises are ventured upon, but during the season every established operation will be conducted with renewed vigor and more marked success. Cerro Gordo never looked better, and her facilities for producing and shipping bullion were never half so good. Allowing but 25 running days per month, her three furnaces will in the next year produce $1,400,000 in silver, at the lowest calculation, saying nothing of the base metal. The enormous business connected with the production and transportation of 5,000 tons of metal is no small item of itself, and we are confident that an additional smelting operation will further increase this industry. The interest manifested in the various new mines recently opened further north in the Inyo range will perhaps wane, although the present Summer may see capital taking hold of them. The Eclipse corporation, inspired with new energy from personal examination by the heaviest of its wealthy stockholders, immediately resumes work. To-morrow's mail will bring word that the famous Kearsarge, with all its checkered history, is in the hands of an experienced, able company, who will vindicate its name and true wealth. The magnificent Silver Sprout, just above, the San Carlos and old Union, across the vrlley, will find their owners doing something with the rest, if present plans remain unchanged. The most casual observer can not fail to note the real prosperity of the "outside districts," which nearly surround us.

Of the farmers, "the bloated landholders," we have only to report their certainty of crops and good prices—which is another fact not to be sneezed at, since the ranches extend, with but little interruption, from Round Valley to away below Lone Pine, a distance of a hundred miles. Camp Independence will not be removed, and the no-fence law is in full effect.

The assessment roll will foot up $400,000 more than last year, and county warrants are a notch higher than ever before.

The California Mail Bag.

One of the most curious epitomes of wit, sense and sentiment (if the distinctions are allowable), that has yet come under our notice, is The California Mail Bag and News Letter, a monthly publication in book form containing 150 pages in fine print. It has something to say, briefly and to the point, upon all current topics, and each number is fitted out with a fine picture of some prominent Californian, and also a real photograph of some lady, the April number containing that of Miss Rose Evans, the well known actress. T. Marriott, 623 Montgomery street, San Francisco. Price, 25cts per copy.

No-Fence in Kern County.

The farmers and stockmen together of Kern county have a Settlers' Protective Association for the purpose of protecting themselves from stock coming in from other counties, as well as that belonging in their own. Their mustang Senator's course in the late Legislature on the fence question is strongly condemned

The Indirect Claims.

The New York Tribune, April 26, says editorially:

We regret that there is reason for the statement that the Administration has already abandoned its attitude on the Alabama question; that the Secretary of State has written to Gen. Schenck expressing regret at the misunderstanding which has arisen concerning the claims for indirect damages, because we conceived we had the right to include them under the treaty; that the case cannot be amended or withdrawn, because the treaty contained no provision for amendment except by counter case; but that we expected no award would be made for them; that we do not wish any; we desire none may be made; and we hope Her Majesty's Government will permit the arbitration to go forward.

SOME MORE ON THE SAME SUBJECT.

We learn from The Sacramento Union, dated April 26, this important fact:

Colonel Whipple, who was sent out by the people of Lone Pine to obtain relief for the sufferers by the recent terrible earthquake, started home yesterday. He has just received the following letter from the Secretary of the Relief Committee:

LONE PINE, April 16th, 1872.

Colonel Charles Whipple, South Vallejo—My Dear Colonel: Everything remains in statu quo. No contributions from San Francisco; nothing from Los Angeles. Loomis has built a frame store. No other buildings are going up, as there is no lumber or money. Our sick are but slowly recovering and our treasure is at ebb tide. Read THE INYO INDEPENDENT and see what our friendly neighbors of Independence have done for us. I sent yesterday $44, amount for eleven subscribers for The Visalia Delta. The Inyo abortion of a newspaper cannot be seen here any more. We are in expectation of a letter from San Francisco to-morrow. Brady is here and says THE INYO INDEPENDENT has acted scandalously. John Lucas received your letter. We have two or three slight shocks every twenty-four hours.

Yours in haste, ROBT. L. GURNEY.

As the same important letter, "just received," had been presented for publication in The Daily Bulletin several days previously, it becomes a matter of more or less consequence to know who "Robt. L. Gurney" is. His name don't appear on the Great Register, nor do we know any one claiming the honor of his acquaintance. Some people think he is the somewhat noted politician of the same name who lived, flourished and died in the Eastern States a few years ago; others don't think so, but admit that he has a home and a local habitation (providing it was not originally of adobes), among us, but we know nothing of his antecedents except that furnished in the following address from one New York hackman to him while he was engaged in the same line of business: "Oh, yes, I know you werry well, Mr. Gurney; I knowed you always, ever since you and your little brother was borned. There was two of you born that time; one was a werry nice little boy, and one was a hidiot. The werry nice little boy he died." Whether this meagre account of his history is correct or not, we are glad to know that he and his distressed confreres have returned Visalia a portion of her contribution, and that they have now become patrons of the press, even though it did take a first-class earthquake to bring it about. It was fortunate, though, that this little matter of newspaper subscription was attended to before the treasure got down to "ebb tide."

Here is another extract from The Vallejo Chronicle of a late date:

Colonel Whipple paid a visit to The Chronicle office, this morning, and from him we learn that the recent statements of THE INYO INDEPENDENT throwing discredit on his report of the earthquake are made in the interest of a Court-house Bond Ring at Independence. They desire to dispose of some $40,000 of bonds at as good a rate as possible, and fear that reports of the Inyo disaster if truly given, may injure the speculation in that stock. We believe the report that Colonel Whipple made of the extent of the disastrous nature of the earthquake has not been overdrawn in a single particular, and undoubtedly much destitution and suffering exists among those who in a moment of time were rendered shelterless, without food or raiment. He has collected some $4,000 in San Francisco for their relief, although the damage in Inyo is estimated at not less than $250,000. The Colonel, whose wife and family are residing at South Vallejo, proposes to start on his return to Lone Pine on Wednesday, but will not remain, having had an experience in earthquake visitations that he cares not to repeat.

We hardly know which to admire most—the Colonel's persistent efforts in trying to make people believe his constituents here are all distressed paupers—a used up community, or The Chronicle's simple-minded credulity. We would like to know what possible good could inure to this paper, or to the people of this county by covering up such an amount of destitution in order to effect the sale of a few thousand dollars' worth of bonds, not one dollar of which could be diverted from its legitimate object for the alleviation of distress, individual or general, no matter how great? Admitting even half the reported destitution, would it not cost the county the full value of these bonds and perhaps as much more to relieve it, which, if not done, would end in a general hegira of our people? Would it not have redounded more to our personal and the general benefit, so far as the bonds are concerned, for us to have sustained this appeal and "went in" for a share of the spoils?

As the matter now stands we do not belong either to the "Court-house" or the "Pauper Ring," and as we are really loser in damage to building quite as much in proportion to business profits as anyone else, and as we have some little reason to believe the latter "ring" won't divide with us or any other paper but The Delta, and as we know the first named "ring" has nothing whatever to divide, it looks a little like we were in a bad row of stumps, but it won't appear quite so stumpy, when it is understood that the first mentioned ring as yet has no existence, and that we are as completely independent of the pauper ring as if it did not exist.

Look at the provisions of that bill, which will be found on the outside of this issue, and see whether it is for a general or special interest? Whether it is not as much to the interest of the honest tax payers of Lone Pine as any portion of Inyo county? None of this class there or elsewhere can or will justify Colonel Whipple's persistent and gratuitous efforts to impose an additional and wholly unnecessary expense upon every such tax payer in the county by rendering these bonds utterly worthless in the market? We know that capitalists in San Francisco scout and laugh at the idea of purchasing securities issued by a county so entirely bankrupt as they believe this to be. There was something at first to excuse this movement but no real justification whatever for its continuence. Here is a county whose tax receipts the present year will be full $10,000 in excess of those of any previous year, notwithstanding the losses. We make this statement on the estimates of the Sheriff and Assessor. Here is a county whose every interest, mineral and agricultural, is progressing precisely as if no earthquake had ever occurred, and yet some of her own citizens persist in damning her future prospects for years to come by maintaining that there is a state of affairs which never did exist. The squelching of the bond sales is a matter of very small consequence indeed, compared to other results, the consideration of which we will now have to pass, but will remark that the first tangible result will be the levy of a direct tax, as provided by law, for the purposes named in that bill. There is scarcely a doubt but the pauper ring have entailed as much or more damage upon the prospects of this county than the earthquake itself, and very much of it entirely unnecessary, too.

We make the following extracts from The Visalia Delta, of April 25, appearing in connection with some Lone Pine correspondance, of which more anon:

THE INYO INDEPENDENT in its zeal to prevent the effects of the earthquake from being magnified, and so having that section suffer in the estimation of the outside world, depreciate the loss sustained by the people, and would discourage friends from abroad from contributing in response to the appeals of the Lone Pine Board of Relief.

The Delta in its preceding issue deprecated with considerable warmth the exaggerated reports concerning the power and effects of the earthquake in its own locality, claiming rightfully enough that it was doing a great injury unnecessarily. That is exactly our position; a desire to correct harmful exaggerations. The extent of these exaggerations may be inferred from the fact that no one was injured anywhere except those occupying adobe houses That unfortunate fact, involving such a loss of life and property, has served to intensify and magnify the whole thing clear beyond reason, or what would have been considered reason, had there have been an equal amount of damage from any other cause. There would in that case have been no howling and whining all over the State about our destitution, but even those men who have been so active in this business, would have gone to work to help the really destitute and retreive their own fortunes as best they might, like men and Californians used, as most all are, to more sweeping disasters. As for the losses, The Delta in the issue alluded to, if our memory serves us right, claimed a greater loss than ours by a late fire in its own or an adjoining county, but it scarely occasioned remark, least of all any sign of a relief committee, yet it thinks our arguments are very weak because we admit a loss of $100,000 while but $2,200 was received. If the loss had been three times as much, so long as it was confined, as was the case herewith very few exceptions, to those who were able to stand it, there was no justification for such loud calls for help from any source. Those whose losses were hardly figured up at all were the real and almost the only objects of charity. We subjoin the report of the Relief Committee with the names attached as printed in The Delta, which report, that paper states, "has the endorsement of every member of the Relief Committee as well as many of the most responsible men of the county." We except to the first statement and the latter only excites a smile. The Secretary, Goldman, refused to sign this document or take any more stock in the business, and if we are not misinformed, was soon after superceded. There is also lacking one or two names of the original Committee, as well as several of those of the most responsible men of Lone Pine, why we can't say, for they certainly had the opportunity, and with two exceptions so far as we know sympathise with the "ring." We think though that it was because they thought the reported number receiving charity from actual need was about six times too large. Among the names signed we note that of the gentleman who over his own signature was the very first to call our attention to the loss and assessment business. Circumstances alter cases "somewhatly." We might in addition to these "few remarks" explain the real reason why Los Angeles failed to respond to the first call for help but it requires a little more space than we wish to devote to the subject at this time. Here is the report:

Permit me to give you a brief report of this Board of Relief, we have received in all (including the donation by your generous people) $2,320; we have buried 22, and at the present moment have 24 patients on hand, and we hope before long to see them all recover, over 150 persons have been and are still taken care of by the Board of Relief, and are supplied with only the necessaries of life, such as flour, potatoes and some groceries. The balance in the Treasurer's hands is only $300, and unless we receive more aid (as has been promised) from San Francisco, we shall be compelled to send our disabled, sick and crippled to Camp Independence, upon the charity of the Government. [OH!!]

Los Angeles has sent us in the shape of aid numerous letters of condolence and sympathy. They can hold meetings to relieve us in that angelic city, but it is disgusting to record that a community which had derived nothing but benefits for years and years, have backed down upon our people for the simple reason, that as soon as the railroad is completed to Visalia the whole trade of the Owens river country will naturally have to go there, and rest assured that the whole community, without any exception, not only favor it, but are doing all in their power to bring about the so much wished for result. [Bah!]

Signed by the following citizens and business men:

F. H. Burroughs, C. D. Begole, Daneri & Stewart, C. C. Lyman, J. G. Dolye, S. Zaun, C. & M. Cohn, Dr. P. G. Gelcich, Inyo Drug store, Joy H. Stratton, A. G. Harvey, F. K. Miller.

The Troubles in Texas.

Of late the Mexicans have made frequent depredations upon people and possessions on the frontiers of Texas. Rumors have reached us of movements on the part of the Texans to stop these outrages by force, and the threats of the people in that locality would probably have been carried into execution, had our Government not taken notice of the facts. We are informed that the Government has issued peremptory orders to Generals Sheridan and Augur to summarily arrest all intruders from Mexico found on Texas soil, and all persons found violating the revenue laws. In conjunction with these orders a strong military force has been ordered to the Rio Grande to arrest the depredations of the bands of Mexican robbers who have so long been a scourge to the frontier. It has many times been suggested to take this imbecile power under the strong protection of the United States, and it would seem to be at least an act of humanity towards that distracted country to lend her protection, in the shape of a strong cavalry force on the border, against her own people and their revolutionary tendencies.—Eureka Sentinel.

If no better plan suggests itself, we would propose to send V. Colyer down there with force sufficient to put all of these obstreperous people on reservations.

The Cincinnati Conventions.

A Cincinnati dispatch of April 26 states that "it is now the general opinion that the Reunion and Reform Convention, which meets at Mozart Hall, will transact its business on the first day, and then league itself with the Liberal Republican Convention. The greater part of the first day will be occupied by the Liberal Republican Convention in getting ready for work. The permanent officers will not take their seats before Thursday, and not until then will the regular work begin. Gen. Grosvenor, who may be said to be the representative of the Missouri and Kansas delegation, thinks that Charles Francis Adams has the best prospect for the nomination at this time. He says that with Adams for President and Gratz Brown for Vice-President, the people of Missouri and Kansas will be perfectly satisfied. The New York delegation, 150 in number and headed by Gov. Fenton, will arrive on Monday, and will make their headquarters at the Merchants' Hotel. Gov. Palmer and a number of the Illinois Liberals will also stop at the same place. Some seventy or eighty members of the Missouri and Kansas delegation have already arrived, and are located in various parts of the city."

Newspaper Change.

W. H. Mills, late of The Rescue, the temperance journal, and A. D. Wood have purchased The Sacramento Record, which is hereafter to be run wholly independent of the railroad and all other cliques. Mr. G. F. Parsons, to whose marked ability The Record is mainly indebted for the popularity it has enjoyed in the past, will continue to occupy the position of editor-in-chief, the new proprietors confining their attention mainly to the business management of the paper.

Terrible Disaster.

About eighty lives were lost by the explosion on the steamer Oceanus on Red River, about thirty miles below Cairo, Illinois. The scene is described as being heart-rending in the extreme, and the explosion most terrific. The whole upper portion of the steamer was thrown off with its living freight into the water, and those poor wretches not killed by the explosion were chilled to death.

THE INYO TRESPASS LAW.

To satisfy numerous inquiries on the subject we append the following four sections of the above act, and state that it went into effect on the 1st of April last:

SEC. 1. The provisions of an Act entitled an Act to protect Agriculture and to prevent the trespassing of animals on private property in the counties of Los Angeles, San Diego, and parts of Monterey, approved February 14, 1872, are hereby extended to, and shall have full force and effect in, the county of Inyo from the fifteenth day of March to the fifteenth day of November in each year.

SEC. 2. No person in the county of Inyo shall be able to maintain an action for damages under the provisions of this act except those who have complied with the laws regulating the right and granting title to the public lands of this State and the United States.

SEC. 3. All acts in conflict with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed.

SEC. 4. This Act shall take effect from and after its passage.

The Missouri Mob.

A Chicago dispatch of April 26 says:

Details of the murder of Stevenson, Cline and Datro, on the railroad track near Holden, Missouri, yesterday, by a mob, shows it to have been one of the most diabolical outrages ever committed, the bodies of the victims being riddled with balls and then dragged out of the cars and thrown on the side of the track. Cline was shot first. Stevenson escaped into the baggage car, and barred the doors against the murderers, but the mob broke in and fired a volley into the car, killing him instantly. Datro was mortally wounded at the first fire and left in the car; but after the train started it was stopped again, and a number of the fiends dragged the dying man out and threw the body beside those of the other victims. A report reached Kansas City that Judge Forsayth, another County Justice, was shot, and the body hung to a tree. Great excitement prevails throughout the county, and fears are felt that still others will be murdered. The perpetrators claim that they have 1,000 men in their organization.

Tornado in Kansas.

A tornado struck down Coffeyville, Kansas, on the evening of the 14th. Ex-Senator Ross' newspaper office was blown down, and the press carried a quarter of a mile from the building. The Warnum House, a drug store and seven or eight other buildings were totally demolished. A portion of the Elliott House was blown down and four of the inmates injured, one, it is feared, fatally. A train of freight cars on the Leavenworth and Galveston railroad was blown 100 feet from the track.

FROM OWENS RIVER TO LOS ANGELES.

U. S. MAIL AND STAGE.

NEW ARRANGEMENT—TIME REDUCED.—Stages of the above line will leave Lone Pine and Los Angeles every Monday morning at 6 o'clock, carrying mail and express, via Big Lake, Little Lake, Deseret Springs, Willow Springs and Elizabeth Lake, making the through time of THREE AND A HALF DAYS TO LOS ANGELES. This is the only regular and direct line to Los Angeles, is 80 miles shorter and passes over the finest and best road. Connects with the steamer and coast line of stages, rendering this line the cheapest and most pleasant route to San Francisco. Also, connect with all the stages to San Bernardino and Arizona.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

Saturday,.....May 4, 1872.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

 All advertisements, to insure insertion in these columns, must be handed in on or before 2 o'clock P. M., Friday.

The Courts.

Both the District and County Courts convene on Monday next, but we believe that each have a very light calendar. Though the school house is but a poor excuse as a court room, it is fancied that Judge Reed will not feel very immensely sorry that his old horror, the Court House, is so effectually done for. However, in addition to his personal popularity, the Judge is always welcomed when he comes around to give us our regular straightening up; and then he is entitled to the gratitude of every man in the county for his noble though unsuccessful efforts in our behalf on the railroad matter, at Sacramento.

The Union School.

An eight-months term of the George's Creek school closed on the 27th ultimo, having had but a small average attendance, owing to the changing and moving about of some of the families. Mr. S. W. Blaisdell, the teacher, furnishes us with the following Roll of Honor, giving the average standing of the pupils for the time they were in attendance: John A. Shuey, 96⅔; Frank D. Sears, 96⅔; Justin Sears, 95⅓; Charles Sears, 95; Eva Sheppard, 93⅓; Luella Sheppard, 91⅓; Eddie Sheppard, 90⅔; Ethel Cook, 90 7-12.

Burglary—$230 Stolen.

The store of Jacob Harris, just west of Camp Independence, was on Wednesday night last entered by burglars and robbed of $200 in coin and a $30 check. The party or parties effected an entrance through the window, and there being no one sleeping in the store, had things pretty much their own way. The money and check were taken from a box, the lock of which was bored out by a brace and bit, and the rascals escaped with their booty, without leaving a clue or suspicion, but it is to be hoped that they may yet be caught.

Sale of "Feet."

Col. C. C. Thomas, representing a part of the old Virginia & Cerro Gordo Company, on the 2d instant, sold 300 feet in the Union lead mine, Cerro Gordo, for $4 500, Messrs. Belshaw & Beaudry being the purchasers. We understand that the latter gentlemen, now owning the entire mine, intend putting up a steam engine for hoisting. The lowest working of the Union is 225 feet in depth from the level of the San Felipe tunnel, which taps the ledge 210 feet below the surface.

In Town.

Among a lot of country folks now in town we note the presence of M. W. Belshaw of Cerro Gordo, Mr. Henry Heymen of the Eclipse, Wm. H. VanArsdale of Swansea, Dr. Columber of Lone Pine, Casper Cohn of Los Angeles, V. Beaudry of Cerro Gordo, W. A. Baker and D. Naylor of Big Pine, C. C. Thomas of Virginia, H. W. Robinson the stage man, Dr. Marriott of Cerro Gordo, and some others.

The Eclipse.

Mr. Henry Heyman, President of the Board of Directors of the Eclipse Gold Mining Company, a reputed wealthy mining shareholder of London, is now in the valley attending to the interest of that concern. Mr. Samuel Jones, a very competent and successful metallurgist, takes active charge as Superintendent.

Swansea.

Wm. H. Van Arsdale, Esq., has been appointed General Manager of the Owens Lake Silver-Lead Co., vice Mr. James Brady, resigned. Mr. Van Arsdale will continue the operations of this very successful company with their usual vigor, while Mr. Brady has already begun energetic mining in Waucoba district, on his own hook.

The Supervisors.

The Board of Supervisors will commence a regular session on Monday next, at the Clerk's office. They have an immense amount of business on hand, and doubtless the term will be a lengthy one. As a matter of great local interest, we shall of course give the fullest reports of their proceedings.

Goods for Cerro Gordo.

The enterprising house of Barrows & Dodd, Cerro Gordo, have an immense stock of general merchandise en route from the Bay, in order to keep up with the demands of their prosperous business. These gentlemen will do for Cerro Gordoans to tie to, and we bespeak for them a continued and increasing success.

Los Angeles Stage.

H. W. Robinson's stage is now making the through time of three days and a half between Lone Pine and Los Angeles, as will be seen by the time-table published under the head of "New Advertisements." This line is becoming a popular one, and we are glad to know is doing a good business.

May Party.

The good folks of Bishop Creek congregated and enjoyed themselves in a regular old fashioned May party, on Wednesday last, winding up with a ball at Sneden's Hall in the evening. The day was superbly got up for the occasion, and the occasion was a success worthy of the day.

Fandango.

We beg the pardon of the Piute natives of Inyo for not duly mentioning their little sociable, which took place west of town, one night last week. It was a very mild sort of a dance, but they seemed to like it, and the pale-faced participants had no particular objection. "He yah, he yah, hee!"

From Arizona.

D. H. Williams, W. T. Grant and Dr. Marriott have got back from the new Arizona district, Huallapia. They report that country a success in the future, but as having none of the great needful in circulation at present.

Check Lost.

See notice elsewhere of the loss of a Hiskey & Walker check, and then don't take it, as it has been stolen.

Dissolved.

Daneri & Stewart, of Lone Pine, have dissolved partnership, John Daneri assuming charge of the business.

Religious Notice.

Rev. Mr. Orne will hold Divine services in the school house in this place to-morrow at 11 A. M.

Personal.

We have had the pleasure of meeting on our streets Mr. Thomas Laspeyre, of Kern county, who is attending the present term of the District Court.

Benton.

We are indebted to a Benton correspondent for the following items concerning that argentiferous region: "About a month ago Messrs. Leet and Pierce arrived here from Virginia; the former gentleman examined the principal mines and was well pleased with their appearance. He remained about a week and then returned to Virginia. It was undecided then whether he would do anything or not, but last week he came back and has concluded to put up a mill, which will be here as soon as the roads will allow. It is to be like the Reno works, with furnace, etc., complete. Mr. Wilcox, now in charge of the mill put up by Williams, has been at San Francisco for over two months. When he left he only expected to be gone a couple of weeks, but one of the heaviest shareholders in the mill, Mr. Stebbins of the mint, had been called to Washington, where he was delayed by sickness—which has occasioned the unexpected detention of Mr. Wilcox. The people here are very sanguine and confident of success during the coming season, as they have rich mines and a good prospect of two 10-stamp mills being ready before long. Mr. Hightower is building a new stone store, and several private dwellings have been put up within the last three months. New mines, showing good ore, have been struck in the neighborhood of A. Mack's old claim, the Eureka. A. B. Williams is increasing his force, and the other mines will soon do the same."

Business Again.

We hear that Mr. Casper Cohn, of the firm of C. & M. Cohn, has just returned from Los Angeles, where he has obtained a large stock of new goods, with which the "Opposition Store" in Lone Pine will soon open out larger than ever. Notwithstanding the fact that we have had a little war with Mr. Cohn and some more down there, we are sorry for their misfortunes, and hope that every one of them who goes to work in the right spirit may have such success that they may forget there ever was an earthquake. We want to see Lone Pine and every other place in the county to flourish as it never did before. But all this don't necessarily stop anyone from waging war against us on his individual or the general account whenever and as long as the "spirit" moves him; sail right in. We would suggest, though, that it would be much to the advantage of the sensible residents of Lone Pine, as well as to the credit of all, if they would squelch a few of the nuisances who generally persist in working in the lead when it really worries them very much to know enough to follow decently.

Proposals for Quartermaster's Stores.

Lieut. W. E. Dove, A. A. Q. M., at Camp Independence, will receive proposals, till May 20th, for furnishing supplies of 150,000 pounds of barley, 200,000 pounds of hay and 600 cords of wood, to be delivered as required, and therein lies a chance for business.

The Store near the Post

Is now being run by Mr. Jacob Harris, he having purchased J. Earl's interest, as will be seen by reference to the new advertisements. Mr. Harris is a well-known Inyoite, and will "corral" a large share of business, as he offers very superior inducements to country patrons in the way of trading for produce, etc., etc., at cash prices.

Imported Stock.

The attention of farmers and stock-raisers is directed to the advertisement of Mr. John Clarke, of Bishop Creek, elsewhere. It costs no more to breed an animal worth $250 than it does to raise a six-bit mustang.

Old Stagers.

We notice the genial presence of Billy Wilson and Harry Wright, members of the board of directors of our northern line of steamers. They keep one eye peeled for earthquakes, and the other for the main chance.

The Shakes.

The earthquakes still continue intermittently. We guess they are winding up business, however.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

Pursuant to call this body met in Sacramento, April 25, and elected the following named delegates to the Philadelphia Convention: First District—E. L. Sullivan, James Withington and James Otis; Second District—A. K. Shute, J. W. B. Dickson and H. S. Sargent; Third District—E. Wadsworth, A. P. Starr and C. M. Patterson; Fourth District—C. S. Abbott, Thomas Vallen and A. Bronson.

The following list comprises the new State Central Committee: First District—Walter Murray, San Luis Obispo; Second District—G. M. Brown, Butte; Third District—Walter Van Dyke; Fourth District—W. C. Conroy; Fifth District—John Sedgwick, San Joaquin; Sixth District—Charles F. Reed, Yolo; Seventh District—F. W. Luzee; Eighth District—O. V. D. Gordon, Humboldt; Ninth District—Charles McDonald, Shasta; Tenth District—L. B. Ayer, Yuba; Eleventh District—J. F. Washburn, Calaveras; Twelfth District—John Martin; Thirteenth District—S. C. Bents, Merced; Fourteenth District—Charles Marsh, Nevada; Fifteenth District—Henry R. Reed, San Francisco; Sixteenth District—Cyrus Coleman; Seventeenth District—J. Q. A. Stanly, Los Angeles; Eighteenth District—C. P. Taggart, San Diego; Nineteenth District—F. Eastman, San Francisco; Twentieth District—Josiah Belden, Santa Clara. The Chair announced the following for the State at large; A. Heyward, F. D. Belden, Paul Newman, C. N. Pelton, John F. Miller, Wm. Sherman and E. B. Mott.

Everything passed off harmoniously. Just previous to the adjournment sine die the members all rose to their feet and gave three hearty cheers for Grant, which is sufficiently indicative as to how these delegates are to vote at Philadelphia.

—The following questions have been added to the list of a Chicago insurance company since the fire: 1. Do you keep a cow? 2. Is it a female cow? 3. Is it a farrow cow? 4 Is it a kicking cow? 5. Is kerosene used in milking?

Indian Hegira.

We learn that the Indians of Knight's Valley all left, last week, it is said, for Clear Lake, only leaving behind them one old squaw. The reason assigned by some for their flight is that they have received a revelation from the Great Spirit to the effect that the "gold god," or fire spirit, would soon make his appearance, and would burn them up if they remained; so they have gone to the lake, that they may have water handy to put themselves out should the spirit make an incendiary attempt upon them. Others say they went to join a large gathering of Indians from the north, who will assemble for the purpose of having a grand fandango. The old woman whom they left alone to starve is said by old residents to be about one hundred and twenty years old. When she was deserted she started for Calistoga, and in three days made three miles in that direction, when she was taken up by Mr. Brookshire, who brought her into town and left her at the Mountain House. Here she was supplied with food sufficient to satisfy the hunger of any three ordinary persons, which she eagerly devoured, and then started down the county road. She stated that her destination was Bale's Ranch, near Yountsville, which place she may possibly reach some time this Summer, if she does her best. The Petaluma Crescent also has information that the Healdsburg Indians have had revelations of a similar nature.—Sacramento Record, April 27.

VARIETIES.

—A young lady fast asleep is all right, but one fast awake is a dangerous character.

—"Massa Christopher Columbus was a queer man," said a negro orator. "A notion crossed him one day, an' den he crossed an ocean."

—How much sharper than a serpent's tooth is it to have a transient bourder who gives you a $20 bill for a fortnight's board, and when you tell him it is not good, steps out to change it and nevermore appears?

—The following questions have been added to the list of a Chicago insurance company since the fire: 1. Do you keep a cow? 2. Is it a female cow? 3. Is it a farrow cow? 4 Is it a kicking cow? 5. Is kerosene used in milking?

—A Chicago Times correspondent, now traveling in the South, writes home: "The readiness with which the invitation is usually accepted. The further South you go, the oftener you are asked to drink, and the seldomer do you refuse."

—A Georgia darkey, to whom Senator Sumner's supplemental civil rights bill was explained, characterized it as a trap "to kill fool niggers." "You see, sah, some fool niggers will go up to the Pulaski House and jess set himself down by a white man and that white man will just throw that nigger out the winder and broke his neck.

—A trial of strength was had at Port Rowan, N. Y., last week, to decide a bet that twenty men or even ten could hold the steam tug Watchman—twenty-four horse power—and that twenty-five men could stop her when she had a full headway, the men to have one hundred feet of coil to get under way. The trial of strength took place, and the men won.

—When a carpet is taken up to be cleaned the floor beneath it is generally very much covered with dust. This dust is very fine and dry, and poisonous to the lungs. Before removing it sprinkle the floor with very dilute carbolic acid to kill any poisonous germ that may be present, and so thoroughly disinfect the floor and render it sweet.

—Some one who considers himself authority on such subjects, says that the guests at a dinner party should remain only twenty minutes after dinner, or leave immediately after rising from the table, as the hour before and the hour after a dinner party is that which is so wearisome and trying to both host and hostess.

—A Michigan gin-mill keeper has this evasive arrangement: You put your ten cents on a spot marked "whiskey," the apparatus revolves, and directly you see a glass of whisky standing before you, and you don't know, of course, who gave it to you, or how it came there.

—A handsome young woman, an alleged widow, is Enoch Ardening New York with success. She gets a man to engage to marry her and settle on her in advance so much money, then her husband rushes in with a long beard and a revolver, and that is the last Philip Ray ever sees of the widow and the settlement.

—The Cincinnati Commercial just before the late election in that city, gave the following laconic definition of its political rule: Usually we take a Republican ticket, and after scratching it well, vote it. This time we propose to take a Democratic ticket, scratch it, and vote it. The right way is to use the ticket that requires the least scratching.

—"Mr. James," said a clergyman on a pastoral visit, "I don't see you and Mrs. James at church Sunday evening." "Well, no," replied Mr. James, "my wife has to stay at home to take care of the children, and as it comes rather hard on her, I stay at home to keep her company." "Why, how is that? Don't you keep servants?" "Oh yes, we keep two, but they don't allow us any privileges."

The Fatal Mistake.

A man may drink moderately, but steadily, all his life, with no apparent harm to himself, but his daughters become nervous wrecks, his sons epileptics, libertines, or drunkards; the heritary tendency to crime having its pathology and unvaried laws, precisely as scrofula, consumption, or any other purely physical disease. These are stale truths to medical men, but the majority of parents, even of those of more than average intelligence, are either ignorant or wickedly regardless of them. There will be a chance of ridding our jails and almshouses of half their tenants when our people are brought to treat drunkenness as a disease of the stomach and blood, as well as of the soul, to meet it with common sense and a physician, as well as with threats of eternal damnation, and to remove gin-shops and gin sellers for the same reason that they stagnant ponds or unclean sewers.—S. F. Figaro.

To Prepare Lime Whitewash.

Lime whitewash is made from lime well slacked. Dissolve two pounds and a half of alum in boiling water, and add it to every pailful of whitewash. Lime whitewash should be used very thin, and, when it is sufficiently bound on the wall by means of alum, two thin coats will cover the work better; this may be used for the first coat thinned with water. Most whitewashers apply their wash too thick, and do not mix a proportionate quantity of alum to bind it; consequently the operation of the brush rubs off the first coat in various parts, and leaves an uneven surface, and the original smooth surface of the wall is entirely destroyed.

BY A DISPLACED THREE-YEAR OLD.

Mozzer bought a baby,

Frou my rubber ring.
Ain't he awful ugly?
Ain't he awful pink?
"Just come down from Heaven,"
Tat's a fib I sink.

Doctor told anozzer
Great, big awful lie;
Nose an't out of joint zen,

Mamma stays up bedroom—
Guess he makes her sick;
Frow him in de gutter,
If I can, right quick.

Cuddle him and love him!

Don't care if my kite an't

Run away and play."

"Sink I ought to love him!"
No, I won't; so zere!
Nassy crying baby,
Not g t any hair.
Got all my nice kisses,
Got my place in bed.
Mean to take my drum-stick
And crack him on the head!

"Pikes"—Queer Specimens of Humanity Found in California.

The "Pike" has, I find, a tolerably large representation in Los Angeles county, as well as in its neighbor, San Diego. The Pike ought to be a Missourian, but there are also Texas Pikes, and in fact the name has been applied in this State to the wandering gipsy-like southern poor white. Your true Pike is a squatter—an invader of other people's rights. "He owns a rifle, a lot of children and dogs, a wife, and if he can read, a law book," said a lawyer describing this creature to me; "he moves from place to place, as the humor seizes him, and is generally an injury to his neighbors. He will not work, but he has great tenacity of life, and is always ready for a lawsuit." "I found a Pike the other day killing and salting hogs, and actually hauling the salt pork off to sell it," said a gentlemen in whose company we were discussing these people. "Surely that was an industrious Pike," said I "Yes, but confound it, they were my hogs," he replied, with a natural wrath at the recollection. Near San Diego a Pike family were pointed out to me, who had removed from Texas to California and back to Texas four times. They were now going back home again to please the "old woman," who, it seems, had had a fit of home-sickness. They traveled in an old wagon drawn by a pair of bronco or native horses, and would probably be six or eight months on the road. Of course they lived off the country, and probably lived as well on their travels as when they were settled.—Correspondence N. Y. Tribune.

Remedy for Cabbage Lice.

C. C. Best, of Jordon, New York, writes to The Tribune as follows: I lost all my cabbage last year from these pests, after trying remedies innumerable, recommended by countless persons who knew "just how" to fix them. But this year I "have met the enemy and they are ours," with a very simple remedy which I picked up from a nursery man. It is this; Buckwheat flour sprinkled on the cabbage (and lice) when the dew is on, or the cabbages are wet. I have made but one application—a very through one, though—and there is not a louse to be found on a single plant. Two weeks ago I gave up my plants as ruined, and was intending to ask you for a remedy. And not only cabbage plants, but it is equally efficacious with the currant worm, rose bug, etc.

Another writer speaks as follows in regard to this pest: The lice on cabbage caused a serious loss to farmers last year. They tried soot, ashes, sulphur, kerosene and tobacco, but they have proven useless. We have heard of one case, however, where the gentleman told us that he had raised a good crop of cabbage by sifting about a tablespoonful of table salt on each head in the morning, while the dew was on. In this manner he rid the cabbages entirely of lice.

—When is a mean man not a mean man? Never.

VARIETIES.

—Washington belles dye their poodles crimson.

— A Portland man went into a shop and stumbled through his errand in this fashion: "I want some white woman's long-legged cotton stocking hose."

—It is reported that there are seventy-five counties in Texas in which there is not a single Sunday school.

—Female students are admitted to the classes of the Topeka, Kansas, Medical College.

—The Louisville Ledger says in some portions of the South it is becoming dangerous to use even the word "niggardly"—the substitute therefor being 'colordly."

—A New Haven doctor quieted a clamorous landlord by showing him a skeleton in a closet, and saying that "that man came here just two weeks ago with a bill."

—The editor of The Rochester Courier describes a lady's satchel manufactured from varnished apple seeds. It is said to be a good specimen of neatness and patience.

—A New Milford (Conn.) parson, the other day, preached a sermon against divorced persons marrying again, and in less than ten days married two couples, of whom both grooms had been divorced.

—A college student being examined in Locke, where he speaks of our relations to the Deity, was asked, "What relations do we most neglect?" he answered with the utmost simplicity, "Poor relations, sir."

—A stranger, meeting a man in the streets of Boston, a few days ago, roughly accosted with, "Here, I want to go the Tremont house!" The deliberate reply was: "Well, you can go if you won't be gone long."

—They gave Senator Revels first-class hotel accommodations at Pittsburg the other day. The Chicago Tribune says it was because Pittsburg is so sooty that they don't know whether a man is white or black.

—Mrs. Partington reccommending a receipt to a friend who was suffering with a troublesome cough said she "had tried the pictorials without any belief." On the name being suggested, whether Harper or Leslie, she said "No, neither of 'em, it was Ayers."

—"Young man do you ever drink?" asked a mild looking man accosting Jones. "Well, yes, thank you, as its a cold morning I don't mind," replied Jones, removing his quid of tobacco. "Don't do it any more," rejoined the mild man, "or you will eventually be———. Good morning. God bless you."

Odious Comparisons.

A thief running away is a scamp, but a policeman's chase after him is a scamper.

The difference between a hotel keeper and the indiscreet publisher of The Times is that one lets out rooms and the other lets out rumors.

The reason why certain ritualistic ladies so revere their pastor is that they are, metaphorically speaking, the ewes of the flock, while he is the Ewer.

Simple as may seem the little succulent bivalve it takes all the forces of nature to make a clam, but in England it only takes Mr. Disraeli to make a clamor.

What distinction can be drawn between a sausage made of a sporting dog, and other things generally? Why the former is ate setter and the latter et ceterer.

The highest praise we can award to the best of our own sex is to say that he is "all man;" but the average women of the period is all manner. Which is an argument not heretofore advanced in favor of female suffrage.

As an instance of how the present administration transcends the traditions of our government it may be observed that while our national emblem is only a fowl the political doings at Washington are continually becoming fouller. —N. Y. World.

Seeing the Point.

A boy returned from school one day with a report that his scholarship had fallen below the usual average. "Well," said his father, "you've fallen behind this month, have you?" "Yes sir." "How did that happen?" "Don't know, sir." The father knew if the boy did not. He had observed a number of dime novels about the house, but had not thought it worth while to say anything until a fitting opportunity had offered itself. A basket of apples stood upon the floor, and he said: "Empty out those apples, and take that basket and bring it to me half full of chips." Suspecting nothing, the son obeyed. "And now," he continued, "put those apples back in that basket." When half the apples were replaced the son said: "Father, they roll off. I can't put any more in." "Put them in, I tell you." "But, father, I can't put them in." "Put them in. No, of course you can't put them in. Do you expect to fill it with apples? You say you don't know why you fell behind at school; I will tell you why. Your mind is like that basket. It will not hold more than so much. And here you have been the past month filling it with chip dirt—dime novels." The boy turned on his heel whistled and said: "Whew! I see the point." Not a dime novel has been seen in the house from that day to this.

LITIGANT PAPER FOR INYO COUNTY,

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY

CHALFANT & PARKER.

JAS. E. PARKER | P. A. CHALFANT

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

Saturday,.....May 11, 1872.

HORACE GREELEY FOR PRESIDENT.

Contrary to general expectation the Cincinnati Convention has selected Greeley for its Presidential candidate, with Gov. Brown, of Missouri, for Vice President. These nominations have been received with great enthusiasm by both parties in the Eastern and Southern States particularly, but from present indications, it is impossible to say what Greeley's chances are for beating Grant. Without a third man in the field they may be considered moderately fair, as he will be endorsed by the Democratic Convention which is to meet in St. Louis, in July, unless the advice of numerous leading Democrats is followed and a straight party ticket brought out. In that case it is thought Greeley will withdraw in favor of Grant.

The Labor Reform nominee, Judge Davis, without other endorsement, carries no weight. In fact as yet he has not signified his acceptance of that nomination, and probably will not.

Following is a synopsis of the Cincinnati platform: Equality of all men before the law; all union of States and no re-opening of questions settled by the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments; removal of disabilities incurred in the rebellion; general amnesty; local self-government; supremacy of the civil over military authority in respect to habeas corpus; return to methods of peace; maintain constitutional limitation of power; civil service reform; single term for the Presidency; a system of Federal taxation which shall not unnecessarily interfere with the industry of the people, and as there are honest irreconcilable differences of opinion as to the merits respecting the system of protection and free trade, that question to be remitted to the people in each Congressional district [wild cheering] and the decisions of Congress thrown wholly free of Executive interference or dictation; maintenance of public credit against repudiation in every form, and a speedy return to specie payment; recognition of services and sacrifices of soldiers and sailors; against further grants of land to railroads and other corporations; in foreign relations the duty of Government to cultivate friendship, and demanding nothing but right and submitting to nothing wrong.

Editorial Visit.

We note among other remarkable effects of the earthquake, we suppose, another and the second editorial visit to this office since its original establishment. We had so long enjoyed editorial solitude that visits of this assume something of the character of other earthquake phenomena, except only that they are a thousand times more agreeable. This time it was Mr. Dewey, of The Visalia Delta, who honored us with a most agreeable visit. Under his management The Delta has become a No 1 country paper, and will be appreciated in this county.

Railroad Matters.

The Los Angeles News of May 4, says there is a movement on foot there which may amount to something, looking to the immediate construction of a narrow-guage railroad to this county, following which smelting works will be established there.

Work is to be commenced at once at San Diego on the Texas and Pacific road.

It is reported that San Francisco and St. Louis have agreed on terms for the immediate construction of the Atlantic and Pacific road, one proposal from each side having been submitted previously and rejected.

Shaky.

Accounts from the other side indicate that the San Joaquin country stands on about as shaky a foundation as our own. On the first of May the worst of the season occurred in Merced, while there and in Tuolumne and adjacent counties there has been an average of one at least every day. Among the rest San Jose acknowledges the visits of several very noticeable "temblors."

Los Angeles Orange Crop.

About five-sixths of the orange crop of 1871-2 have been shipped to San Francisco thus far. The crop is stated by competent judges to be about five times as large as last Winter's crop, and the portion already shipped is estimated at 24,000 boxes, or about 5,000,000 oranges. The most inferior lots brought about $7 per 1,000, the average bringing between $20 and $30. Some extra fine sold as high as $35.

THE LIDA VALLEY TRADE.

We will again call attention to the necessity of doing something to retain, or more properly, to secure the trade from the eastern side of the Inyo range, not of Lida Valley alone, but also of the very extensive region to the south and east of that locality. New and valuable discoveries are being made throughout that section almost every day. We are informed that at least one hundred men are now prospecting, or regularly at work there, and this number is likely to increase all the time. This valley is the proper and most feasible place, if we choose to make it so, for them to obtain all their supplies. To accomplish this end it is necessary to have some work done on the road for some distance from both ends of Messrs. Greenly & Co's grade across the mountain—in short to make a passable, if not a good road, so as to reduce the present high rates of freight, all of which can easily be done, we have reason to believe, if the Board of Supervisors will establish one or more new road districts on the route, and then let some energetic man take the matter in hand and put it through. It is a matter that interests everybody in the valley, from this place northward particularly, and when properly understood there are plenty of persons who will contribute money or labor towards it. It will open a new market for considerable farm produce as well as lumber and merchandise, and all these interests ought to help. There is not much required from either, but a little from all. A very important matter in this connection is the establisment of mail communication. The Northern Stage Company will, we understand, put on a weekly stage over that road whenever, and as soon as ever, it is made reasonably passable, and when that is done, all the rest will follow in due course—but the road will have to be made or greatly improved before any stage can be put on.

As a hint of the value of this trade already, to say nothing of the probable and reasonably certain increase, we will mention that during the past ten weeks Lida has produced and sent forward some $20,000, and that too, while working under great and numerous disadvantages. Much of this money has been paid out and expended in that vicinity of course, and with the proposed improvements, would add that much to the general business of this valley. This amount does not include all, or the half even of the money expended there in the same manner by prospectors and other mining companies, of which there are several.

It costs now for freight $35 per ton to ship ore from the mines at Lida to the mill at Deep Springs. This is of itself enough to rate as good ore in some countries. Mr. Hiskey informs us that they have worked ore from six different mines, the lowest grade yielding not less $400 per ton, and in all these mines there is plenty of ore in sight. If this prospect will not warrant an effort in the direction suggested we don't know what will.

A Contemptible Proceeding.

After stirring up all possible mischief one "Major" Goldman has left Lone Pine, and is now most outrageously vilifying the people en masse, in reporting that they were quarreling over a division of money in the relief fund. He left before the San Francisco contribution came in, when there was exactly $17 in the treasury, which would hardly kick up much of a fight. Although deprecating and severely condemning the course taken to obtain this relief, we do not believe there has been a cent misapplied, at least not in the manner intimated by this man, nor is there any more foundation for his statements regarding the quarrels growing out of it than for the many others for which he was solely responsible while acting as Secretary to that Committee. He is playing the part of wet dog about as well as any one we know, is Major Goldman, alias Gurney.

Another Paper for Kern.

If Kern county long continues to fame unknown it will not be for the want of local papers to sing her praises—the third one now about being started at Havilah by Mr. DeWitt C. Lawrence, a young man well qualified for the undertaking, we are informed. We certainly hope all of them may have the most unbounded success, but it does seem to us that for one new, sparsely settled county Kern has more papers than she can decently support just at this time. We don't like to chronicle newspaper funerals.

Arizona.

The Arizona Miner still comes filled with accounts of Indian murders and outrages. It is disgraceful to the American people to allow such a state of affairs to continue.

RELIABLE BY TELEGRAPH.

As a specimen of how the eastern papers interpret their telegraphic dispatches from this coast, we append a few extracts of "The Terrible Earthquake in California," from The Toledo Blade:

"SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.

Dispatches from the volcanic districts in Inyo county, four hundred miles southeast of San Francisco, give additional particulars of the earthquake disaster of Tuesday last. The shock continues, though with decreased violence. It is remarkable that only the single slight shock of Tuesday was felt in central and northern California. Gerra Gordo was badly damaged. Some buildings were thrown down, but only one man was killed. Lone Pine appears to have been directly over the center of the disturbance. Among the killed at the latter place was Mr. Gregg, aged 42 years, a native of Texas. The remainder were all Spanish Americans. The first shock is described as like artillery fired directly beneath the town. Col. Whipple, who was in the second story of the Adobe House, states, etc.

* * * A chasm was opened, extending thirty-five miles down the valley, ranging from three inches to forty feet in width.

A Lone Pine dispatch to-day from Visalia says several shocks were felt in that city last night, and one was still coming from the south. * * * * * There are rumors that a volcano in active operation has been seen from the summit of Greenhood mountain, 600 miles south of Visalia, but they are considered at least dubious. The Indians in that vicinity have all left.

* * Additional advices from Myo county place the number killed by the earthquake Tuesday at thirty, and the wounded one hundred. In Desert county, extending from Owen's Lake to the Mexican line, are craters of innumerable volcanoes, and not long extinct. Several mud volcanoes are active.

* * Of course the matter is common conversation in California, but creates not the slightest apprehension outside of this, the district affected.

There is the whole thing in a nut shell, and as straight as a shingle. The Blade don't inform its readers what the result was after the arrival of the shock which "was still coming from the south," nor whether the news of its advance was announced by mule train or express.

—If you are caught in a drenching rain, or fall into the water, by all means keep in motion sufficiently vigorous to prevent the slightest chilly sensation until you reach the house; then change your clothing with great rapidity before a blazing fire, and drink instantly a pint of some hot liquid.

Attempted Suicide.

On the night of the 31st ultimo, while laboring under a temporary aberration of mind, J. W. Tyler, an old and much respected citizen of Aurora, attempted to take his own life, under the following circumstances, as related to us by a gentleman then in that place: Mr. Tyler was, by some means, in possession of the pistol with which Mrs. Butler enacted such an exciting tragedy, and about 5 o'clock went into the Bank Exchange saloon and requested Mr. Barker to take it, as he feared doing some injury with it. Barker, noticing his unusual condition and appearance, at once went with Mr Tyler across to his store where he induced him to lie down and, as he supposed, sleep. He went out to look after the saloon for a moment when a pistol shot was heard. On his return he found Mr. Tyler in a most deplorable condition, he having taken a hatchet and chopped away at his own head until the skull was broken in three places; the pistol ball, however, must have missed its mark, taking no effect. Upon the departure of our informant Mr. Tyler had recovered consciousness and was in a fair way to get well, but seemed to know nothing whatever of the occurrence. Financial embarassment is the presumed cause of the trouble leading to the act.

Mono County.

Summer is opening with unusual promise of prosperity for our neighboring town of Benton, in Mono. The foundations of the new 10-stamp mill are being laid, and the work bids fair to be rapidly pushed to completion. An effective mill and furnace combined has been the great desideratum for this camp, as it will save the expense of sorting out the richest ore, as well as the heavy cost of transporting it to Reno. The wealth of the mines is reported as enormous, and Hot Springs will soon create a stir. Several houses are being brought from Aurora, to meet the demands of increasing population. S. G. Sneden, of Bishop Creek, has purchased the store, stock and fixtures belonging to the Morrison estate, and has gone below for a full supply of new goods. This arrangement will prove of the greatest advantage to Bishop Creek farmers, affording a ready market for all they can produce. Mr. Sneden's head quarters will remain at Bishop Creek, however, and the Benton branch of the business will probably be conducted by Mr. Yaney.

Cash for the County.

The Courts.

In the District Court the following cases were disposed of during the week: Sylvia A. Rogers vs. Elisha H. Rogers; divorce granted. J. J. Moore vs. Georgiana Moore; decree of divorce granted. George Goodridge vs. San Felipe Mining Co.; assumpsit; judgment for plaintiff. The case of Canty vs. Inyo county is this afternoon being argued by the counsel. The County Court has transacted no business except in probate matters, there being no criminal cases.

New Advertisements.

Do not think of neglecting to peruse the new advertisements, but read them, and then take a look at the balance. This is always the best method of finding out what is going on in the business world, illustrates the general drift of things and oftentimes directs the reader to a fortune.

Cerro Gordo.

Reports indicate that everything is serenely swimming along in the lead regions, the furnaces at Cerro Gordo and Swansea being in constant operation. As soon as possible we propose visiting these localities, for the purpose of making arrangements for getting regular bullion reports.

To Be Sold.

Among other probate matters will be found a notice setting forth the fact that the remains of the late Court House, deceased, will be sold at public auction, by order of the Board of Supervisors, on day and date therein mentioned.

Assessment.

The Silver Sprout Mining Company have levied an assessment of 50 cents per share, payable immediately, and delinquent June 1st. Mr. Wingard, Superintendent, is expected here sometime during next week.

Local Earthquakes and Some Natural Curiosities.

Some curious facts relating to earthquakes and natural wonders, probably connected therewith, are related by Mr. J. G. Bircham and others living on Bishop Creek.

There is a noted place in Long Valley, some sixty miles north of this place, known as "Casa Diablo canyon," so called from a wonderful spring there is there. This is the same canyon, we may mention, where the fight with the convicts took place in which R. J. Morrison was killed. Five years ago, Mr. Bircham states, this spring was only about a yard across. Last Fall when he last saw it it had got to be seventy-five yards in diameter, and of unknown depth. Its waters are but little more than alum, sulphur and saltpetre in solution, quantities of each of these being found crystalized on its banks and in the vicinity. This water is scalding hot—hotter, it is said, than pure water can be made. This spring has always been noted for its violent and frequent ebullitions, accompanied with an awe-inspiring sound, whence the name of the canyon near the mouth of which it is situated—"the Devil's House." At the time of Mr. Bircham's visit last Fall, these ebullitions would occur once or twice every minute, keeping up almost a continuous roar, and each time raising tons of water a number of feet, though none above the surface of the surrounding ground.

There is another of these springs in the bottom of the river near by of such volume as to raise the temperature of the river water so that animals will not drink it for miles below. The river at that point is nearly a rod wide and four feet deep—ice water before reaching this thermal spring.

Near Casa Diablo is a most remarkable hill, or point of a hill, some twenty feet high and a hundred yards or so in length. Immediately under the crust, which is about two inches in thickness and of a grayish hue, the whole hill as far down as it has been prospected is a mass of hot mud, boiling hot, of all the different colors of the rainbow. This mud is about of the consistency and as tenacious and as easily moulded into different shapes as so much putty.

Owing probably to the thermal condition of the ground the timber for a distance of fifteen miles along or north of Long Valley is all dead or dying. As a proof of a new and changing condition of the earth in that locality, Mr. Bircham says that eight years ago there was just one spot of about a hundred acres on which the timber was dead, all of the rest now dead being green and flourishing. Many of these trees are of a century's growth or more, others, mere saplings. He has not visited this locality since the big earthquake, but thinks some wonderful changes were effected then, or by some of the subsequent shocks, one or two of which were much more violent in Round Valley, twenty miles south of Casa Diablo, than that of March 26 which handled this section so roughly. That shake was of but little moment there compared to what it was here, fifty miles south. Since the first there has not been here nor at Lone Pine any heavy shakes at all, yet in Round Valley there has been several of great violence, notably one on the 14th April, we believe, which finished the destruction of several stone buildings. This shake, like many others since was almost entirely local, Bishop Creek, but ten miles distant, being but slightly affected. On one occasion the underground force ran through for some distance in a narrow streak about fifty yards in width, finally dividing, one part going south the other east. On this streak the surface of the ground was visibly affected, while that on either side and in the "forks" remained comparatively unmoved. This is a singular statement, but we are assured that it is true.

Accompanying the above mentioned quake was an indescribable yet tangible rush of air or an electrical current which shot across the country with a clearly defined course, like plowing it into rows, producing very noticeable effects as it proceeded. As before stated, the severest shocks in Round Valley were scarcely perceptible on Bishop Creek and vice versa, and in some instances, when violent enough to throw milk out of pans in one house it would not be noticed at others a mile and a half away.

Stockmen who last Fall abandoned their cabins in Long Valley, as usual for the Winter, report since their return this Spring that they found bottles on the shelves and other similar things in place just as they had left them, showing that the shake there was not heavy, although not many miles distant from Casa Diablo. But it is believed, and with good reason apparently, that there is an intimate connection, either as cause or effect, between those local earthquakes, thermal and geyser springs and hot putty hills. It is all due in some manner to decomposition or chemical changes in vast bodies of minerals, the nature and cause of which might be ascertained by chemical analysis of that water and mud. Possibly a thorough scientific investigation of these things might result in the deduction of a very satisfactory earthquake theory. At all events that region will afford a splendid field for researches by Prof. Whitney, who is expected here next week.

Among other facts worthy the attention of savants we will mention these two relics of former ages; A few miles north of Bishop Creek there is a large, smooth rock one side of which is completely covered with well cut Indian hieroglyphics, somewhat resembling the Greek, and popularly supposed to be a record of the ancient history of this country. A rock with similar characters is said to exist near Cerro Gordo. The Indians have no traditions concerning these things whatever. The authors of these sealed books probably existed long before the last mastodon yielded up his life in the sands of Owens river, the discovery of their bones being the other "relic" alluded to. In 1867 a portion of one of these skeletons was exhumed while cutting the tail race at Lentell's arastra near the Bend City bridge, near the edge of the river, and about twelve feet from the surface of the alluvial of which the banks consist. Enough of this skeleton was got out and sent to San Francisco to approximate the size of behemoth when in the flesh, which gives him an altitude of 14 feet, and 25 feet length of keel; no estimates of his beam or tonnage have been submitted, but the last must have been immense. Some of his teeth were four inches on the face, and a femoral bone was three feet, four inches in length. Other bones, probably the skull or tusks, were touched with the pick, but there was no time to dig them out when fortunes were contingent upon getting that arastra in operation right away. Subsequently the Academy of Sciences, we believe it was, or the same which received the first instalment, offered $20 for the remainder of the bones, but as it would cost about $300 to do it there was nothing ever done about it, though they could be now obtained quite easily, as the works standing over them are abandoned. On the opposite side of the river, two or three miles east of this spot and near the foot of the mountain, some bones of a large animal of the horse species were dug out of the bottom of a well, forty feet deep. Lying on them was a cedar log in a good state of preservation. There has been a heavy wash from the adjacent mountain.

With one or two more references to the original topic we are done, and will patiently await the coming of scientists to do their little in the way of solving and theorizing.

During the "big shake" water bursted up under a house on George's Creek in volume nearly sufficient to have flooded out the inhabitants if they had waited a moment or two for any additional notice to vacate. Not far distant was found a closed crack in the earth, from which protruded a horse's foot—evidence enough as to the whereabouts of the rest of him.

Near Fish Springs a cow or an ox lay dead directly across the ploughed-up ground, without a hair displaced. Another was swallowed up, leaving out his tail as a card indicating where he was to be found—lost, a gone in community, but not strayed.

One of these fissures extended into the foothills back of the arastras. Directly in its course was a large, detached boulder, which was smoothly split open and the halves now lie on opposite sides of the fissure.

May Day Pic-Nic at Bishop Creek.

ROUND VALLEY, May 4, 1872.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—The public school at Round Valley closed on the 22d of March. I should have furnished to you long ere this an item in regard to it, as this has become a general custom, and a wise one too.

The school commenced on the 4th day of October, but was closed for some time in order to build a new school house. The consequence was but four months and eight days were taught for the term. The whole number of boys enrolled, 15; of girls, 12; total enrolled, 27. Average number belonging, 19 18-85; average daily attendance, 18 3-85; per centage of attendance and average number belonging, 93. The following are those upon the ROLL OF HONOR.

MAY DAY ON BISHOP CREEK.

Notwithstanding the commotion still kept up by earthquakes and our frequent, sudden scares therefrom, everybody appeared to be anxious to enjoy a good, old-fashioned pic-nic on the 1st of May.

What a reminder this pic-nic was of the scenes of my boyhood. Early in the morning vehicles of every sort and size could be seen in every direction approaching Sneden's, each one loaded with the old folks and their feminine offspring of "sweet sixteen." The juveniles of both sexes assembled at Mr. Sneden's residence at about 10 o'clock, and after a few appropriate songs, that were truly well sung, was formed in the following order to escort the Queen elect to the church:

THE PROCESSION

1. Marshal.
2. Children of Bishop Creek Sunday school.
3. Pages and Zephyrs, 12 in number.
4. Mr. Charles E. Inman, and
5. Perry Gunter, Captain of Order of Knights.
6. Miss Annie C. Yaney, Queen, with Maids of Honor 8 in number, as follows: Misses Laura Powers, Jennie Inman, Laura J. Hall, Alice M. Slinkard, Mary McCrosky, Addie Inman, Annie White and Harriet E. Taylor.
7. Children of Round Valley school as guests.
8. Children of Bishop Creek school and citizens.

PROGRAMME.

1. Coronation ceremony.
2. Song: The Old Fireside, Misses Mary J. McNally and Virginia McCrosky.
3. Address by Rev. A. Clark.
4. Singing, Miss McCrosky and Misses J. and A. Inman.
5. Declamation by Oliver Cromwell (original).
Collation.
6. Election of Miss A. M. Hilton, of Round Valley, as President for the afternoon.
7. Declamation by M. C. Hall.
8. Recitation by Miss Jennie Inman.
9. Song with accompaniment of violin.
10. Recitation by Miss Laura J. Hall.
11. Song by Mr. N. Gunter and Miss Inman.
12. Recitation, Miss Mary McCrosky.
13. Closing address by Rev. Thos. Taylor.

The Committee of Arrangements were: Mrs. S. G. Sneden, Mrs. T. K. Hutchison, Mrs. M. S. Clark, Mrs. A. T. Matlack, Mrs. Joseph Inman and Miss Belle Slinkard, to whom much credit is due for their able management.

I may say this county or any other county can never boast of nine prettier young ladies than the Queen and her Maids of Honor. After the election of Miss Hilton in the afternoon to the chair, several handsome young men proposed an election of the handsomest young man for Vice President; they received one vote each, I believe.

I am not enough of a Jenkins to describe how the May Queen and everybody else was attired. I will leave that to their mammas. They know best.

The afternoon exercises were of less interest, but the enjoyment of the young folks was none the less intense. There was some fine singing, and a masterly oration from Rev. Mr. Taylor. The whole affair closed with a at Sneden's hall; the gay scene did not close until daylight did appear.

MAGNIFICENT BALL

Let me here ask the question: Why not dance in daylight? Is it healthy to remain up all night? Ask those the next day who have danced all night. If they say they experience no evil effects, will not their languid appearance and dull eye contradict them? Are people more lively at night than in daytime, or do they make any better personal display? Is it economical? One day is lost in preparation and the next day in sleep. I merely throw out these hints in order to get an expression if any person will take enough interest to make suggestions.

EARTHQUAKES.

The earthquakes still continue at Bishop Creek and Round Valley. I have felt none, however, for about eight hours. Yesterday there were several; not so severe as they have been. If we have any very hard ones will let you know the damage, etc.

AMOS.

IN VINDICATION.

CAMP INDEPENDENCE, May 6, 1872.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Taking up your number from April 27, I see an article claimed to be copied from The San Francisco Chronicle, headed "A Child's Death Through the Inhumanity of Men." By inquiring into the matter I found it was alluding to three of the most peaceable men in the valley, who mind their own business, and are ready at any time to extend a helping hand in peril to friend or foe.

At the time of the earthquake the three walls of my house tumbled in, and fell into my bedroom. I rescued my wife and four children, with the assistance of my partner, F. Schabbel, and Mr. James McCarthey, we carried the children in the granary, then went into the house again to get some clothing and bedding for the crying little ones; after that was done we heard the horses squealing and kicking in the stable. Schabbel and McCarthy went there and found that one of the mules had broke through his stall, and got in between a pair of horses, they had to run for an ax and then cut away the halters and fastenings. After repairing them they found that the mule was badly skinned, and the horses kicked lame; unable to work for some days; when this was past, Mr. Shedd and wife and baby came up, and we made them as comfortable as we could, by a camp fire.

Setting there till daybreak people of the neighborhood passed by, and brought the sad news of Mr. Vagt's family; we felt deep sympathy in the calamity, and discussed the matter with Shedd's family; that it was very curious that Vagt's hired man (Davis) sleeping in an adjoining board shanty, unhurt, could not have rescued Vagt, and for him to run to Schelton's for help, a distance of nearly half a mile, when we was the nearest neighbor. If Davis did call for us in that space of time we did not near him, but if he had come in hearing distance and called, he would get help very quick.

The cause of these things is that the Vagt family & Co. have an old grudge against us, the community in general know for what.

Sunday morning, April 28, Mr. Schabbel met Jacob accidentally along on the water ditch in our field, Schabbel said: "Jacob, I am glad to meet you here. Do you really think we are that kind of men what we are reported?" Jacob—"No, Fred, you done me too many favors years ago. I told even the editor of THE INDEPENDENT that I did not think you or Walter were that kind of men?" Here you see, Messrs. Editors, the above does not agree with the statement Jacob made to you.

We would have made our statement a little longer, but we do not like to trouble your columns with such a batch. Respectfully yours.

Cerro Gordo to Carson.

As will be seen by the new advertisement, the enterprising, go-ahead proprietors of the Northern Stage Line, have arranged complete connection from Cerro Gordo to Carson and San Francisco, and book passengers clear through. Business both ways is rapidly increasing that new stock is being constantly added, and a tri-weekly now runs from Aurora to Benton. For Summer travel this is far the best and quickest route.

Tapering Off.

For several days past there has been no noticeable shakes in this vicinity, but we do not feel safe in the conclusion that they have entirely ceased. Tuesday last there was one of considerable force at the lower end of the Lake, but the area affected was limited.

Lecture.

Rev. Mr. John Tamblyn will deliver a lecture on Temperance in the school house at this place Saturday evening May 18, at 7:30; and will preach his farewell sermon on Sunday the 19th of May at 11 A. M., in the same place. All are respectfully invited to attend.

Pastoral Visit.

Presiding Elder Warren Nims, accompanied by his lady, is now en route for this valley from Austin, on a pastoral visit. He is expected to arrive some time next week, and will remain near a month.

Distinguished Visitor.

Emperor Begole paid us a visit the other day, during which he stated that he never said he had no more "sheep-herder's delight." We take it all back. He may have $10,000 worth.

Warrants.

Certain county warrants, amounting in the aggregate to $1,321 65, will be paid upon presentation. Notice is also given that a number of others have been lost, and are re-issued.

In New Business.

John R. Hughes, Esq., of Cerro Gordo, has branched out into a new business, for a change. See advertisement of Hughes & Anderson.

In Session.

The Board of Supervisors are still in session, but will not get fairly to business until next week, when a full report will be given.

Bullion Shipment.

May 1st Messrs. Hiskey & Walker shipped 6,459 ounces of bullion, valued at $4,000.

Scenes in the Yellowstone Valley.

[From Appleton's Journal.]

The act recently passed by Congress, reserving for a perpetual public park an area of fifty miles square in the valley of the Yellowstone, has greatly enlisted public interest in this newly explored section of our country.

The Yellowstone and Columbia—the first flowing into the Missouri, and thence to the Atlantic, the other into the Pacific—have their sources in the Rocky Mountains, within a few miles of each other. The source of the Yellowstone is a lake, seven thousand five hundred feet above the level of the ocean, nestling among the snow peaks of the highest mountain range in the country. The area of its basin is fourteen hundred square miles. Four of the most important tributaries of the Missouri rise within it, viz., the Big Horn, the Yellowstone, the Madison and the Gallatin; while the Snake River has its sources interlaced with those of the Yellowstone and the Gallatin.

The Yellowstone traverses a distance of thirteen hundred miles before it loses its waters in those of the Missouri. Its upper course is through immense canyons and gorges, and its flow is often marked by splendid waterfalls and fierce rapids, presenting at various points some of the most remarkable scenery in the country. Its upper region is entirely volcanic, and abounds in boiling springs, mud volcanoes, huge mountains of sulphur and geysers, the marvels of which outdo those of Iceland. We illustrate in this number of The Journal two striking features of the region, with the intention of giving our readers other views of a locality suddenly sprung into such notoriety.

The Tower-Creek Falls is in a small stream subsidiary to the Yellowstone. This cascade is strikingly picturesque, with its surroundings of vast, tower-like rocks, many of which rise fully a hundred feet above the crest of the fall. The fall itself is a sheer descent of one hundred and fifty-six feet into a shallow basin, whence, after a succession of cascades, it reaches the river below. "Beyond Tower Creek," says Lieut. Barlow, in his official report of the Government exploring expedition, "lies a beautifully undulating country, decked with wild flowers of every hue, many of them unknown to the Eastern States; yet the elevation is so great (seven thousand feet) that frosts occur every night during the year."

But the remarkable features of this region are the hot springs or geysers in the vicinity of the lake, and we subjoin in full Lieut. Barlow's description of the great geyser basin:

"Entering the basin from the north, and following the banks of the Fire Hole River, whose direction there is about northeast, a series of rapids, quite near together, is encountered, when the river makes a sharp bend to the southwest, at which point is found a small steam-jet upon the right. A warm stream comes in from the left, falling over a bank ten feet in height. A short distance beyond a second rapid is found, and then another about one hundred farther on, where the gate of the basin is entered. Here, on either side of the river, are two lively geysers, called the 'Sentinels.' The one on the left is in constant agitation, its waters revolving horizontally with violence, and occasionally spouting up to the height of twenty feet, the lateral direction being fifty feet. Enormous masses of steam are ejected. The crater of this geyser is three feet by ten. The opposite 'Sentinel' is not so constantly active, and is smaller. The rapids here are two hundred yards in length, with a fall of thirty feet. Following the bank of the river, whose general course is from the southeast, though with many windings, two hundred and fifty yards from the gate we reach three geysers acting in concert. When in full action the display from these is very fine. The waters spread out in the shape of a fan, in consequence of which they have been named the 'Fan Geysers.' A plateau, opposite the latter, contains fifteen hot springs of various characteristics; some of a deep blue color, from sulphate of copper held in solution, and having fanciful caverns distinctly visible below the surface of the water. The openings at the surface are often beautifully edged with delicately wrought fringes of scolloped rock. One variety deposits a red or brown leathery substance, partially adhering to the sides and bottom of the cavern, and waving to and fro in the water like plants. The size of these springs varies from five to forty feet in diameter. One hundred yards farther up the east side of the stream is found a double geyser, a stream from one of its orifices playing to the height of eighty or ninety feet, emitting large volumes of steam. From the formation of its crater it was named the 'Well Geyser.' Above is a pine swamp of cold water, opposite which, and just above the plateau previously mentioned, are found some of the most interesting and beautiful geysers of the whole basin.

"First we come upon two small geysers near a large spring of blue water, while a few yards beyond are seen the walls and arches of the 'Grotto.' This is an exceedingly intricate formation, eight feet in height and ninety in circumference. It is hollowed into fantastic arches, with pillars and walls of almost indescribable variety. This geyser plays to the height of sixty feet, several times during the twenty-four hours. The water as it issues from its numerous apertures has a very striking and picturesque effect.

"Near the 'Grotto' is a large crater, elevated four feet above the surface of the hill, having a rough shaped opening, measuring two by two and a half feet. Two hundred yards further up are two very fine large geysers, between which and the 'Grotto' are two boiling springs. Proceeding a hundred and fifty yards farther, and passing two hot springs, a remarkable group of geysers is discovered. One of these has a crater five feet in diameter, shaped something like the base of a horn—one side broken down—the highest point being fifteen feet above the mound on which it stands. This proved to be a tremendous geyser, and has been called the 'Giant.' It throws a column of water the size of the opening to the measured altitude of one hundred and thirty feet, and continues the display for an hour and a half. The amount of water discharged was immense, about equal in quantity to that in the river, the volume of which, during the eruption, was doubled. But one eruption of this geyser was observed. Its periodic turns were not, therefore, determined. Another large crater close by has several orifices, and, with ten small jets surrounding it, formed, probably, one connected system. The hill built up by this group covers an acre of ground, and is thirty feet in height."

We are indebted to the Hon. Columbus Delano, Secretary of the Interior, for photographs of the scenes accompanying this sketch, which Mr. Fenn's skilful pencil transferred to the wood. Other views of this strange and interesting section will be given in forthcoming numbers of The Journal.

The Relation of Science to Religion.

The Scientific American in making editorial allusion to the development theory of the Darwin school, remarks as follows upon the relation which science bears to religion: All scientists have agreed that what can neither be demonstrated as a fact, nor logically inferred from facts, has no place in science. Reasoning by analogy can therefore have a comparatively limited sphere in science. For although well determined analogies are facts, the chances are ten to one that a supposed analogy will, when critically examined, turn out to be only a pseudo resemblance.

What we charge against the teachers of this school is that, while their development theory is purely a system of analogical reasoning, they do not declare that this or that conclusion is probably correct, but assert it as a fact, and as dogmatically as the most ultra and fanatical religionists, whose bigotry they denounce. Thus Huxley, in his address on protoplasm, asserts as positively that in this substance we have the ultimate physical basis of life, and that protoplasm has its origin in the chemical combination of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen and nitrogen in the presence of living protoplasm. The whole tone of his address, though he did not say as much in words, was a sort of triumphant self congratulation that there was no need of supposing a special creator, since chemical affinity was the general cause of animal existence.

Is then chemical affinity the cause uncaused? Have we yet, or shall we ever arrive at the cause uncaused? Does the development theory, the knowledge of protoplasm, help us in recognizing the first of all causes? Would even spontaneous generation, if proved to take place, as many have sought to prove, reveal a cause behind which we can affirm no other cause can stand? From the very nature of the case we can answer these questions in the negative.

So long, then, as mysteries exist, and this will always be the case, man will by faith stretch out his hands toward the hidden realm, and hope that in that realm there may be something to satisfy the aspirations of his soul, brighter and better than what he has found through all his gropings. And this faith will form the basis of some kind of religion. The majority of men may perhaps be taught to believe that the human race sprang from apes, but so believing, and seeing the enormous distance they have progressed from the condition of those animals, they will hardly set limits to progress, and will be little convinced that all opportunity for individual advance is limited to the few toilsome years which form the average term of human life.

The skepticism of the present day is based upon as blind a faith as the belief of the orthodox. But we do not care to quarrel with this faith, or with conclusions derived from pure speculation, any more than we would quarrel with faith in revealed religion. The question of religious belief is one which has no place in scientific discussion. All scientists admit this, yet there are many who omit no opportunity to give sly and sarcastic thrusts at the belief held by many wise and good men, which, forming the very character of the men who entertain it, is deserving of respect rather than ridicule, not to speak of its intrinsic claims to the acceptance of intelligent minds. Professor Huxley has been particularly obnoxious in this way, and has thereby greatly limited his influence as a public teacher.

It may be replied that as the religionists attack the scientists, the latter must make some reply in self defence. We do not see the necessity. It is the business of science to discover, record and classify facts. Whether these facts conflict with or confirm the religious faith of any, does not concern in the least the scientific investigator. If he discovers that the ancestors of mankind were apes, it is his duty to announce his real or supposed discovery; it is not his province to turn upon those who have held a different view and hold them up to scorn or ridicule because they believe they sprang from a higher source, and repudiate their anthropoid ape ancestors. If religion be false, it needs no direct attacks to kill it. If the discoveries of science be facts, they will outlive all false notions and superstitions. Science and religion should not be directly antagonized, for, besides that this is needless, neither the one nor the other is benefitted by such controversies.

All this we can say, while we own to a decided leaning toward the evolution theory. It seems more consistent with the way in which an All-wise Being would work, that through eternal and immutable laws He should evolve the varied complex structures which people the universe, than that each should be the result of a special act of creation. In this we see nothing that conflicts with such an interpretation of the Mosaic accounts as would harmonize with the now very generally conceded allegorical and poetical character of that portion of the Bible.

Railway Project.

We understand that the proposition to organize a company to build a narrow gauge railroad from this city to tap the rich mining region of Owens river, is being actively discussed, it being understood that the erection of smelting works in this city would follow the construction of the road. It is said that numbers of our citizens have signified their willingness to subscribe largely to the capital stock, and it is thought that a handsome amount of shares would be taken by parties in other parts of the county, who have money seeking investment. That the road if built would prove a good investment it is safe to assume, and that, in connection with smelting works, it would bind to this city the rich trade which we are soon to lose, cannot be doubted. Whether the present agitation will result in practical action is another question.—Los Angeles News, May 4.

A GREAT SENSATION

One of the greatest sensations of the day is now agitating Nevada politicians and San Francisco stock operators. It is all based on the destructive fire in the Yellow Jacket mine in 1869, by which 37 persons lost their lives. Sharon, the bank man, darkly intimates that J. P. Jones, his political and mining rival, caused that mine to be fired for some sinister purpose of his own. "The whole story," says The Gold Hill News, "divested of all sensational embellishments, is simply this: James O'Donnell, formerly foreman in the Yellow Jacket mine, evidently with the idea of assisting Sharon in his contest with Jones for the position of United States Senator from this State, endeavored to engineer through certain extremely grave charges, implicating J. P. Jones and G. F. Kellogg in setting the fire and causing the calamity whereby so many lives were lost. The telegraphed testimony goes to show that Mr. Sharon would not at first believe it, and did not desire to have anything to do with the matter, but on the earnest asseverations of James O'Donnell, that he could prove all he said by the testimony of a reliable witness in addition to his own testimony, O'Donnell was sent after Hubbell, the witness in question, who was at present employed as guard at the Nevada State Prison, and the whole matter was placed in the hands of detective officer Lees, of San Francisco, to work up. We merely consider the facts of the case as presented. O'Donnell brought his witness to San Francisco, and it would seem that on critically sifting what Hubbell knew in regard to the matter, his evidence was anything but satisfactory, or what O'Donnell expected, in short, he had reckoned without his host."

Jones, by the unanimous voice of Press and people, stands acquitted of the charges insinuated against him, while Sharon by his foolish and weak effort to crush a rival has placed himself in a most unenviable position, and has utterly ruined his own chances for political preferment.

The Miners' Union, of Virginia City and Gold Hill have resolved to sift the whole matter to the bottom, and it is much to be hoped that before it is ended that the really guilty parties of this unparralelled crime, if crime it was, may be brought to speedy justice, or the stories which have ever been rife of some criminal complicity in the fire, be forever set at rest. So far, O'Donnell is the least to be envied man of the whole lot. He knows more than he has told, or he is a most unmitigated scoundrel working to ruin the fair fame of others that he may earn a few pieces of silver. Many of our readers will remember this individual as the foreman of the Kearsarge mine for a short time last Spring, when Gen. Winters took charge of that property.

St. Louis Party.

The St. Louis delegation has returned home accompanied by a commission from San Francisco, who go to St. Louis with the view of perfecting some plan of operations mutually satisfactory to both cities for the construction of the Atlantic and Pacific railroad. So far no definite arrangement has been made, but it is thought that the Atlantic and Pacific company proper, St. Louis and San Francisco will divide the route up, each to build 125 miles per annum, the land subsidies throughout remaining in the hands of the original company. Both cities are in earnest about building this road, but San Francisco particularly wants some guarantee that she will not again be sold out to the boss monopoly, as has been her fate three several times already, and hence the hitch in regard to the terms of building and managing the road.

Sulphury Allusion.

It's a pity that newspapers should indulge in profane allusions (especially when the editor nor the d—l either knows what moment the Apaches will "rattle —— bells" out of them) like the following which we copy from the most energetic and generally read interior newspapers on the Pacific coast:

INYO INDEPENDENT.—This favorite exchange of ours has again come to hand, looking better than it used to before the late terrible earthquake shook the very deuce out of office, presses type, editors, printers and the devil. We welcome it, and hope that another such terrible destructive visitation of underground horrors will never again rattle Hades bells out of its section of country.—Arizona Miner, May 4.

D. J. CANTY vs. INYO COUNTY.

As the above entitled cause has occupied a considerable share of public attention, as well as that of the Hon. District Court during the late term, we propose to give a statement of the case, especially as it is the first involving the same points of law that has been adjudicated in the State.

This suit was brought by D. J. Canty, a hotel keeper of Lone Pine, to recover from the county the sum of $549, the amount of his bill for taking care of two indigent sick persons, viz. R. J. Stewart from November 30, 1871, till the 1st of February following, and J. Foley from November 12, 1871 till January 13, 1872. On the 1st of the following month Canty filed his bill with the Board of Supervisors, demanding pay for the care and attention bestowed upon the above mentioned parties, both of whom were helpless and without means of support.

The Board refused to allow the bill, alleging that they had already made all necessary provisions for the care of the indigent sick of the county, having a contract with Dr. C. B. White, who was to receive all such persons at the military hospital, Camp Independence. It was further alleged that no application had been made in behalf of these parties either to the Board or any member thereof, as provided for by law and for these reasons the Supervisors thought they would be transcending their legal rights in admitting the claim in full or accepting the compromise at $250 subsequently offered by Canty.

Canty then, acting by advice of his counsel, P. Reddy, entered suit for the whole amount, which suit was decided in his favor, for the reason that the Board had failed to comply with the letter of the law in not having any record of their contract with Dr. White as County Physician. This fact was brought to the notice of the Board, but the latter held, if we understand the matter rightly, that there was no necessity for them to keep a record or give public notice of their proceedings.

On this issue chiefly the matter was brought to trial, P. Reddy and P. W. Bennett appearing for plaintiff, and District Attorney Van Decar, Thos. Laspeyre and W. P. George for the defense.

Plaintiff's counsel contended that it was the duty of the Supervisors to provide for the care and support of the indigent sick of the county—failing to do so the county was liable to any person who might furnish necessaries to indigent sick and helpless individuals; that defendant, through the authorized agents, the Supervisors, had overlooked or neglected to comply with a plain requirement of law in never having given public notice of its readiness to do so, and in not having put on record any evidence of any contract with any person to take care of such indigent sick.

Counsel for defense claimed that no such record on the part of Supervisors was necessary; the existing verbal contract with Dr. White being sufficient.

His Honor, Judge Reed, ruled that public policy demanded, and that Section 6 of the act to create a Board of Supervisors for each county, commanded that all proceedings of such Board should be placed on record, and further stated that it was right and customary to publish in some county paper a full official report of their proceedings for the use and information of interested parties as well as of the people generally of the county. His Honor also ruled that application for the benefit of the act providing for the care of indigent sick in any county in this State, must be made to the Board of Supervisors or their appointed County Physician, and that an application was invalid for any purpose if made to, and acted upon by but one member of the Board.

If there is no error in the statement in regard to the last point of the ruling, there is certainly a material defect in the law on which it is based. By it the County Physician is constituted the sole judge of the right of admission of applicants to the benefits of this law during the long intervals between sessions of the Board, or full three-fourths of the whole time. That the Board does not consider that that is law is evident from their published notice in this issue, wherein they state that application may be made to the Board, to any member of it when not in session or to the County Physician. This is as it should be, we think. We are told that the Board would have allowed Canty's bill without bringing it to test of law, had application been made to any one of their number, which, they say, was not done. This was not the issue, however, upon which they were beaten.

As a matter pertinent to the real issue upon which the case was decided—the failure to keep a record of proceedings in full of the Board of Supervisors, in many respects the law makers for the county—we hold that their important acts at least ought to be published by authority. At every session, regular or special, matters are passed upon of interest and importance to different individuals throughout the county who have to trust wholly to chance for any information concerning them, or be put to unnecessary expense and trouble to obtain reliable information. An order to change or establish a highway or road district may be made at the instance of a few individuals, the majority of those affected by it having no knowledge of important particulars connected therewith until perhaps some expensive litigation becomes the means of enlightment. Ignorance of the law excuses no one for its violation, though the ignorance itself is excusable because unavoidable where governments, State or county, neglect what we hold to be their bounden duty—to give due and general publication to all acts affecting the rights of the people. It is just as important as the enactment of the laws themselves, particularly in county affairs. To say nothing of the right of the people to have a full and fair knowledge, by some generally available means, of the doings of their local representatives, it is really much cheaper in the end, both to individuals and the community, as has been demonstrated in this suit, and in some shape or other is sure to be again. We have good reason to know that the law makes it obligatory upon Boards of Supervisors to publish statements in detail of all their financial transactions with public funds. Newspapers make it a rule to give partial reports of all such things, but generally they amount to nothing more than mere mention, particularly of road matters because they cannot afford the space for details, the important part for interested parties to know and through a certified transcript by the clerk of the Board.

In the above suit the general belief in the beginning was that the law would sustain the position of the defense, notwithstanding the moral right accorded the plaintiff for reimbursement for his outlay in the interest of humanity. The case was well managed by his counsel, we infer, or the law is clearly on his side since the jury agreed on a verdict in his favor in the full amount of his claim on the first ballot.

More Late Dates.

It is always interesting to the weary editor to tear the wrapper off of an exchange, just received, and at the nick of time when copy is short. It is no less interesting to the said weary and honest editor, who disdains to steal editorials, when, after having torn the wrapper off as stated, he finds the very thing he wanted the first shot. It tells of a neighbor or friend as being there where the exchange comes from, prosecuting some public enterprise in which his own readers are interested. The intelligent editor scratches his head and wonders how that can be when he knows the proposed operation was done with two months previously, and that for some weeks that neighbor has been quietly at home safe in the bosom of his family. With the sagacity common to the craft the astute editor then looks at the date line of the paper he was going to scissor, and finds that it was printed some days previous to the Big Earthquake—March 1, B. E. He then glorifies the United States mail service and the energetic postmasters who only require two months and a half or thereabouts to send a paper from one county to an adjoining one—Kern to Inyo—almost 200 miles. That is how it was with us, this day.

The Trial of Haun.

A San Jose date of the 8th says: The trial of Haun for the murder of Walker, at Mountain View, in 1867, was commenced in the Twelfth District Court this morning. Haun was tried at the last term of the Court and found guilty of murder in the second degree, but before his sentence was passed his attorney moved to quash the the indictment on the ground that that instrument was dated before the crime was committed, and did not state that a human being had been killed. The motion was granted. The case was again before the Court on a new indictment. The State closed their evidence this morning and the defence will commence at 2 o'clock this afternoon. It is thought the case will be submitted to-night.

On the Wane.

The advance of the iron horse up the San Joaquin is fast shutting off much trade that has centered at and built up Los Angeles in times past. We do not like to see that city get on the down grade, but there is no help for it, unless her citizens go energetically to work to build a railroad and smelting works of their own. We want to see a big and prosperous city on the southern coast, and that city ought to be Los Angeles.

PACIFIC COAST READAGRAMS.

Miss Leota K. Turner, the heroine of the Turner-Ortiz seduction case, when she obtained the sum of $7,000 for her damaged reputation, has been arrested and is now on trial for perjury, she having made oath that she had paid a certain amount of counsel fees in that trial of which fact the said counsel have no recollection whatever. The present trial is likely to be as long as the moral law.

Laura D. Fair asks for a change of venue on the grounds that great prejudice existing against her in San Francisco renders it impossible for her to obtain a fair trial. Perhaps.

One Octave Miranda, a small dealer in mining stocks, has become crazed in consequence, and has been sent to Stockton. From similar causes he will have plenty of company before long.

Says a Los Angeles dispatch: "La grange and party, just arrived from the vicinity of Death Valley, have organized the Ave Watts Mining District, ten miles from and the nearest nearest district to Death Valley." On the northern end of Death Valley there are several mining districts bordering directly on the valley, one, Gold Mountain, being almost surrounded by it.

There was a great tumble in stocks following the Sharon-Jones affair, but they have since become buoyant and are recovering rapidly. The banks all shut down on stock loans, the demand for which having greatly retarded legitimate business. Old operators say that the rage for stock speculation will not be as great as it has been, and wild cat will be harder to dispose of at any figure, but that there will be a steady demand for stock in all mines having real merit for investment, money being abundant.

It is rumored that Sharon will withdraw from the Senatorial fight and put Nye forward to beat Jones.

Work on the Elko and Hamilton narrow-gauge railroad will be commenced shortly. Ten per cent. of the capital stock, amounting to $250,000, has been deposited with the company.

A placer gold mine has been found in or near Los Angeles city. The gravel pays five cents to the pan.

The railroad cars are now probably running, across Kings river to within sixty miles of Visalia.

EASTERN NEWS.

No definite conclusion in regard to the Alabama claims has yet been arrived at. Well posted individuals consider the Washington Treaty a dead letter, so that the whole question will have to be opened anew.

The New York Tribune's Washington special has the last sensational story, which is that a plot has been discovered which proposes the rejection of Grant by the Philadelphia Convention and the substitution of Senator Morton.

Information has been received at the Naval Department at Washington from Havana, that Moro Castle is being rapidly strengthened and guns put in position.

Cole has introduced a resolution inquiring of the Secretary of War the effect upon the harbor of San Francisco by construction of railroad approaches to Goat Island.

The Methodists have referred the Book Concern imbroglio to a committee composed of one from each conference.

A big fire at Somerset, Pa., destroyed one-third of the area and two-thirds of the value of the property of the town. Loss, $1,000,000; insurance, $175,000.

The President has approved a bill to regulate elections in Washington and Idaho Territories, and the Senate has passed an act to distribute a thousand breech loaders to citizens in exposed districts in Montana.

The Chicago Tribune seconds the suggestion that Greeley retire from the editorship of his paper during the canvass.

Sumner and Schurz are censured by the Senate committee on the sales of arms to the French, and all those connected with said sales are exonerated from blame. The Sacramento Union says it has the look of a white-washing report.

The prospects are that Congress will soon adjourn.

The National Democratic Committee met in New York, May 7. They resolved to hold a National Convention of their party, in Baltimore, July 9. California, Oregon and six other States were not represented in the Committee.

Belmont.

From parties just arrived from Belmont, we learn that business is rapidly improving in that town, and everybody is in fine spirits in anticipation of the good times which are dawning upon that long neglected camp. Mining operations are being pushed ahead with great activity and favorable results—new developments being made almost every day.—Reese River Reveille.

Concerning Our County.

This county, says THE INYO INDEPENDENT, possesses every essential resource to make it one of the most prosperous in the State, its main drawback being its lack of communication with the outside world.

To judge from the terrible earthquake shakes that county has experienced within the past four weeks, we opine the main drawback to be the quick communication they have with the other world.—San Bernardino Guardian.

Not so; though the "other world" may be easily accessible to residents of Inyo the "communication" is entirely one-sided, and therefore not advantageous to our trans-montane neighbors. On the whole Inyo and its earthquakes are shaky subjects, and not over pleasant to think upon.—San Joaquin Argus.

For San Bernardino or Merced either one to call Inyo "shaky," par excellence, after their own lively and continuous shaky experience is much like the fabled remark of one black kettle to another. The "drawbacks" enjoyed by them are strikingly similar and prospectively encouraging.

Unique.

S. T. Ringgold:—Your "Sonnit to a Violet" is good, but it is an invariable rule among newspapers to publish no original poetry unless it is paid for in advance. The idea of making "heifer" rhyme with "zephyr" is something unique, and would no doubt make a sensation. Our usual price for original poetry is eight dollars a line, but as there are extenuating circumstances in your favor we will print yours for seven dollars and a half. We have unsurpassed facilities for doing this kind of work.—Savannah (Ga.) News.

That's us.

Indian Convention.

On the 21st instant there is to be a convention of all the Indian tribes of Arizona, to be held at Camp Grant. It is said that Generals Howard and Crook are in perfect harmony, and great things are expected of this convention. Some little hopes, we think, may be entertained of peace for a few months if the Indians agree to anything of the kind at this season of the year, when there is grass for their ponies and they themselves are not dependent on the Government for rations. They will agree to anything when the weather is rough and rations scarce, but it is expecting rather too much to think they are going perpanently to bury the hatchet in the month of May, unless about three-fourths of them are buried with it.

Waucoba.

This district, the scene of Mr. Brady's new operations, lies to the northeast of this point, about 40 miles distant, on the eastern slope of the Inyo mountains. Its mines are of the same general character as those of Cerro Gordo, with great numbers of both lead and silver ledges, the former being reported more extensive though perhaps less rich than those of the point mentioned, and both are supposed to be upon the same mineral belt. Mr. Brady has a force of 10 or 15 men employed in mining, putting up a rock-breaker and making preparations for building a furnace. The district is well supplied with water and an abundance of fir, pine and pinyon timber. The present drawback is its inaccessibility, as it is reached only by the roughest mountain trails from Cerro Gordo, but the enterprising operator is moving to get a road through either opposite Big Pine or by way of the Mazurka canyon. Meanwhile Mr. Brady is still successfully working the well known Front mine, Cerro Gordo.

The Location.

As yet the Supervisors have not determined upon the location of the new Court House. Isaac Harris proffers the county a square most anywhere in town for the purpose, which is liberal, to say the least. It occurs to us that the block just opposite THE INDEPENDENT office would be as good luck as any—but then we may be somewhat "prejuced" in the matter. However, it is the highest, most sightly location in town, with plenty of available water for the benefit of the trees which should be set out to protect the buildings from fire.

Kearsarge.

The Kearrarge property, at the recent sale in bankruptcy, was purchased for $23,000 by J. Frank, of San Francisco, who is presumed to represent Rothschild & Co., to whom has been assigned most of the claims against the concern. We trust that the new owners, should the sale be confirmed, will immediately proceed to business. The resumption of active operations, with a dead certainty of success under competent management, is a matter of far more importance than any division among creditors of the proceeds of this sale.

Comings and Goings.

Among the departures of the preceding week we may note that of Mrs. Dr. C. B. White and mother, of the Post, who go Eastward. Judge Reed and Mr. Laspeyre have left us for Kern county, while Mr. S. P. Moffat is off on an expedition to Hualapia, Arizona, where we hope he may realize as much cash as two or three mints might turn out. Gardner, wounded at Lone Pine, is in town, getting around with the suppleness of an elephant. Dan Williams, and "Shorty," the inimitable, are also "buiskin" around the streets.

Proposals.

Architects, mechanics and bridge-builders will find announcements of interest among our advertisements, which invite proposals for bids for building a Court House and three bridges. It is the intention of the Board of Supervisors to make all of these substantial and permanent structures, with the commendable view of ending further expense in this direction.

Lumber.

Mr. John Broder is now in Los Angeles, where he is gone to purchase dressed lumber, for the use of himself and others at this place who are about building. A planing mill in the valley would have saved this outlay, and we should think that same man understanding the business would improve the opportunity at once.

Kicked by a Horse.

On Thursday last, Mr. Samuel Newlan received a very severe kick in the left side, from a vicious horse which he was trying to hitch up. Although greatly hurt, he is now able to navigate, and thinks that a dose of six-shooter would help him, if it was properly applied to the horse.

Sale of the Court House.

By the notice published elsewhere it will be seen that the County Supervisors have concluded not to require the purchaser of the old Court House ruins to remove the debris, as they have decided to retain the brick.

Not Exhausted.

We continue to have a little "temblor" occasionally. A relapse into the old state of affairs was threatened one night this week, there being three or four shakes in close order, but that was all.

Tearing Away.

Harris & Rhine have a full force of carpenters at work tearing down the old Inyo saloon, to make room for a building which will occupy the ground covered by that and their former store.

New Stock.

The boot and shoeist, Fred Fisher, has received a fine supply of almost everything in his line, which he is willing to dispose of for a small consideration. Read his ad.

Book-keeper Wanted.

Book keepers out of a situation will do well to consult our advertisements this week.

Petition from citizens of Deep Spring Valley asking for the establishment of a road district and a public highway in that valley, beginning at the eastern end of Greenley & Co.'s toll road and thence to point of intersection with the Palmetto Road, via Piper's ranch, was granted.

Notice of sale of the old Court House, at public auction, was ordered published in THE INYO INDEPENDENT.

Dr. C. B. White was appointed County Physician; charges for medicines, board and attendance not to exceed $2 50 per diem for each indigent person placed under his care. Application for admission to the hospital may be made to the Supervisor resident in the district, to the Board when in session or to the County Physician.

Ordered that proposals for bids for the construction of three bridges be published in THE INYO INDEPENDENT. Also, the same order was made for proposals for building a new Court House.

The salary of the County Jailer was fixed at $60 per month, payable out of the general fund. Twelve dollars per month was appropriated out of the general fund for office rent for District Attorney.

An appropriation of $25 per month, on the general fund, was made for office rent for the County Judge.

Road application of S. Williams, of Bishop Creek, passed till next regular meeting.

Order made in reference to the sale of county bonds.

Application for road on Bishop Creek, previously on file, was accepted and approved, said road being declared a public highway.

Full Board present on the last day of the session, Monday, May 13. Adjourned to meet June 17th next.

Concerning a School.

Mr. G. H. Hardy, who is a No. 1 teacher, proposes to start a private school here, to begin one week from Monday next, unless something is done in the meantime toward a public school. Mr. Hardy will teach a public school (a three-months' term) on the most reasonable terms, but this can only be started through subscription or the levy of a special tax to raise the necessary means, as this district is not entitled to public school money sufficient. If $200 can be raised by subscription a public school can be maintained three months, which is necessary to prevent a forfeiture of our share of the school money. Otherwise it will be necessary to levy the tax—that is if by subscription that amount can't be raised for a public school.

On the Science.

Professor Whitney, State Geologist, arrived in Lone Pine on Thursday last, with a good outfit and an able corps of assistants. The scientific world will look upon the result of his investigations with the profoundest interest, and we trust that the gentleman has no theories to either prove or disprove, for then we can look for fair, unbiased deductions from the ten thousand facts to come under his notice. He will remain in Inyo for perhaps two months.

How it Affects Him.

Smith & Engle at the Black Rock Rock saw mill have a favorite old ox This old fellow got terribly demoralized during the big earthquake. Ever since when a little shake would come he would fall down and stick up his heels as an intimation that he had had enough. That's his way of expressing his fright—of throwing up the sponge, and it is better way than getting drunk, as some folks did.

Cerro Gordo.

An extensive strike of lead is announced in the Union mine, Cerro Gordo. It occurs in the lowest workings, and will doubtless incite other mine owners to still deeper prospecting. Both furnaces have been repairing for a few days past.

Strawberries.

We have been favored, by P. Reddy, Esq., with some samples of fine flavored, luscious strawberries, fresh culled from the beds. Notwithstanding the lateness of the season, Mr. Reddy's and the other gardens and orchards about town are perfectly gorgeous in their verdure.

DISTRICT COURT.

Hon. Theron Reed, Judge.

Court convened in regular term on Monday, May 6, 1872.

Rothschild & Co. vs. Kearsarge Mining Co.—passed for the term.

Geo. Goodridge vs. San Felipe Mining Co.—referred to Court Commission to find amount due plaintiff and costs of suit; their report accepted and judgment by default against defendant.

On motion of P. Reddy, Thomas Laspeyre was admitted to practice as an attorney in this Court.

Canty vs. Inyo county—on motion of defendant's counsel a jury was allowed and venire issued for 30 jurors. Case continued for a number of days, resulting in a verdict far plaintiff.

J. J. Moore vs. Georgiana Moore—decree of divorce entered in favor of plaintiff.

Sylvia A. Rogers vs. Elisha H. Rogerr—decree of divorce entered in favor of plaintiff.

Gates & Fowler vs. Lewis & Ham—jury trial. Verdict for plaintiffs.

W. F. Galliardo vs. A. B. Elder, Sheriff—judgment for defendant, costs of suit against plaintiff.

H. M. Isaacs vs. Wood &. Cohen—referred to Court Commission. Judgment for plaintiff and execution issued in the sum of $4.447 03.

Sanchez vs. Wolfskill, et als—continued for the term

Jennings vs. Jennings—neither of the parties appearing in Court, the case was continued for the term.

Tuesday, May 14, Court adjourned for the term.

Special Providences.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Will we ever get done with wild theories in regard to earthquakes? Physically, there can be but one correct theory; but the investigations in future must determine which one is correct. Let us leave the whole matter to Science. Whitney, Stewart, et als. But can we, as reasonable beings, accept the moral phase of the phenomena, and ascribe these terrible convulsions to an angry God? If so, why do infants suffer?

If I properly interpret an article in your paper of the 4th instant, Rev. Mr. C., of Bishop Creek, advocates in a letter to you, the doctrine of partial dispensations of Providence. This is an effete doctrine which I have no desire to argue; but for the benefit of those who still hold to the pagan superstition that the gods visit as poor worms with dire vengeance for our sins, I want you to republish the following lines of Pope:

"Shall burning Etna, if a sage requires,
Forget to thunder, and recall her fires?
On air or sea new motions be impressed
Oh blameless Bethel! to relieve thy breast?
When the loose mountain trembles from on high,
Shall gravitation cease if you go by?
Or some old temple, nodding to its fall,
For a Christian's head reserve the hanging wall?

The words in italics I have supplied, the rest is verbatim.

For the further benefit of those who believe in partial dispensations—that we are punished for our extreme wickedness, I will subjoin a few more lines from the same author, in order that if the prayers of the righteous shall avert our fearful calamities, they may have a proper guide:

"Let not this weak, unknowing hand
Presume thy bolts to throw,
And deal damnation 'round the land
On each I judge thy foe."

D. LOVE.

Bishop Creek, May 14, 1872.

Summer Goods.

The Fish Springs Store, at the well known place of that name, is now overcrowded with new goods of every description, and the proprietor announces that they can be had at extremely low rates. In addition to the groceries and dry goods, his stock of wet goods is one of the largest and best in Inyo. See advertisement.

County Bonds.

It will be seen that the Board of Supervisors advertise the sale of County Bonds, under act of the Legislature. These bonds are to-day one of the best paying solid investments offered in the State, and as such they should be rapidly taken up by capitalists.

First Crash of the Jubilee.

A couple of weeks ago the great Coliseum in process of building for the second grand Peace Jubilee at Boston, succumbed to the overwhelming power of a heavy gale of wind, and fell with a terrific crash into a state of total destruction. The grand arch, one hundred and fifty feet in height, spanning the entire width of the buiding, swayed and twisted from side to side for hours before the substantial material finally gave way, and then the whole building fell together, forming a mountain of great timbers, iron girders, glass, etc. It was a noble building, or promised to be, and was already one of grand proportions, the largest on the American Continent, but its progress of construction had just reached that certain point when it was the weakest, requiring the completion of the balance to combine full strength and harmony of construction to what was already completed. No one was injured, as under the circumstances, the builders and everybody else kept at a respectful distance, anticipating this result from the fury of the attacking gale. The very next day the rebuilding was commenced, and without the abatement of one jot of heart or hope, and with three-fold energy, since we are told that "work on the new building has commenced simultaneously at both ends and in the middle."

The Great Bonanza.

(From The Gold Hill News.)

The extensive and immensely rich body of ore developed and still developing in the Crown Point and Belcher mines, is simply an exaggerated specimen of the ore deposits lying within the limits of the great Comstock lode. The lode itself extends definitely to the distance of about three miles in a northerly and southerly direction, with a dip or inclination of forty-five degrees east as it descends into the bowels of the earth. Its width between the walls varies greatly, being from fifty to three hundred feet, or thereabouts, wide, the north end being apparently the narrowest, while at the south its width seems more and more indefinite as further developed. The general character of the vein matter between the walls is porphyry, quartz, clay and similar material, considerably mixed, with occasional veins or pockets of water. The ore bodies are the exception to the general character of the ledge, and do not seem to be in regular chimneys or streaks, but in independent deposits, occurring simply wherever they are found—to use a common expression of the most experienced superintendents and mining men.

These ore bodies or bonanzas are of all sizes, and in two instances show signs of regularity or continuous connection from the surface down to the greatest depths yet attained. One instance is that of the Gould & Curry, appearing at the surface and following down in an almost uninterrupted chain southward—and eastward with the dip of the ledge—through the Savage and Hale & Norcross, and evidently into the unexplored depths of the Chollar-Potosi. The other is that of the Belcher, extending from the surface or thereabouts northward down to the lowest depths of the Crown Point. Bonanzas of all sizes have been found and worked out in various portions of the ledge, near the surface, as in the Ophir, Mexican, Chollar, the mines of Gold Hill proper, the Yellow Jacket, Overman, etc. An important specimen was the rich Belvidere body in the Chollar-Potosi, extending from at or near the surface to about 200 feet below. It was nearly 200 feet long, and sixty or seventy feet wide, egg-shaped and was nearly all worked out last year, yielding some millions of dollars.

In the Overman several considerably small bunches of rich ore were worked out in times past; and, as we have stated, the prospecting explorations in the various mines along the great lode are liable to develop new bodies of greater or lesser importance at any time and where least expected.

The great chief bonanza of all, however, thus far, is that encountered in the lowest levels of the Crown Point and Belcher. Already it is known to be four hundred feet in depth, a hundred feet or more in width, six or eight hundred feet long, and its limits in any direction are far from being definitely known. Widening as it descends, it is literally one grand mountain-like mass of rich silver and gold ore, to which all the other bonanzas or bunches of ore heretofore found are mere stray nodules. It gains to the north and south as depth is attained, and bids fair to not only include the entire length of the Crown Point and Belcher claims, but also to extend into the Segregated Belcher and other mines south. Thus far it has exceeded the utmost limits of the wildest and most sanguine imagination, and no man, even now, may set a definite limit to its boundaries.

Curious Discovery.

The Bulletin tells of a curious archæological discovery in Marin county of stone implements imbedded in rock of a formation far anterior to the period usually ascribed as to the origin of man. Some of them look like sinkers for fish lines, some like arrow-heads, and others resemble instruments for cutting purposes, all bearing marks of having been fashioned by human ingenuity. These relics are held to be confirmatory of the theory of some modern scientists that the human race existed on the face of the earth many thousands of years prior to the period indicated in the Mosaic account of the creation.

Late Papers.

We are indebted to H. W. Robinson, the irrepressible stage man, for late Los Angeles dates. Some time in the course of a month, if nothing happens to prevent, we will get the corresponding dates by mail. Mr. Robinson is confident that, ere the 1st of January next, he will be able with 24 hours staging to deliver his passengers, regardless of sex, directly into the hands of the "grasping monopoly"—and the Lord have mercy on 'em, for Robinson then washes his hands of all further responsibility—who,—the said monopoly—will then have a railroad depot at Tehechepi Pass.

Expensive "Laughter and Applause."

It has been computed that over $1,500 has been paid during the past thirty years for printing the single word "laughter" in The Congressional Globe. It is presumed that if the computation covered the word "applause," the amount would be tripled or quadrupled. The most curious part of the business is the fact that a considerable portion of the amount was paid for "applause and laughter" interlarded in speeches that were never delivered, but which were printed by consent, their authors being allowed to insert the "applause," etc., where, in their opinion, it would have been given had the speech really been delivered.—Detroit Tribune.

THE FROZEN CREW.

BY MARY B. DODGE.

Near by the lighthouse, whose lamp is lit
By a brand from the sun which is firing it,

Doubling the gleams from the west that quiver,
A crystal ship lies out on the river.

Frost-woven sheets to the wind are furled;
Frost-bound the streamer on topmast curled.

Reef-band and sail and sail are frozen stark—
A shimmering spectre, the frozen bark!

Smooth cordage of ice was spun last night
By the breath of the storm in its mystic might;

Chill was the touch, that chilled the men
Who strove to lower the sails again;

Only a day from the harbor bar
Had the canvass filled for its port afar,

Only a day of breezes brave
Had challenged the bark to mount the wave;

Only a day of quickened life
As the air with its pulse of health was rife,

Had this ship, with its store of golden corn,
Over the gladdened sea been borne,

When feathery flakes began to fall,
And the king of the storm outspake to call

To his aid the help of the wind and sleet—
Furies that came with hurrying feet,

And blinded the men, and clouded the air
With a wonder that even is wondrous fair;

A spell that a siren might weave in hate,
To lure her victim to helpless fate.

Yet never so mockingly cruel as when
One, the most fearless among the men,

Sprang to the top with heart to dare,
And was frozen still to the cross-tree there!

Long the battle with wind and hail;
One by one the stout hearts quail;

One by one they are frost-numbered all,
The gallant crew, in their icy thrall!

Breaks the morning in smiles once more;
Turned is the weird ship back to shore;

Slowly it ploughs the sea slush through,
The ghostly ship with its silent crew,

Till out from the lighthouse succor comes,
And the men are borne to sorrowing homes;

Some to yield to an endless night,
Blind to the blessings of cheerful light;

Some to suffer a torturing pain,
As the congealed life current is loosed again,

Or to cry in the fever of struggling breath
To the man aloft who is dumb with death,

While the mute ship lies, a spectral sight,
Clad in its vestments of shining white,

Unwarmed by the flames from the west which dip
To kindle the hold of the crystal ship,

And halo the head of the sleeping man
Who froze at his post when the storm began.

Inyo County.

A special correspondent of The San Francisco Bulletin, writing from Cerro Gordo under date of April 28, 1872, among other things, gives expression to the following sensible and truthful view of our mines and ores:

It is singular that capital, sagacious and far-seeing as it presumptively is, has so long kept out of the Inyo Range. In a belt, near two hundred miles long, including the Coso district at its southernmost extremity, which I am told, is a more opulent metaliferous range than even the Comstock, there are not a half a dozen works in operation. To be sure, the Mexicans here and there work the surface of an occasional vein with the primitive arastra, and the American prospector does a little placer mining, but of works on a comprehensive and commensurate scale, there are not six, all told. At this place there are two furnaces for the smelting of ores, at Swansea there is a third, at Eclipse a fourth, and these all of which I have been able to gain any knowledge. In the Union, Jefferson, and Buena Vista mines there are tunnels and shafts and all the developments necessary to get out the ores. Not but what the hill is bored all over—resembling a field where the gophers held in little reverence the legislative enactments concerning them—but these are mere prospective developments made by Mexicans, who immediately they discover that they have hit upon a body of ore, hasten to sell out the claim to the two or three large operators, who are so much better qualified, in the financial way, to work it.

The ores found in this range include nearly the entire catalogue of metals. On this hill, lead, with about three per cent. of silver to it—upon average—is the principal product. The same may be said of Swansea and Eclipse. There are places, however, where clean gold is found and some pure silver veins. Base metals are predominant, but the ores are so rich that some worked here yielded high as six hundred dollars a ton. The average yield, mill-men tell me, is not short of three hundred dollars a ton.

The ores are largely charged with antimony and arsenic both. To be sure, as an offset, the cost of working mines in this range is enormous, water being so scarce, and fuel and everything else, almost, having to be hauled up the mountain. But those who have engaged in such enterprises here have reaped large fortunes in comparatively no space of time, and, everything else being equal, I fail to see why one man may not succeed where another has met the amplest success.

"Nagging."

Not a very pretty word but a very expressive one is "nagging." There is no other word in the English language which so well describes a certain annoyance from which so many suffer. There are woman who have no other fault save that of "nagging," but this is sufficient to obscure, if not to hide from sight altogether, all the good qualities they possess. The nagging woman will always find something to get out of temper at. Go to see her and she will welcome you with, "So you've found your way here at last, have you? I might have been dead for all you cared." When her husband brings her home a new bonnet instead of looking pleased and thanking him for it she will say, "A pretty price you must have paid for it, you had better have given me the money and I wouldn't have been swindled." If the children make a noise while playing, she nags at them until she makes them cry, and then bemoans her hard lot, and says, "No woman ever had such ill-tempered young ones as I have." (The nagging woman always calls her children "young ones.") She has not the slightest consideration for the feelings of others if they do not act exactly as she wishes them she nags at them until, for the sake of a quiet life, they give in. There is no satisfying her, no means of making her contented and happy. On fine days the sun annoys her; on rainy days she is miserable because she cannot get out. The husband of a nagging woman must needs be a paragon or he would take to drink in sheer despetation. She is one of those women of whom it is often said, "she is enough to provoke a saint." This unhappy temperament is often the result of disease; the digestive or other vital organs are in an unhealthy condition, and it is in consequence of this that the mind is in a continual state of irritation. Knowing this, the intimate friends of the nagging woman make allowances for her, and half that she says with them passes for nothing; they know that she "doesn't mean any harm," and put up with her. Those who need not associate with her give her a wide berth and flee from the nasal whine of her complaining voice as from an affliction to be shunned by all possible means.

The Raw Hide.

A few miles west of Omaha, a miry, sluggish stream runs into the Platte, and this stream is called the "Raw Hide." It is said that soon after the discovery of gold in California, a young man belonging to a party who started from the "States" and crossed the Plains in search of gold, made a foolish boast before starting from home to the effect that he would shoot the first Indian he saw. The party crossed the Missouri river, and soon found themselves in the great valley of the Platte. Passing up the valley, they encamped one evening on the banks of the stream spoken of, which at that time was nameless. As the train was about to move out the next morning, a small party of young Indians who had come across the river from the Pawnee village on the opposite side, approached the encampment. These were the first Indians the party had seen, and the young man who had said that he intended to shoot the first Indian he saw was reminded of his boast, and he immediately picked up his rifle, took aim at a young squaw and shot her dead. The news was carried to the village at once, and the party of whites were surrounded by exasperated Indians and the young man who done the shooting was seized, stripped, tied to a wagon wheel and skinned alive, the poor fellow begging of both enemies and friends to shoot him and thus end his terrible sufferings. The remainder of his party were compelled to stand by and witness the torture without being able to render him any assistance. The unfortunate man survived the operation but a few moments, and emigrants were then allowed to move on. Since that day the stream upon whose banks the horrible affair occurred has been known as "The Raw Hide."

Hell Gate.

The work of removing the obstructions of Hell Gate is going on as rapidly as possible, and though it makes little noise now, the final scene will make noise enough. A mass of 123,000 cubic yards of rock is being pierced by submarine galleries, in which, when the tunnelings are completed, there will be placed 7,000 pounds of nitro glycerine, equal in explosive force to 70,000 pounds of gunpowder. These mines will be fired simultaneously by electricity on "some future Fourth of July." The success of the blast will open a safe pathway to the ocean to ships of the largest tonnage. The foreign steamships will then come into port under the lee of Long Island at a great saving of time and avoidance of peril. Of course the opening of this channel will displace a vast amount of the business of New York.

Puts, Calls, Hedgings, Short, Long.

Stock jobbing slang is thus elucidated by Eli Perkins in The New York Advertiser:

What is "put?"

Suppose Erie is 31 to-day, and I think it is going down, I say to you I will give you $100 for the privilege of putting it to you at $30 any time within thirty or sixty days—that is put. If it goes to 27, I buy it and put it to you at 30 making 2 per cent.

The wording of "put" is as follows:

"February 8, 1872. For value received the bearer may "put" to me one thousand shares of Lake Shore at 93 on or before Feb. 29, 1872.

JOHN SMITH.

What is a "call?"

In the same case suppose I think Erie is going up. I say to you, if you will let me call 100 shares of Erie from you at 31, in sixty days I will give you $100. If Erie goes up to 34 I will call my Erie at 31, and make three per cent.

The wording of a call is as follows:

"February 8, 1872. For value received the bearer may call from me 1,000 shares of Fort Wayne at 87, on or before February 29, 1872.

JOHN SMITH.

What is "hedging?"

If I buy a certain stock thinking it is going to advance, that is "get long in it," and it begins to fall, I go and call the same stock—sell it "short," and then I have hedged so that I don't care whether the market goes up or down.

"Covering shorts" is when you have sold stock expecting a decline and it suddenly rises, then you are forced to buy to cover the stock which you have sold.

The Country Editor.

An Eastern journal comments in the following strain on the occupation of the publisher of a country newspaper:

The life of a newspaper publisher, who is also its editor and printer, is doubtless a harrassing one—full of difficulties and perplexities. We concede that it is as trying to the temper to issue a newspaper in the country, with the ordinary appliances, as to drive a yoke of oxen, which it is said no one can do without swearing. We fully believe that the publishers of the average weeklies undergo more brain worriment than the editors-in-chief of the great dailies, as it is easier to manage the Continental Hotel than to cater for a basement restaurant. A practical publisher of a religious newspaper says: A man who can preserve the serenity of his temper, the sweetness of Christian disposition and an unflagging perseverance amid all the obstacles and difficulties which newspaper publication presents, deserves to be ranked with Job for patience, Baxter for goodness, and the Iron Duke for nerve, power and obstinate determination.

EXEUNT LITIGANT LAW.

The "litigant law" ceased effect on the 21st instant, and of course the obligations required by that Act expired with it. This much-abused law has been one of the best ever enacted, and was what its title purported it to be—"an Act to Protect Litigants," a fact which said litigants will duly ascertain, to the cost of their pockets. The great clamor raised for its repeal emanated from the "outs" and from papers in our position, i. e. the only one published in a county, when upon the abrogation of the law extortionate rates could be charged for legal advertising; and we now look for a general advance to old prices by papers all over the State. As will be seen, however, THE INDEPENDENT rates for this class of advertising remains the same as was required by that law, and will continue so, at least until the commencement of Volume III, which begins on the 6th of July next.

Electoral Vote.

Of the three hundred and fifty-seven electoral votes to be cast in the coming Presidential election, New England and the Middle States will have one hundred and nine; the Northern States, one hundred and two; the Pacific States, twelve; and the Southern States one hundred and thirty-four. This is in accordance with the new apportionment, which some well posted papers say does not take effect until after the selecting of the next President, should the decision of that question fall upon the House of Representatives. The old or present apportionment gives a total of three hundred and seventeen electoral votes, one for each Senator and Representative in the electing Congress.

Louisana Election.

By a law of the State Louisiana holds her general election on the first Monday in November. The act of Congress fixes the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November as the day for holding the presidential election in all the States. But to accommodate Louisiana, Congress recently passed and the President has signed a bill authorizing that State to vote for President on the same day she holds her general election. So the presidential election will take place in Louisiana this year one day sooner than in any other State.

Betting on Elections.

At this time, when there is a split in the Republican party, there is a disposition for men of diverse political opinions to offer bets to "back up"—as they call it—their opinions on the result of the Presidential election. As the provisions of the codes relative to election matters are not yet well understood, it will be of some avail to the people to know that the law in the Penal Code is quite stringent in regard to betting on elections. Section 60 of Title 4 reads:

Sec. 60. Every person who makes, offers or accepts any bet or wager upon the result of any election, or upon the success or failure of any person or candidate, or upon the number of votes to be cast either in the aggregate or for any particular candidate, or upon the vote to be cast by any person, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

The punishment may extend to a fine of a thousand dollars and to a term of imprisonment for five years. Doubtless some persons not knowing the provisions of the new law on the subject, may have indulged in bets on the Presidential election. The penalty is too strong to be risked.—Sacramento Union.

A Swindle, Probably.

H. G. Maynard, the well known banker and broker of this town, administrator of the estate of George W. Whitman, a minor heir, deceased in Boston, has brought suit in the United States District Court to recover fifteen feet of the Crown Point mine, sold while deceased was under age, together with the dividends thereon during the last eleven years. This is a pretty heavy and important suit, the fifteen feet comprising three hundred shares, worth to-day $1,750 per share, or in all $525,000, exclusive of the dividends paid, which will make the whole amount not far from $600,000. The case will come up at the August term of the court, when Ben Butler will appear as attorney on behalf of the heirs. Mitchell & Stone, of Virginia, are also retained as counsel in the case. —Gold Hill News.

The Yellow Jacket Fire.

We have been placed in possession of the names of several persons who will probably be called upon, in the course of time, to testify in the matter of the Yellow Jacket fire, and have been furnished with some outlines of the evidence that will be forthcoming. If the testimony shall establish as facts the circumstances as related to us, the conspiracy to burn the mine will turn out to have been one of the most fiendish crimes on record.—Virginia Chronicle.

THE LATEST RAILROAD CLAIM.

When the Central Pacific Railroad Company was begging subsidies of the State of California, and of individual counties, its favorite argument was an assertion of the gain from increase of taxable values, including the road itself. Latterly, however, the company having failed in trying to get the taxation on its road reduced to a minimum, seeks to evade taxation altogether, and has succeeded in obtaining an order from the Supreme Court of the United States, for the State to appear and answer to the plea that the Central Pacific Railroad is a national work, necessary to the execution of the powers of the National Government, and that State taxation of said road is unconstitutional. It is difficult to see how such a plea can be maintained. The road, although aided by Government, is not the property of Government but of a private corporation, and as such is equally subject to taxation with all other private property. The privileges it obtained made it better able to bear taxation, and there is not the least probability that the Supreme Court will hold it to be exempt. The plea is impudent, and it is strange that the Court would even give it a hearing.—S. F. Bulletin.

For first-class, unblushing effrontry, and general meanness to match, the Central Pacific Railroad Company are entitled to the palm. They will "bust out" any man, city, county or State without the least compunction. Does the keeper of a meal station on the line of their road fail to pull off his hat to them with proper grace, the occupation of that dispenser of bodily comforts to weary passengers ends forthwith. Do they find a little town on their road not built on their land they leave that little town to languish and die, and they move on a few miles and establish a peanut stand of their own. Does one of their proteges, anywhere in the land, employ a man that don't vote to suit them he must be discharged, or that protege go hence. Does a newspaper say that their road was built with the people's money for the benefit of the people, and not exclusively for that of three or four stockholders, no newsboy dare sell or give that paper away on their trains. Does a passenger want to be annoyed by having to show his ticket at every station, let him buy that paper elsewhere and read it on their cars. Does a merchant or poor farmer ship freight on an opposition boat, expecting it afterwards to be forwarded over one of their roads, that merchant or farmer, will see his hopes fade away. Do they want a Legislature (and they always do) to further their nefarious schemes, they buy it at a slight advance on first cost. Do the people object to furnish all the money for this purpose, they are told to ante, and the people do it, otherwise their business will go "where the woodbine twineth." Does a member of the Legislature, or of Congress, in their employ take a look backwards towards a deceived constituency, some coin or a pass or a promised re-election is held up in his front and he looks back no more. Does a city object to their tightening coils, under which it cannot long exist, their Congressmen are ready to help in taking another and the final turn. Does a county enjoy the taxes and benefits of a million or more dollars' worth of teams, costly roads, etc., they will carry freight for a fraction of a cent less, and clean it out of all. Does that county ask them for a few dollars taxes in return for the many out of which it has been wronged they "can't see it"—not at least until some thousands of dollars has been expended in removing the film from their eyes. Does an Assessor tax their road at one-sixth its value the whole must be abrogated because it would be taxing the property of the United States. Does the United States ask these whilom beggars to pay a little interest money on the many millions given and loaned them the request can't be considered for a moment, for its the people's railroad, and a magnanimous Government would not expect interest on money donated. Does Standford & Co. want to know how to effect such a radical change in the climate of this State they can't live in it in safety, we answer, they are pursuing the right course to accomplish it as soon as any reasonable man can desire.

New Land Bill.

Senator Cole's new land bill, which has just become a law, provides that settlers may pre-empt 160 acres o agricultural land; 640 acres of lumber or pasturage land, or 40 acres of placer mining land. Two years continued residence on agricultural or pasturage land entitles the settler to a patent free of charge; mineral land at the price now prescribed by law. No lands are to be disposed of otherwise than as provided in this act; and all lands, except Government reservations, are open to settlement.

Another Clergyman.

Its an ill-wind that blows good to no one. The organization of the Lone Pine Relief Committee has indirectly been the means of grace for one reprobate, or lawyer, which is the same thing "purty much," and of causing a valuable addition to the laborers in this part of the moral sage-yard. At least we are led to think so from the fact that the latest card of thanks from that committee to the people of San Francisco, as it appears in The Bulletin of the 17th instant, is signed "Rev. F. K. Miller, Secretary L. P. R. C."

REGARDING OUR COUNTY'S FUTURE.

We claim and re-assert that beyond all peradventure Inyo county possesses every natural requirement to constitute it one of the most prosperous counties in California. It enjoys a genial climate, a prolific soil and the richest and most extensive mines. Its future greatness, so far as all these conduce to bring it about, is as well assured as any future event possibly can be.

Do we as a people properly appreciate our advantages, and take hold with the right spirit to make the most of them? No! Instead, there is too many temporary expedients. Our plans, public and individual, are all of a temporizing nature. It seems that the majority are laboring to build up no permanent institutions of any description. For instance, is it not the very poorest and most short-sighted policy to send abecedarians hundreds of miles away to school, when half the money expended for that purpose would secure equal if not superior school facilities at home? Do men who do these things look at their own future interests at all, or do they wish to convey the impression that they have no abiding interest here beyond the mere present or the accumulation of a sum of money which will enable them to leave? As long as this suicidal policy is pursued—for no better reason than for the present it is most convenient—can we ever expect to have a permanent population, or will it not compel many families, who would otherwise make this their home, to leave in order that their children may be educated? Is it any wonder that so long as such policy prevails we find it impossible to maintain a school here of any grade. So long as the rich prefer to expend five dollars elsewhere in educating their children to the same extent and no greater than one dollar properly expended here would do, we can never expect to have a permanent common, and much less a high school; and as long as we prefer to patronize foreign manufacturers and producers of every class instead of encouraging our own, just so long our every interest will languish. We deny no man's right to expend his money in any manner that to him seems best, but we do impugn his judgment when he expends it to his own disadvantage as well as that of his neighbors, which is the case when done in the manner implied above. That is not the way to build up either a country or an individual business.

If we have any faith in the future fortunes of our section let us make it manifest by supporting and encouraging home institutions of every sort, even if done at a present loss. It is in the power of a very few individuals to determine the position this county is to hold in the immediate if not in the distant future. It needs no Daniel to foretell its status for the next ten years if this selfish policy is allowed to govern, or if a false notion of economy induces the construction of temporary, shabby public buildings. Under the circumstances this last proposition is one of no trifling responsibility. In our honest belief the destinies of our county depend to a great extent upon the judgment displayed in this matter.

For example, our proposed new Court House will be symbolical of the faith of its builders. If mean and temporary in architecture and mode of construction, it will have a discouraging effect upon all, whether transient visitors or so-called permanent residents. We want the very best public structures, both as to appearance and stability, that can possibly be furnished for the money available for the purpose. It is the worst possible policy to put wheels under a Court House. The new Code has provided them for county seats, for which they may be useful, but never for the building itself. It can't be moved, and when schools and other public institutions of like character are sure to be needed, no such contingency should be considered in its construction.

If we want other people to believe and act as though our county had a promising future let us act as though we believed it ourselves. Keep our money at home as much as possible, and use it for home purposes.

Trichina.

Four cases of well-developed trichina spiralis are reported in San Francisco. The doctors agree that the disease is genuine. A man, his wife and their two children are the victims, and will soon be eaten up alive. The dreadful disease was contracted from imported bacon.

Prolific.

Brigham Young's family is composed, according to latest and most authentic accounts, of thirty-two wives and sixty-eight children. Of the children forty are girls and twenty-eight boys.

Frank Pixley.

This noted individual is girding up his loins and sinching up his famous mule preparatory for a big fight for Greeley.

THE VIEWS OF AN EDITOR.

The editor of The Visalia Delta, who recently paid this county a visit, writes to his paper that "there seems to be a good deal of jealousy toward Lone Pine on the part of Independence, and hence the movement to prevent the former from receiving aid, for fear it would be built up to the injury of the latter." We quote from memory, and may not use the exact words, but that is the substance. Had he not qualified this statement by saying, "there seems to be," etc., we should give an absolute, positive denial on every count. As it is we assert without the least qualification that no such sentiment ever dictated a line written or a word spoken by any resident of the town of Independence. As Mr. Dewey, the editor above alluded to, spent some hours in this town himself, we ask him if he heard a single word expressed by any one here to justify him in carrying the impression that "there seems to be" such a feeling existing on the part of this town? Had he stated that that was the impression on the part of certain individuals in Lone Pine, we should have found no fault with it, because we know such a feeling does exist with some there, and they have never taken any pains to conceal it. These persons have shown in various ways that they believe Independence has robbed them of a vested right "in having the advantage of the county seat and Camp Independence," as is remarked in this correspondence. It is quite possible that to these facts Independence mainly owes its existence, but admitting it to be the case, we fail to see where the narrow-contracted souls alluded to have been wronged, at least to the extent of justifying them in wishing to sign a petition asking the removal of Camp Independence, which we are assured some of them were anxious to do. That result could accomplish no possible good, but only an injury to themselves, unless it would be in the gratification of seeing a supposed rival crippled. As for the advantages accruing from the county seat, no one, we least of all, will deny the right of Lone Pine to present and urge her claims for them, but on the contrary will cheerfully abide the decision should a majority of the people decide that hers was the best, should that ever be the result. But beyond that single issue we would like any man to point out a single conflicting interest to justify the jealousy expressed by The Delta. Was Independence rubbed out of existence it could not possibly benefit Lone Pine to the extent of a dollar, and vice versa. If Lone Pine did not exist Independence would be no more flourishing than it now is; nor any less so if the former was ten times as large.

It could draw nothing of the trade that has and will build up Lone Pine, nor, with the possible but very improbable exception of the county seat, will the latter ever receive direct a dollar's worth of trade legitimately pertaining to Independence. Should either one of these aspiring burgs by any chance become a city we assert without fear of contradiction that it will do so without detracting from the legitimate trade of the other in the slightest degree. The geographical positions and respective resources of the two are as distinct and unclashing as any one could desire. The assertion is as foolish as it is false that Independence is jealous of Lone Pine in any respect whatever, and on the contrary, if Lone Pine is threatened by a dangerous rival, which is quite probable, it will grow up in a different place and direction than this, as those individuals, who are fearful of being robbed of something they never had may some day be able to see.

The actuating motive attributed to this paper for its course in regard to the relief business is simply a true reflection of the little minds that originated the charge. In that matter we have the endorsement of every unbiased man in the county, we believe, but our reasons previously given are plainly enough right to need nothing of the kind simply to substantiate them. The Delta, however, says it does not approve of our course in this matter. Perhaps not, but even gratitude for a few subscribers does not justify its second hand imputation of motives and false inferences in regard to our feeling and that of the people of Independence in this matter. That paper assumes to give facts without adding a single word of proof in support. It also adds that the Relief Committee will soon publish a detailed statement of the whole disposition of the relief fund, which we suppose is to include the names of recipients and all. A certified statement weeks ago might have set at rest many disparaging reports concerning its management, but as nothing but a general statement has yet appeared in print concerning it we look for nothing more hereafter. If such a report, or no report at all, is satisfactory to those for whom this relief was intended, it will be to all others, no doubt.

PACIFIC COAST.

John G. Fox is sinking an artesian well at Carson City. The Register says the prospects of success are very favorable. The result of this enterprise will be watched with great interest, for, if satisfactory, it will eventually enhance values, all along the eastern slope, a hundred fold.

One of the military companies of Vallejo is required to disband by orders received from Gen. Foote, caused by the Militia act passed last session, reducing the number of companies in the State.

Times are very lively at Wadsworth, that now being the point where the railroad lands all freights for Columbus, Belmont, Ione, Ellsworth and other mining camps to the south, for which there is an unusual quantity going forward, this Spring.

These Salt Lake items are dated May 15: A great gathering of all the Indian tribes in this Territory is expected soon in the neighborhood of San Pete Valley. An excursion party, principally officers of the Pennsylvania Railroad, with their families, arrived last evening. Grasshoppers have made their appearance south, and the people have been compelled to fight them to save vegetation. A fearful hailstorm is doing great damage to the fruit blossoms. The gold placer diggings in Bingham Canyon are yielding as high as forty cents to the pan; a common average is from $10 to $15 per day, per man. Three new quartz mills and seven smelting furnaces are contracted for, to be built at an aggregate expense of $250,000.

Fifteen hundred tons of railroad iron are on the way from the East for the Utah Southern Railroad. An immense force on this road are working day and night. It will reach Utah Lake in about six weeks; from thence a branch to East Canyon and the American Fork mines will, it is expected, be completed by August.

The telegraph line from San Pedro, along the railroad, to Los Angeles was completed, May 14.

The Olympia Tribune, published in Washington Territory, comes out for Greeley. This is the first paper north of California which has taken that side.

The farmers of El Monte and Los Nietos (the Egypt of Southern California), are busy planting corn and will continue until July.

Rust is said to be making sad havoc in the wheat crops in San Gabriel and other parts of Los Angeles county. The Sheriff has broken up a band of horse thieves and desperadoes who have been infesting the hills near the city for some time. Samuel Juen, on bail for $1,500 for participation in the Chinese riots, has fled, leaving his bondsmen in the lurch.

French citizens of San Francisco are organizing a company to assist poor young French women to come to California to act as house servants.

The Elevator (colored organ) is for Grant against all competitors.

Col. J. P. Hoge and most of the members of the Democratic Central Committee favor the endorsement of Greeley and Brown.

In the District Court of Los Angeles, on the 11th instant, Fenwick was sentenced to death for murder.

On his second trial Jim Haun was found guilty of murder in the second (?) degree.

An Extensive Jury.

The jury to decide upon the merits of the case tried yesterday, mention of which is made in another place, was composed of eleven men. The thought happening to occur to some one of them that they were all above the average hight, it was proposed to measure, which being done their aggregate hight was found to be seventy-one feet three and three-quarter inches. This is said to be the longest jury ever summoned in this city, and we wait to hear if it was ever beat in the State. If they were as long-headed as long bodied their decision must have been just.—Petaluma Crescent, May 15.

—In the trial of Fanny Hyde, in New York, for killing her employer, George Watson, two physicians testified in behalf of the prisoner that she was laboring under "incipient homicidal mania" at the time of the murder. "Incipient homicidal mania" is good; and the jury disagreed on a verdict; ten were for acquital and two for manslaughter.

—A St. Louis lawyer attempted to try a case in court the other day when he was half drunk, but the Judge stopped him saying, "No lawyer can practice at two bars at the same time."

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Do Something.

The fire company organized in town more than a year ago has, for the past few months, been allowed to go totally by the board, so far as meetings or attempting to get an apparatus is concerned. There is now a meeting called to take place on Monday, June 3d when some decisive plan of action should be determined upon. It now begins to look as though that $18,000-water works scheme was got up expressly to prevent anything being done, and some of the boys propose to meet, divide the treasury and quit. In view of the rapid building of frame structures exclusively, this course would be deprecated by every man possessing an atom of sense and public spirit, though it can hardly be expected that only a few property owners will bear all the financial burdens and perform all the physical duties essential to the welfare of all the balance.

Bids for Post Supplies.

Bids for barley, wood and hay for Camp Independence were opened Monday last. The lowest bids were as follows: Barley, by C. F. Walter $3 98 per hundred pounds; wood, $13 95 per cord, and hay $25 per ton, both by E. Chaquette. Were it not for the regulation requiring these articles to be delivered only as they are required for consumption, extending the time of delivery and payment through the whole year, these would be paying rates, as it is but few persons would take the contracts off the bidder's hands.

At Par.

A couple of practical jokists at Cerro Gordo have been buying beer and refreshments with receipts given at THE INDEPENDENT office for cash paid, passing them off at par. In one case a gent gave away one to be used for the purpose, and straightway had the partner of his joys "hilked" with the same. These receipts are always obtainable, in the usual manner. However, "Shorty" and Grant had nothing to do with this matter—oh, no; it was Dan Williams!

Quarterly Meeting.

Under the supervision of Presiding Elder Warren Nims, who, accompanied by his lady, has recently arrived here from Austin, the following religious observances will be held here: Quarterly meeting at 3:30 P. M., to-day (Saturday); Love-feast to-morrow at 9:30 A. M.; preaching by the Elder at 10:30, to be followed by the sacrament and baptisms.

Water.

The Cerro Gordo Water Company have extended pipes from their reservoirs down through town to nearly all the principal buildings, which will obviate the necessity of the pack trains hitherto used for delivering water in town. During the season the supply will be comparatively plenty, the company having added to their source by leasing the Crohn spring.

Married.

We learn from Harry Wright, of the northern line of stages, who has been sloshing around town for a few days, that his genial partner, J. S. Ullrick, on Sunday last took unto himself a better half. The event occurred at Carson, the bride being Miss Gertrude Pine.

Kearsarge.

It is understood that within the next two or three weeks the Kearsarge will resume active operations, with Mr. C. H. Van Gorder as managing superintendent. Harry Clauson went below last week, on business pertaining to the matter.

Left Us.

Rev. Mr. John Tamblyn, late Foreman of the Eclipse mine, and Mr. S. W. Blaisdell, recently teaching at George's Creek, were passengers on the northern stage last Sunday, bound for a trip East.

Bakery.

John Schulte, of Cerro Gordo, has quit mining for a time and gone into the bread and fancy bakery business, in that place. As a bakist he is said to be a successist.

Fight.

A couple of sons of Erin residing at Big Pine, on Sunday last, engaged in a terrific pugilistic encounter, both coming out of the muss with double heads.

Lines Up.

The telegraph to Aurora has been thoroughly righted up, and is now in operation—a fact which will be noted with satisfaction by our business men.

Eclipse.

Mr. Fred Morris has again taken the foremanship of the Eclipse mill, and is energetically pushing work preliminary to starting up.

Lost.

M. W. Belshaw gives notice that a certain $100 order has been lost, and cautions everybody not to negotiate therefor.

Farm Sold.

Mr. John Shedd recently sold his fine farm, just east of Camp Independence, to Mr. E. Chaquette.

The Geological Survey.

Professor Whitney and party passed through this place last Tuesday en route for the scene of his geological labors. All of this section has been mapped by himself or assistants already, so that his present field of operations lie to the north of the head of Owens river. In one respect public expectation will be disappointed, we are inclined to think. He spent little time in the investigation of earthquakes, cause or effect, for which this section was supposed rightfully enough to present such a fair field. He, however, manifested much interest in ascertaining particulars of the various phenomena connected therewith, and may have deduced some valuable facts or theories, yet to be elaborated. The Professor informs us that the map for this section, which for over a year past has been under process of lithographing, will be published in about a month. We are promised one of these maps, which we shall value very highly. It is intended to be perfectly accurate in all its details and, as we know from an examination of a proof sheet, is executed with the greatest skill. It is our intention to have a wood engraving of this map for publication in THE INDEPENDENT as soon as it can be done.

To Be Launched.

After many delays the "Bessie Brady" will be set afloat upon the acrid waters of Owens Lake on Monday next If our judgment is worth anything an error has been committed that will involve a great deal of extra expense hereafter, in fitting out the boat with a propeller instead of a stern wheel. The latter would certainly require a much less depth of water—an important consideration of itself—and give greater speed besides. However, it is reasonable to suppose that the builders know best, and its their own boat anyhow.

El Temblor.

In place of an item written yesterday, announcing the cessation of earthquakes, we this morning substitute one stating that the probable wind up occurred at 12:35 o'clock last night, after an interval of two or three days' quietude. It was quite a rattler, accompanied by heavy reports just before and after the shaking. To-morrow will be just two months since the occurrence of the great calamity, and it is reasonable to hope that the quaking will soon have ceased.

Fruit.

THE INDEPENDENT force were this morning the recipients of a box of superb strawberries, accompanied with a lot of currants and a quantity of what Josh Billings would call "gooseburys," from J. Earl, Esq. The donor will accept our appreciative thanks, but we would suggest that he write to Greeley for a method of raising sweeter gooseberries. The distinguished philosopher and candidate would probably advise a different method of hatching, or perhaps want them grafted on to strawberry trees.

Hotel Change.

Mr. I. W. Hunt has purchased the business and fixtures of the Orleans Hotel, Lone Pine, from Dan Canty, who is about to "git up and git" for Huallapai. Hunt will make a good, painstaking landlord, but then there are lots of people in Inyo who don't like to see Dan go away.

New Mines.

We hear that some lead mines near Desert Wells have recently been opened which promise to be of considerable value, particularly as they will be within twenty miles of the railroad when it is completed through Tehechepi Pass.

Papers.

Mr Robinson, of the Los Angeles stage, has again favored us with late Los Angeles dates, which give accounts of the great railroad meeting, which discussed plans to secure the route of the Thirty-Fifth Parallel through that city.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The Canadian Parliament, by a vote of 121 to 55, resolved to ratify their part of the treaty of Washington.

Seventeen white Americans, men, women and children, were recently brutally murdered by Indians, Mexicans and negroes, near San Antonio, Texas.

Leading editorials in every London morning paper are devoted to the supplemental article of the Washington treaty. The delay in action by the Senate is regarded as fatal to the proposed article.

At a meeting of the Exeter Chamber of Commerce Sir Stafford Northcote, speaking of the negotiations preceding the signing of the treaty of Washington, said it was the understanding of the British Commissioners that a promise was given that claims for indirect damages should not be presented. The American Senate must not be placed in a position requiring a confession that a wrong had been done. The Senate should now, as on a previous occasion, treat the matter in a statesmanlike manner.

Commenting on the correspondence of the British and American Governments, the public journals generally express a hope of a favorable decision by the Senate.

It is said the London crew to row against the Atlantas is by no means the strongest that could have been selected, but it is thought amply strong enough to beat the Americans.

The Cunard Steamer Tripoli went ashore on the Irish coast. The crew and passengers were saved. The vessel is a total loss.

Don Carlos has suffered another defeat with 5,000 troops recently.

Of the 2,000 Lake Superior mining strikers 750 have returned to work. The strike was set in motion by two Cornishmen, of late arrival, belonging to the Society of Internationals.

EASTERN NEWS.

The Senate has confirmed the nomination of T. B. Shannon as Collector at San Francisco.

The Senate has confirmed Elisha P. Ferrey as Governor of Washington Territory.

The Supreme Court of California has sustained the indictments against the Los Angeles rioters.

The Democratic State Convention of Tennessee, held at Nashville, on the 9th instant, renominated John C. Brown for Governor by acclamation, passed the usual resolutions, endorsed the Cincinnati nominees, and declared Democratic nominations unwise. The delegates to Baltimore were instructed to carry out these views.

The Chicago labor strike was a a failure. Only 3,100 marched in the procession. The Lake Superior strike is ended by compromise.

Horace Greeley declares that he will not make any public speeches during the time he is a candidate for the Presidency.

The House, May 16, by a large majority, passed a resolution to adjourn sine die on the 3d of June. Butler's motion to adjourn for a recess till November was not sustained.

Governor Hoffman's veto of the new charter for New York will have the effect of retaining in office a number of the Tammany thief "ring," against whom the authorities will now proceed by indictments for their crimes.

Michigan calls her Democratic State Convention at Milwaukee, June 13.

Boston has ordered her reading-rooms to be opened on Sundays.

Sumner is reported as speaking favorably of Greeley and the Cincinnati platform.

Governor Walker of Virginia wants the Baltimore Convention to nominate him for the Presidency.

The Nebraska Republican Convention indorses Grant, and instructs the delegates to Philadelphia to vote for him and Colfax. Texas also held her Republican Convention, May 14, and instructed the National delegates to vote for Grant, and Governor Davis for Vice President.

Moving on the Pole.

[From The S. F. Bulletin.]

No less than five expeditions are preparing to seek the open polar sea at the northern extremity of the globe. The Austrians are fitting out a very large one, to be commanded by Payer Weyprecht, of the Austrian Navy, who last year caught a view of an open sea extending northward between Nova Zembla and Spitzbergen. The party will start by steamer some time this Summer. A contemporary says:

"The plan is to advance, if possible, to the pole on the meridian east of Spitzerbergen, in the open sea there discovered last September by the commanders of the present enterprise. The expedition is provisioned and thoroughly equipped for a stay of three years in the Arctic regions. They propose to winter the first year at Cape Chelyu kin, the northernmost point of Asia (longitude 100 east); to prosecute the survey and exploration of the central polar region in the second Summer; and during the third Summer to strike, if possible, eastward for Behring Straits. Count Wiltschek, a wealthy and liberal savant, has recently given the expedition 30,000 guilders, and will accompany it during its Summer voyages. He will also establish and maintain in Nova Zembla a depot of provisions and supplies, for which he further appropriates a large sum."

At about the same time with the sailing of the Austrian expedition, the Swedish Government will start another, which will advance toward the pole by means of sledges, immediately north of Spitzbergen, and for this purpose 50 select reindeer are now being trained and exercised. An effort is making to organize a third expedition in Germany, to proceed by way of east Greenland Capt. Hall's expedition, from the United States, our readers know all about. The fifth, that fitting by M. Pavy in San Francisco, to go by way of Behring's Straits and Wrangel Land, has also been described in our columns. If there is really an open sea extending around the North Pole, some of these expeditions will be pretty sure to find it, much to the satisfaction of all lovers of daring adventure and scientific research.

The American Artisan.

J. W. Coombs, who has so long been associated in the publication of that very excellent journal, The American Artisan, has been forced by ill-health to retire from its management. Mr. L. Allen, who for the past four years has been associate editor of The Scientific American, takes Mr. Coombs' place on The Artisan. We take pleasure in commending The American Artisan to the general public, and will say that it is a standard publication that ought to be taken by every mechanic and inventive genius in the country. It is a 16-page weekly with fine illustrations in every number of new machinery, etc., and is furnished at rates low enough for any man, being only $2 per annum. Brown & Allen 189 Broadway, New York.

The Colored Vote.

Virginia, the two Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana have an aggregate white population of 3,681,553; colored, 3,241,057. If we allow one voter to every six of population these eight States will poll 613,592 white, and 540,176 colored votes, making a total of 1,153,768; and 75,000 white votes going with the colored vote would be a majority.—Sacramento Union.

Dr. Livingstone Found.

So much has been said and written concerning Livingstone, the African explorer, and so many contradictory reports concerning him have been circulated that readers have grown incredulous regarding the correctness of any reports touching his fate or whereabouts. At last the mystery has been solved, and that by the enterprise of the greatest journal of America. In 1871, The New York Herald proprietor, from his private purse, fitted out an expedition with a view of finding the daring explorer if alive, or ascertaining the place and manner of his death. Telegrams to The Herald from Bombay announce that Livingstone has been found in the interior of Africa, and was at Zanzibar with The Herald expedition.

"To worry other women," was the diabolical but truthful reply.

—A naughty little boy blubbering because his mother wouldn't let him go down to the river on the Sabbath, upon being admonished, said: "I don't want to go swimming with 'em, ma. I only wanted to go see the little bad boys drown for going a swimming on Sunday."

—"Luke had it before; Paul had it behind; boys never have it; girls have it but once; and Mrs. Mulligan has it twice in the same place." This is a queer kind of riddle; but then there is nothing strange about it. The answer s simply the letter "l."

—Some years ago there was such a tremendous freshet on the Illinois river that it was for a long time referred to as "the flood." During a lawsuit in Peoria an old man named Adam, living in a little hamlet on the river, known as Paradise, was obtained as a witness. "What is your name?" was the first question asked him. "Adam, sir," said he. "Your name is Adam, is it? Well, where do you live?" "In Paradise, sir." "Oh, your name is Adam and you live in Paradise, do you? Well how long have you lived there?" "Ever since the flood, sir," replied the simple old man, whose words were drowned in a roar of laughter, in which the court, jury, and spectators all joined.

The Centennial.

The Executive Committee of the Centennial Commission at Washington have prepared the draft of an act to be submitted to Congress, in which they have hit upon a practical scheme for managing and defraying the expenses of the great Exposition to come off at Philadelphia in 1876, the centennial anniversary of our Republic. A Centennial Board of Finance is to be created, which shall have authority to to secure subscriptions of capital stock to an amount not exceeding $10,000,000, to be divided into shares of $10 each. Books of subscription are to be opened in each State and Territory; all municipal or other corporate bodies and all citizens are free to subscribe to this stock, and to vote on each share held. The Board of Directors are to be chosen by the stockholders from one hundred of their number selected by the United States Centennial Commission; said Board, when organized, to take charge of all books and business transactions relating to the Exposition, and when it is over, to close its accounts and deliver the profits to the stockholders under the supervision of the Centennial Commission. This plan seems well calculated to make the Exposition a thoroughly national matter, and to combine motives of interest with those of patriotism to induce the people to urge it to a successful completion.

Colic in Babies.

Take of anise and fennel seed each one ounce, boil in two quarts of water; add one and a half pounds of white sugar. Boil down to one quart; strain through a linen cloth, and add one dessert spoonful of laudanum. Cork tight and keep in a cool place. Give a baby of one month a half teaspoonful of this syrup: a baby of three or five months may take from one to two teaspoonfuls. It will give almost instant relief from colicky pains—will not constipate, and contains much less opium than the "soothing syrups" sold in the stores, besides being much cheaper. A quart will be required to take your baby through its colicky season.

Newspaper Appreciation.

Every newspaper man knows how to appreciate the following paragraph from a brother professional:

If any editor omits anything he is lazy. If he speaks of things as they are, people are mad. If he glosses over—smooths down the rough points—he is bribed. If he calls things by their proper names he is unfit for the position of an editor. If he does not furnish his readers with jokes, he is a mullet. If he does, he is a rattlehead lacking stability. If he condemns the wrong, he is a good fellow, but lacks discretion If he lets wrongs and injuries go unmentioned, he is a coward. If he fails to uphold a public man, he does it to gratify spite—is the tool of cliques, or belongs to a "ring." If he indulges in personalities, he is a blackguard; if he does not, his paper is dull and insipid.

AN ACT

To Protect Agriculture and to Prevent the Trespassing of Animals upon Private Property in the County of Los Angeles and the County of San Diego, and parts of Monterey County.

The People of the State of California represented in Senate and Assembly do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Every owner or occupant of land, whether it is inclosed with a fence or is uninclosed, finding any horse, mare, jack, mule, jennet, goat, sheep, hog, or horned cattle thereon, doing or having done damage, may take up and keep such animal or animals, at the expense of the owner, for the space of ten days.

SEC 2. The expense of keeping an animal so taken up, must be computed as follows: First. If a horse, mare, jack, mule, or jennet, at the rate of twenty cents per day. Second. If a sheep or goat, at the rate of five cents per day, and if a hog, ten cents per day. Third. Cattle at the rate of twenty cents per day.

SEC. 3. If the owner of an animal so taken up is known, and resides in the township, they must be forthwith personally notified, but if at a great distance from said place of taking up, the notice of such detention and the reasons therefore, must be served by depositing the same, postage paid, in the nearest postoffice, directed to the owner or owners at the postoffice nearest to his or their residence. When the owner or owners are not known, written notices containing a description of the animals, their marks and brands, and stating the cause of detention, must immediately be posted conspicuously in three of the most conspicuous public places in the township, and a copy delivered to the Justice of the Peace of said township.

SEC. 4. At the expiration of ten days, if the animal has not been applied for, and sooner if it has, and the parties cannot agree on the amount of damages and compensation, by three disinterested persons selected by the parties aforesaid as arbitrators, are selected, the taker up, when the damages and compensation claimed shall be less than three hundred dollars, shall file a written complaint, verified by his oath, with a Justice of the Peace of the township, setting forth the facts, location and nature of the alleged damages, and stating the amount he claims against said animal or animals and that he has actually sustained the damages claimed.

SEC. 5. When the owner is known and is within the jurisdiction of the court, the action shall be against the owner, and the summons shall be served and returned as in other actions. When the owner is not known, the action shall be against the property; and every action thus commenced shall include all the animals thus found doing damage, whether of one or more marks or brands, and no judgment shall be entered up under the provisions of this Act by default or otherwise, as to the damages done, except upon the testimony of two creditable witnesses whose names shall be entered in the Justice's docket.

SEC. 6. When the action is against the property the summons shall be served by posting a copy of the same conspicuously on the outside of the door of the Justice's office, and three other places in the township, and shall be returnable in not less than ten days from such posting. The return of the officer certifying to such posting, or the affidavit of any person qualified to be a juror who did it, shall be evidence of a sufficient service thereof.

SEC. 7. If judgment be in favor of the plaintiff the property may be levied upon and sold as other personal property seized on execution. If the judgment be for the defendant the plaintiff shall pay such costs and damages as may be awarded by the court or jury.

SEC. 8. The officer selling shall give a bill of sale to the purchaser describing the animal or animals sold, the price paid therefor, and stating that it or they were sold under the authority of this Act. Any overplus of the proceeds of such sale, after satisfying the judgment, shall be paid by the Justice to the owner of the property upon demand, if demanded within three months from the date of sale, otherwise it shall, at the expiration of that time, be immediately paid into the county Treasury for the benefit of the County School Fund.

SEC. 9. Any owner or owners of any animal or animals seized under the provisions of this Act may at any time previous to the sale demand, and shall be entitled to the possession of such animal or animals, or if so many as he may claim, upon his making satisfactory proof of ownership, and paying his proportion of the fees, charges or damages; and after the sale may at any time within three months redeem said animal or animals by producing satisfactory proof of his right thereto, and paying the purchaser the amount of the purchase money with interest at the rate of three per cent. per month, together with compensation for the keeping of said animals at the rate of one dollar per week per head for the time the purchaser has had them in possession.

SEC. 10. The Justice of the Peace before whom any action is brought under the provisions of this Act shall keep a book, which shall be open to public inspection, and shall make a record therein of all sales made by his order under this Act, a description of the animal sold, the price paid, the name of the purchaser, amount of fees and charges and the amount of surplus money, if any, arising from such sale, and if such surplus money shall be received by the owner of any animal, he shall receipt for it on the margin opposite such record, and the Justice shall without fee, give the book over to his successor in office and also any surplus money in his hands arising from any sale made by authority of this Act, and the receipt of his successor shall be a legal discharge of the retiring Justice for all such sums paid.

SEC. 11. The fees of Justices and Constables for services under this Act shall be the same as allowed by the General Fee Bill for similar services in other civil actions in their respective counties.

SEC. 12. Nothing in this Act shall be so construed as to prohibit persons from driving stock through uncultivated lands not fenced, and who may be required to pass from one county to another, from watering said stock at natural watering places on said lands.

SEC 13. Any person who shall drive stock from lands other than his own, or to any lands or possessory claims, for the purpose of taking advantage of any provisions of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall upon conviction thereof be punished accordingly.

SEC. 14. The owner or occupant of lands, whether enclosed or not, upon which damage has been done by any of the animals referred to in Section 1 of this Act, may instead of pursuing the remedy given in this Act, have an action for damages in any court of competent jurisdiction against the owner of such animal.

SEC. 15. If the owner or occupant of land intends to institute proceedings under the preceding section, he must first within ten days after the damage was done, cause the same to be viewed, and estimated in writing, by two residents of the county competent to be witnessess on the trial of such action; second, such action shall be brought within one month after the damage was done.

SEC. 16. This Act applies only to the counties of Los Angeles and San Diego and all that portion of Monterey county lying north and east of the Salinas river, provided, however, that no damages shall be recovered in the county of San Diego for any alleged trespass upon lands subject to the provisions of this Act, unless it appear that the plaintiff has actually and in good faith entered upon his land, and has been prior to or at the time the action is brought, cultivating the same and has suffered or is likely to suffer injury from the tresspass committed.

SEC. 17. This Act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage in the counties of Los Angeles and Monterey, and only from and after the fifteenth day of May, A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy-two, in the county of San Diego.

Not Legal.

The San Francisco Examiner warns litigants of that city and county that it still holds the exclusive right to publishes all legal notices, notwithstanding the repeal of the Litigant Law Two District Judges, one of whom is Judge Rolfe, Eighteenth Judicial District, have decided that The Examiner holds a franchise under that law until the expiration of the term of its appointment, and that no franchise granted by one Legislature can be abrogated by a succeeding one, as long as its conditions have been fully complied with by the party to whom it was granted, or until it expires by limitation. Every "Litigant newspaper" in the State that has complied with the conditions of its contract, for the fulfillment of which each gave a bond in the sum of $5,000, holds a similar right under this law with The Examiner, the only difference being in the time when their respective contracts expire. The repeal of this law is a matter of the most perfect indifference to THE INDEPENDENT, and other papers similarly situated, but we except to the assumed right of any Legislature to abrogate any lawful contract made by a preceding one with any individual or corporation. If the State grants a toll road, railroad, printing or any other franchise for a term of years, it is legally and in honor buund to stand to its agreement, unless the other party violates the conditions. Under the ever changing and uncertain nature of the lawmaking power, if such is not the rule such agreements would not be worth the paper on which they are written, and if a printing contract can be withdrawn in this summary and illegal manner so can any other franchise or contract.

Evading the U. S. Currency Law.

We have our opinion of the practice that obtains among mine owners at Cerro Gordo of issuing "orders" instead of paying money to their workmen for services performed, which paper circulates about the Owens River country the same as bank notes with us, only that it is a great inconvenience to the people and an equal profit to the owners, who, of course make interest on the amount thus kept in circulation. It is a case worthy of the attention of the United States District Attorney for the State of California.—Visalia Delta.

We beg leave to differ with The Delta as to "great inconvenience to the people" resulting from the use of these orders, and if the United States District Attorney for the State of California thinks there is anything in it worthy of his attention, let him "pitch in" by all means.

The No-Fence Law.

We are indebted to Mr. D. B. Curtis for certified, manuscript copies of the Los Angeles, San Diego, Monterey and Inyo county no-fence laws, which we reproduce verbatim on the first page of this issue. We have given this Act in previous numbers, but republish it in full for the guidance and instruction of all interested parties, who will do well to preserve it for future reference. The composition or phraseology of these documents will not entitle them to a position as the finest in the English language, but that is a matter of secondary importance, so long as their intent can be clearly made out.

Could Not Be Lost.

We are in receipt of a letter from San Francisco which, among other things, says: "The people here feel rather sore about the imposition played upon them. The really supposed that the people of Inyo were all paupers, and unable to bury the dead." The superscription on this letter was sufficiently explicit to satisfy the requirements of the most exacting postal official, being:

"EDS. INYO INDEPENDENT,
INDEPENDENCE,
Earthquake Co.,
Cal."

Thanks.

We are muchly obligated to The Kern County Courier folks for a copy, just received, of their issue of December 31, 1870. Too thin. Don't try to get your Postmaster into unnecessary trouble, gentlemen; he has enough to answer for anyhow.

The Railroad.

The cars are now said to be running seven or eight miles south of Kings River, and the graders are busy at work west of town. By the last of next week they will probably be running to the Visalia station. * * * It now appears that the road may be extended this season as far as Tule River, but we do not believe it will go further.—Visalia Times, May 25.

ABOUT A PLANING MILL.

As wooden buildings will hereafter be the rule in this valley, it becomes a matter of some importance to devise some plan to reduce the cost of their construction. Mechanics' wages are now about as low as they are likely, or ought to be soon, but a very material saving in the cost of a building can be effected by having much of the carpenter work, such as dressing up siding, ceiling, etc., done by machinery. Assuming undressed lumber to be worth $55 per M, the whole cost when dressed up by hand ready to put in place, cannot be less than $95 per M, or at least $35 on each thousand feet more than it would be if the same work were done with a planing mill. Making no allowance for defective boards and loss thereby, the mill at this figure would then receive $30 profit on every thousand feet of inch lumber split and dressed for siding or ceiling, the kinds for which there will be the greatest demand. The saving to the builder on each thousand feet of dressed flooring and other inch lumber would not be less than $20 per thousand, so that the cost of an ordinary finished frame house would be reduced from the present rates from 20 to 40 per cent. At the same time the mill would be making a higher profit proportionately than almost any other on the coast; at least if properly managed it could not fail to prove a very profitable business.

Much of this class of lumber has been recently shipped from San Francisco and Los Angeles, costing, laid down here, about $108 per M. Though of the first quality originally, this lumber, when taken from the wagons here, is found to be split up and otherwise damaged, some of it so as to be unfit for use, adding still more to the cost. Independence and Lone Pine together have probably expended $10,000 in the past two months for this class of lumber, all of which would have been paid out at home had there been a planing mill (which might be built for half that sum), in operation at some convenient point in the valley. It is true, good, clear lumber in large quantities is somewhat difficult to obtain from these mountains, but it can be had nevertheless. Our clear lumber here is just as good as the imported article for most purposes, and with a mill can be dressed up ready for use for but little more than half the cost.

The demand for dressed lumber, one kind with another, would keep a small mill running up to its capacity the greater part of the time. With other suitable machinery attached, two or three practical mechanics could find profitable employment about such a mill the year through. There is plenty of water power to be had, if preferred to steam, at convenient points, and if some practical men will take hold of it, there is no doubt but it will prove a profitable enterprise for themselves as well as to the country at large.

PUBLIC MEETING AT LONE PINE.

[From The Visalia Delta, May 23.]

The people of Lone Pine held a public meeting in that town on the 11th instant, at which they endorsed Colonel Whipple and the Relief Committee, and smoothed the ex Secretary's back the wrong way, by the adoption of the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, at a meeting of citizens of the town of Lone Pine, held on the morning of the 27th day of March, A. D. 1872, it was the unanimous wish of the people that Col. Charles Whipple be requested to proceed to Visalia, San Francisco and other cities of California, to solicit aid for the sufferers by the terrible earthquake:

And Whereas, Col. Whipple has faithfully and promptly performed the duties assigned him under that request in the most honorable and straightforward manner; therefore,

Resolved, That this meeting does fully endorse each and all of his acts in the premises, and that the people of Lone Pine and vicinity who know him best, and know what he has done to aid us in our dire necessity, stand ready to defend him against the false and slanderous charges that have been preferred against him by persons who are either entirely ignorant of the facts of the case, or devoid of the common principles of humanity and justice.

Resolved, That we fully endorse the action of the Relief Committtee of Lone Pine, up to the present time, and tender them our thanks for the efficient and humane manner in which they have performed the arduous and unenviable duties of their several offices.

Resolved, That the action of the former Secretary of the Relief Committee, Robt. Goldman by name, in misrepresenting facts, and attempting to injure the Committee and merchants of Lone Pine abroad, merits our severe censure, and we hereby brand his statements, made in The San Francisco Chronicle of the 4th instant, as willful and malicious falsehoods.

Resolved, That we hereby tender our sincere thanks to the generous people of Cerro Gordo, Swansea, Visalia, San Francisco and Los Angeles, for their timely and liberal contributions to us in our hour of need.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be published in The Visalia Delta, Los Angeles News and San Francisco Bulletin.

F. H BURROUGHS, President.
JOHN ALEXANDER, Secretary.

From the foregoing it will be seen there is no longer any room to doubt the eminent correctness of the proceedings of the Relief Committee. Its all right now, since its own Chairman, as President of this meeting, endorses it This is the first time we have ever heard of any "slanderous" charges being preferred against Col. Whipple, or any doubt implied that he didn't do exactly as set forth in the second "whereas" and first resolution. But, it seems he either done too much or too little to fully satisfy the requirements of everybody, or there would have been no occasion for the indignation meeting, which denounced in terms far more forcible than polite the intention to use the surplus cash in building a school house. The "indignants" claimed that that was an improper use to make of money donated exclusively for charitable purposes, while, on the other hand, the Committee claimed that they had made, and should continue to make, all necessary provisions for the comfort of the really needy and still have ten or twelve hundred dollars left with which to build a needed school house. They finally decided to use the surplus for this purpose, hence the row. There is not the least doubt but this Committee have had an "unenviable" duty to perform from the first, and that they undertook an impossible task if they expected to please everybody under such circumstances. If they are right in this last act, and we think they are, it sustains our position from the first, viz that the real amount of destitution and distress, even in Lone Pine, never justified such extraordinary efforts, endorsed in the above resolutions, to obtain the wherewith to alleviate. This surplus fund on hand proves that any second endorsement by the same parties of their agent's zeal and thoroughness in the duties assigned him was a work of superogation entirely. No one ever found fault with him on that score.

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS.

The Brooks Republicans of Arkansas met in State Convention at Little Rock on the 22d ultimo, with a large attendance. It was about equally divided with whites and blacks. In caucus it was decided to declare for Greeley and Brown, and to place in the field a full State ticket.

A Washington special gives a letter from a prominent Republican in Arkansas to Senator Sumner, stating that there is a report there that the Senator has announced his intention to support Greeley, and asks only a reply as to the truth of the report. Sumner replies: "I await the action of the Philadelphia Convention, hoping for a nomination that will unite the Republican party, which Grant cannot."

The Michigan Democratic State Central Committee took a vote on the proposition to endorse Greeley at the Baltimore Convention. It resulted: Greeley, 10; anti-Greeley, 2; non-committal, 4.

The steamer has taken nine steam threshing machines and forty headers to the west side of San Joaquin this season. Cavanaugh was arrested and held to await the result of Kehoe's injuries.

Juan Davis, who set a spring gun for Chinese chicken thieves and caught the charge himself, has since died of his wounds.

LETTER FROM ROUND VALLEY.

[Correspondence Inyo Independent.]

MESSRS. EDITORS:—I notice your "query" seeking information respecting our Round Valley big earthquakes This locality has experienced several heavy shocks since the big one of the 26th of March. A few stone buildings (no adobe structures here) are in ruins, but we have had no rattling old jolts lately.

THE HEAVIEST LOSER,

probably, in this valley is Mr. H. Evans, whose house is a total wreck, also his barn (stone walls) is in a dilapidated condition; but as a remuneration his wife presented him, one of the late shaky nights, with a fine healthy boy; also J. B. Scaggs' wife gave birth to a son, facts which have not appeared in THE INDEPENDENT, but are worthy of a place in its columns on account of the "cash value" of these young strangers Each mother (the fathers concurring, of course) claims her son to be worth half a million, or more; still I am not positive that the new comers have been assessed at that exact figure. I have seen the Assessor but asked him no questions, he being the interrogator. The general opinion here of the farmers (or rather "bloated land owners") is that Frank is the RIGHT MAN IN THE RIGHT PLACE.

No dilly dally with him, he talks "biz" at once, looks through a man, then tells him to deliver; not even old clocks, old watches, broken chairs nor old tinpots are exempt Bully boy!

Having but little time and less talent for scribbling, you will excuse me for not dilating on the gloomy, shaky subject of earthquakes, but when they come again, which will be about 250 years hence, I will endeavor to post you then concerning their doings in this valley.

EARTHQUAKE THEORIES.

However, being a season for theories, one and all, Piutes and everybody puzzle their brains in forming them. I also desire you to chronicle mine, which is precisely the same as the San Francisco lady's, a theory, I believe, you will pronounce entirely correct, although the Lone Piners may differ: "Heterogeneous parallaxes prismatically converging are not due to the silicious introductions of photospherical asteroids, but rather to parabolic stratification of igneous zygema," etc.

Having been a resident, most of the time, for over seven years of Round Valley, I feel inclined to give you a few brief facts pertaining to this as The San Francisco Examiner designated Owens River Valley. Round Valley is about three miles wide and seven or eight long, and consequently is only a small portion of the Owens River Valley. Although Round Valley is not quite as large as the great Willamette of Oregon or the Mississippi Valley, yet is quite an important, and the most beautiful spot of Inyo. Its first white settlers of 1864-5 6, with few exceptions, are here yet, and are determined, through winds and earthquakes, to "stay with it." And why not, considering the following resources and advantages: Rich soil, abundance of grass and water, plenty of firewood and timber in close proximity. Three very large creeks, one at each end and another running through the center of the valley, are streaming from the Sierras. The saw mill of the Rowan Brothers is about five miles north of the valley; Tim Lewis' is about seven or eight south and the Bishop Creek flouring mills six or seven southeast; the three mills forming a triangle.

"STERILE REGION,"

In the Spring of 1865 a few patches of ground were plowed, and wheat, oats, barley, corn, potatoes and vegetables were put in the ground. This was the first crop (with the exception of some vegetables in '64) that was raised in Round Valley. Everything done well that season, and please note this fact: We have raised good crops every season since, without a single failure (except the cabbage, confound the lice; give us a receipt for prevention or murder).

ANOTHER IMPORTANT ADVANTAGE

we have is the long, favorable season to put in our crops. Although last Winter was an unusually wet one, yet we commenced plowing, breaking sod, in January, and have continued to plow and put in small grain up to the present time, May 25. Corn has been planted here toward the latter part of June. Mr. D. Olds planted some on the 23d of that month, which yielded an excellent crop of good, sound corn. As in other countries some grain is sowed, especially on Bishop Creek, in the Fall. Such grain is already headed out, while some of us in Round Valley are yet sowing oats and barley. We can cut hay from the first of June to the first of October, a season long enough to satisfy the laziest Lazurus here or on Bishop. T.

Attempted Burglary.

On Wednesday night last some "cracksman" attempted to burglarize the residence of Joseph Harris, and came near getting the top of his head blown off for his pains. He first tred to open the back or kitchen door, but failing in this he tore a musquito bar from a window and crawled into one of the rooms. His noise awakened the inmates of the next apartment, and Joe started out of the front door to pass around and nip the intruder. But Mrs. Harris struck a light, to the great alarm of the robber, who immediately effected a rapid exit and slid, with a bullet flying after him. In view of this attempt and a recent successful robbery, we caution our citizens to pay close attention to their doors and windows, and be careful to always have a shot gun close at hand ready for immediate use. If properly applied, powder and lead work a beneficial effect on these gentry.

Not a Success.

We have duly chronicled the building of the ice-house, recorded at the proper time the fact of its being supplied with its store, and are now called upon to made a note of how hot that cool business has made its projectors. A customer came, but the ice had vanished—gone down the spout. In fact the concern was in splendid condition for immediate use as a powder house. With an eye to that little Lone Pine matter Gardner says it is a mark of Providential disapproval; and Col. Putney says it is undoubtedly a "specitation of Providences." We would indorse these latter sentiments but for the fact of our opposition to the principle.

No Mail.

Wednesday's northern stage brought no mails from anywhere, on account of a break the other side of Aurora. The trouble is probably on account of high water in the West Walker river, rendering the stream unfordable. On both sides of the ford extends a long toll road belonging to Henry Williams, of Sweetwater, who should either be required to build a bridge or else forfeit his charter and let Esmeralda county do it. We expect that some delinquent subscriber will one of these days remit by the northern route, and its disgusting to have the mails interrupted.

The Fourth.

The citizens of Bishop Creek are already preparing for a due observance of the coming Fourth of July. The arrangements comprise all the features usually pertaining to the occasion, and it would be a good idea for everybody to make calculations to go and participate in the general enthusiasm of sentiment, fun and enjoyment. And the American eagle will stretch his wings from St. Lawrence to the Colorado, from Maine to California, from Oregon to Florida and screech and screech and screech.
